EXCISE REVENUE.

THE HON'BLE MR. REYNOLDS moved that the Bill to consolidate the law relating to the excise revenue in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal be further considered in order to the settlement of the clauses of the Bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds said the second section provided for the coming into force of the Act on the date of its publication. It was desirable that this Bill should not come into operation until the Indian Opium Act should come into force. The Opium Act was to have taken effect from the 1st of April, but a subsequent Act had been passed deferring the operation of the Opium Act, and it was therefore necessary to amend section 2 of this Bill, which he proposed to do as follows :—

"It shall come into force from such date as the Lieutenant-Governor may direct by notification in the Calcutta Gazette."

The motion was agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds moved the substitution in Chapter II of the words "Presidency Magistrate" for "Magistrate of Police." The amendment, he said, was merely verbal, to bring the phraseology of the Bill into harmony with the Presidency Magistrates' Act.

The motion was agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds moved the substitution in section 7 of the word "inspector" for "constable," and the omission of the word "burkundazes." The latter amendment was necessary upon the general principle of using English words instead of vernacular.

The motion was agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds moved the substitution of the following words for the last six lines of section 21 :—

"and inspect at all times by day or by night, and may similarly authorize any excise officer to enter and inspect at all times by day all houses and shops in which licensed dealers may carry on the sale of spirituous or fermented liquors or intoxicating drugs."

Under the original Act XI of 1849, excise officers, as such, had full power to inspect licensed shops without any special authorization from the Collector. But as it was considered advisable to place some restriction upon this power of search, and not to give it except to such persons as might be qualified on account of their experience and discretion, it was therefore provided that the Collector might authorize by warrant any excise officer to exercise this power. It was not intended that the Collector should issue a separate warrant in each instance, but that he should confer a general power of search on such officers as were duly qualified. It was subsequently brought to notice that the wording of the section might be thought to require a separate warrant in every case: the section as proposed to be amended would provide for this.

The motion was agreed to.

The Hon'ble Nawab Meer Mahomed Ali said that under section 21 an officer duly authorized could enter the house of a licensed dealer at any time of the night or day. There was no provision for giving notice for the retirement of females who, according to the usage of the country, did not appear in public. Section 384 of the Criminal Procedure Code provided the procedure to be adopted in the case of the search of an apartment in the occupancy of a woman who, according to the customs of the country, did not appear in public.

According to that section, previous notice should be given to females to retire if they should happen to reside in the same house as a licensed dealer. He would therefore move that the following proviso be added to section 21 :—

"Provided that, if the house be one in which the female members of the licensed dealer reside, such officer shall not enter and inspect the same without a previous notice for the removal of the females."

The Hon'ble Baboo Isser Chunder Mitter said, as he read the section, it seemed to him that section 21 did not provide for search : it authorized only the inspection of a shop in which liquors were sold or manufactured ; there was no question of search in the section. The hon'ble member had omitted to look at another section under Chapter III, section 70, where authority was also given for the inspection of shops by day or by night. As far as search was concerned, the provisions in this Bill were sections 23 and 73, under Chapters II and III. There was a provision in section 24, to the effect that, whenever a zenana was entered, the procedure adopted by the High Court should be followed. But there was no such provision in section 73, and Baboo Isser Chunder Mitter would support the hon'ble member if he proposed to add his proviso to section 73 instead of to section 21. Sections 21 and 70 referred only to the inspection of shops, and he believed excise or police officers would have no authority to enter any other part of the house under those sections; and no dealer, it was to be supposed, would choose to keep the female members of his family in a shop where business was transacted.

The Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds said he hoped the hon'ble member would not press his amendment. The powers of entry and search had now been materially restricted by providing that they should only be exercised under a warrant from the Collector. We were not now engaged in settling the excise law, but we were merely consolidating the existing law; and in a consolidating Bill it appeared undesirable to make alterations which were not shown to be actually necessary. These provisions had been in force since 1849, and he was not aware that any complaints had been made of their operation. In cases of this kind, where the sale or manufacture of spirits was concerned, it appeared to him essential, in the interests of justice and the protection of the revenue, that an officer should be able to exercise powers of inspection without previous notice. If notice were given, even for a few minutes, all traces of illicit manufacture or sale might disappear and the revenue be defrauded.

The motion was then put and negatived.

On the motion of the Hon'ble Mr Reynolds a verbal amendment was made in section 24.

The Hon'ble Nawab Meer Mahomed Ali moved the addition to section 50 of the words "which sum, or any portion thereof, may be paid to the person aggrieved." He thought the aggrieved person should get something by way of compensation from the hands of the police or excise officer. A similar provision would be found in section 80 of the Bill.

The Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds said he was not quite sure that the words were necessary. Under the Presidency Magistrates' Act and the Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate who adjudicated a case was empowered to award as compensation any portion of the fine which was imposed. But the provision had been retained in the Opium Act, and there was also some doubt whether the provisions of the Presidency Magistrates' Act would apply to convictions under this Chapter before a Justice of the Peace. He had therefore no objection to the amendment.

The motion was then agreed to.

In section 31 an accidental omission was supplied on the motion of the Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds.

In section 33 the words "and in some conspicuous part of the place where the property was seized" were, on the motion of the Hon'ble Nawab Meer Mahomed Ali, inserted after the words "Calcutta Gazette."

In section 39 the word "constable" was substituted for "chuprassy," and "a Presidency Magistrate or other Magistrate having jurisdiction" for "a Magistrate of Police."

In section 70 the following words were, on the motion of the Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds, substituted for the first fifteen words, with the object of making the section accord with section 21 as it had been amended :—

"Any excise officer above the rank of a peon, if authorized in that behalf by a warrant under the hand of the Collector, may enter and inspect at all times, by day or night, and any excise officer similarly authorized may enter and inspect at all times by day."

A verbal amendment was made in section 71.

Section 80 provided a penalty of Rs. 500 for a vexatious search or seizure.

The Hon'ble Nawab Meer Mahomed Ali said he thought a mere fine would not be an adequate punishment for an officer who might, at the instigation of some other person, oppress a man with whom such person had enmity. He had known many instances in which police and excise officers did not hesitate to exercise oppression for the sake of illegal gratification. In such cases, unless these officers had before them some bodily fear, they would not be restrained by a mere fine, which might be met by the person at whose instigation the offence was committed. He therefore moved the insertion of the words "imprisonment in the criminal jail for a period not exceeding six months and to" after the word "to" in line 12 of the section.

The Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds said he thought the penalty provided by the section was quite sufficient. It would be observed that an excise officer, if convicted for vexatious search or seizure, would be liable to a fine of Rs. 500. He was aware that the fine was a maximum and not a minimum one. If the fine was not paid, the officer convicted would be liable to imprisonment for six months. The section referred to officers in the service of Government, which had a hold upon them beyond the penalty here provided, inasmuch as the officers so convicted would be liable to loss of place and pension. Under these circumstances Mr. Reynolds did not think that the penalty here provided was inadequate.

The Hon'ble Baboo Kristodas Pal said that, if the provision of the Criminal Procedure Code, under which officers who made illegal arrests were liable to punishment, applied to offences under this section, then, coupled with that provision, he thought this section provided a sufficient punishment. But if an offence committed under this section was not triable under the general provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, he considered that the punishment was not sufficient. If a police officer, for instance, arrested a person illegally under the Criminal Procedure Code, he would be liable to fine or imprisonment. But, as the section was worded, an excise officer illegally arresting a person was liable merely to fine; and, as observed by the hon'ble mover of the amendment, in the case supposed where a person, from vindictive feelings, might induce an excise officer to annoy a neighbour, the fine would practically be paid by that person. The hon'ble member remarked that the power of arrest was converted sometimes into an instrument for gratifying personal feelings. He was not prepared to say how far that was true, but it was not unlikely that the power might be so made use of. If the Council were of opinion that the general provisions of the criminal law would be applicable to such cases, then he would not support the motion; otherwise he would support it.

The Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds observed that he understood that an excise officer offending under this section would be liable to be convicted either under it, or under the general provisions of the criminal law; though of course he could not be convicted under both.

The motion was then negatived.

The Hon'ble Baboo Ramshunker Sen moved that section 89, which provided a penalty for contempts before the Collector, be transposed so as to stand after section 119. In the position in which the section now stood, the provision would only be applicable to contempts committed before Collectors in the mofussil; he thought a provision similar to section 38 of Act XI of 1849 should be inserted to provide for contempts committed in Calcutta.

The Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds having observed that the matter pointed out was apparently an omission—

The motion was agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds said that section 102 provided the rate of duty to be paid on imported spirits. The rate of four rupees per gallon was inserted because that happened to be the rate under the present Tariff Act. But it was necessary to provide for the contingency of the rate fixed by the Tariff Act being altered. He would therefore move that, for the words "the rate of four rupees the imperial gallon of the strength of London-proof, and the duty shall be rateably increased as the strength exceeds London-proof," the following words be substituted:—

"a rate not exceeding the rate fixed for imported spirit by the Indian Tariff Act, 1875, or any similar law for the time being in force."

The motion was agreed to.

On the motion of the Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds, an omission was supplied by the insertion of the words "subject to the confirmation of the Governor-General in Council" after the word "Government" in line 7 of section 117.

On the motion of the Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds a verbal amendment was made in section 119.

The Hon'ble Nawab Meer Mahomed Ali said that section 123 provided for the grant of rewards "either before or after" the adjudication of a case. He did not understand how an informer could get an award "before" the adjudication of a case, or, in other words, before the information which was given was proved to be correct. If the reward was given, and the information turned out to be false, would the reward which had been given be taken back? He would move the omission of the words "either before or."

The HON'BLE MR. REYNOLDS observed that he could not accept the amendment. It had been strongly represented by the Board of Revenue that it was essential to the proper working of the law that the Board should have a discretion to grant rewards to informers before the adjudication of a case. He would therefore ask the hon'ble member not to press the amendment.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said that it was quite possible that it might in some cases be necessary to give rewards before a formal adjudication had been completed; for instance a case of this sort might occur: A traveller on the Grand Trunk Road, possibly proceeding on a pilgrimage which rendered delay impossible, might observe a large quantity of opium in the possession of other travellers, and he might give information to the nearest Magistrate which might lead to the seizure of the opium. In a case of that sort HIS HONOR thought it undesirable that there should be anything in the law which would make the informer suffer detention or loss of time before he could obtain the reward; the reward should be given at once and the informer allowed to depart.

The motion was, by leave, withdrawn.

On the motion of the HON'BLE MR. REYNOLDS, amendments were made in the second clause of the first schedule, which were rendered necessary by the amendment made in section 102.

The HON'BLE MR. REYNOLDS then moved that the Bill as amended be passed. He said that, according to the rules for the conduct of business, a Bill could not be passed at the same sitting at which any material amendment had been made. If hon'ble members considered that any of the amendments which had been made were material, he did not wish to press the motion. But he thought they would agree with him that the amendments which had been passed were simply verbal, and of an immaterial nature, and not such as would interfere with the Bill being passed at once.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said he thought the amendments which had been carried were of a very formal character, so much so, that he considered many of them ought to have been thought of by the Select Committee and provided for by them instead of being considered in Council. It appeared to him that there was a great tendency in this Council to leave work to be done in Council instead of its being considered and disposed of in Select Committee.

The motion was then agreed to and the Bill passed.

COURT OF WARDS.

THE HON'BLE MR. SCHALCH moved that the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Court of Wards Act, 1870, be taken into consideration in order to the settlement of the clauses of the Bill, and that the clauses of the Bill be considered for settlement in the form recommended by the Select Committee.

The motion was agreed to.

The HON'BLE NAWAB MEER MAHOMED ALI withdrew the motion of which notice had been given, that the words "and such order shall be final and conclusive for all the purposes of this Act" in line 16 of section 26 be omitted.

On the motion of the HON'BLE BABOO ISSER CHUNDER MITTER the word "appoint" was substituted for "nominate" in line 6 of section 45.

The HON'BLE BABOO ISSER CHUNDER MITTER moved the insertion of the words "and every officer employed as hereinafter provided" after the words "under this Act" in line 7 of section 46. He said that sometimes tehsildars and other collecting agents made away with the accounts, and it was very difficult to bring them to justice. It often happened that, before a settlement of liabilities was made, the year within which a suit could be brought expired, and the estate became a positive loser. His object in moving this amendment was that tehsildars and other agents should be held to be public accountants under Act XII of 1850, in the same way as managers and sub-managers as were now held to be. In that case the Collector would have authority to realize funds in their hands under the certificate procedure of Bengal Act VII of 1868. Another object of the amendment was that the period within which the realization could be effected might be extended. At present much money was lost merely because the liability of these collecting agents was limited virtually to one year.

The motion was agreed to.

The Hon'ble Baboo Isser Chunder Mitter postponed the amendment in section 50 which stood in his name until after the consideration of the amendments in section 53 which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Baboo Kristodas Pal.

The Hon'ble Baboo Kristodas Pal moved the substitution of the word "five" for "ten" in line 16 of section 50. He said the history of this proposal was this. When the original Bill was referred to the Select Committee, it was considered that some limitation ought to be put on the power of the Court of Wards to expend money on improvements. Facts came to the notice of some members of the Committee that money had in some instances been wasted in the name of improvement. It was therefore deemed desirable to limit the power of the Court of Wards to expend money on improvements, and the limit the Committee proposed was five per cent. on the net profits of the estate. When the Bill was recommitted, the question was again discussed, and the majority were of opinion that the percentage should be increased to ten per cent., and that greater latitude should be given to the Court of Wards in expending money for improvements. To the second part of the new provision he did not object. As the Bill originally stood, the power of the Court was greatly circumscribed. The wording of the original section was as follows:—

"Provided that the amount so expended shall not exceed five per centum of the said surplus, unless in the opinion of the Court, subject to the express sanction of the Board and the Lieutenant-Governor, it is absolutely necessary, for the protection of the estate, to expend an amount exceeding such percentage."

So that unless the Board and the Lieutenant-Governor were satisfied that it was absolutely necessary for the protection of the estate, for instance in the case of a famine, flood, or some such extraordinary calamity, when it might be deemed necessary to expend more than five per cent. for the protection of the estate, the Court was not authorized to exceed the five per cent. limit. But as the section now stood, it greatly extended the powers of the Court. It provided—

"Provided that the amount so expended shall not exceed ten per centum of the said surplus, unless in the opinion of the Court, subject to the express sanction of the Board and the Lieutenant-Governor, it is desirable, for the protection and in the interest of the estate, to expend an amount exceeding such percentage."

By comparing the words of the two sections, it would be seen that the discretion of the Court of Wards had been materially and widely extended. Such being the case, he did not see that there was any good reason for raising the limit from five to ten per cent. in ordinary cases. In extraordinary cases, in which the Board and the Lieutenant-Governor might think it desirable to spend the surplus on schemes of substantial improvement, it would be in the power of the Court of Wards to obtain the necessary sanction; but ordinarily he thought that an expenditure of five per cent. of the profits should be sufficient for ordinary improvement. As the phrase now went, there was an "oscillation" of opinion in Select Committee on the subject, and he being in the majority, had felt it his duty to move this amendment in Council. He had heard nothing which satisfied him that the limit of five per cent. would not be sufficient for ordinary purposes. He found that the Government had fixed a limit of three per cent. only for the improvement of Government estates, or estates which were under the khas management of Government. Now, if a three per cent. improvement fund was deemed by the Government to be sufficient for ordinary improvements in Government estates, surely five per cent. ought not to be considered insufficient for purposes of ordinary improvements in private estates which came under the management of the Court of Wards. It was worthy of note that the three per cent. fund in Government estates was applicable in this wise—half of the three per cent. was applicable to the improvement of roads, one-third to primary education, and one-sixth to miscellaneous local improvements. Every ward's estate paid the road cess, and so far as the road cess was regarded as an outlay for the benefit of the estate, that object was met by the payment of the road cess. As regards contributions to schools, it was not intended that such contributions should be made from the ten per cent. fund proposed in the Bill. It was proposed solely for material improvements. For the support of schools, contributions might be made from the general funds of the estate. It might be urged that in the cases of Government and private estates there was one point of material difference, which was that the Government gave three per cent. on the gross receipts of Government estates, whereas it was proposed in the Bill to allow ten per cent. on the net receipts, which certainly was a point of difference. But he submitted that the difference was rather visionary than real; for the revenue the Government received in khas estates constituted the whole of the assets minus charges of collection, whereas the assets of the ward's estate consisted in the residue left after payment of the Government revenue or rent to the superior landlord minus the cost of collection. So, practically, the assessment for the improvement fund was made upon the net receipts of estates of both classes.

Further, it was observable that large works of improvement, such as embankments or extensive drainage works, might be constructed without recourse to the ten per cent. fund. He found that under section 4, clause 1, "the Collector may cause any embankment which connects public embankments or forms by junction with them part of a line of embankments, or any embankment or water-course which is necessary for the protection or drainage of the neighbouring country, to be taken charge of and maintained by officers of Government," so that new as well as old works might be maintained at the expense of private estates when the works were not legitimately chargeable to Government. That being the case, if it was necessary to construct some gigantic work for the protection of the estate, it would fall under the provisions of the Embankment Act, and the estate would be liable to bear the cost. There might, however, be small works, for the drainage or protection of the estate from floods, which were not contemplated by the Embankment Act, and for which it might be desirable to spend money from the Wards' Estates Fund. For such works it was certainly necessary to provide funds, and he thought that ordinarily five per cent. of the surplus ought to be sufficient: in extraordinary cases, as he had observed, the Bill gave ample discretion to the Government to expend money exceeding that limit.

The laxity of the system which obtained at present in regard to the expenditure of money on improvements in wards' estates was, he thought, best illustrated in the case of the Durbhunga estate. He was reading some papers lately connected with the management of that estate, and he found from a Minute recorded by Sir George Campbell in 1871 that in that year the estate had a balance of Rs. 43,00,000. Sir George remarked that, after providing for all expenditure and for all legitimate works of improvement, the estate might be expected to save about Rs. 10,00,000 a year, and that at the end of the minority of the Raja there would be a probable balance of a million of money. But how did the facts stand now? We were now in the beginning of 1877. He found in the last number of the Calcutta Gazette that, so far from a million of money accruing by this time, the balance, which stood in 1871 at Rs. 43,00,000, had dwindled down to Rs. 18,00,000. Now what were the resources of this estate? He found that the current demand of the estate annually amounted to Rs. 21,20,000; that the expenses of management came to Rs. 2,74,000, and the disbursements on all accounts last year amounted to Rs. 24,98,000, though the collections did not exceed Rs. 16,38,000. He was well aware that the famine of 1873-74 made a deep hole in the balance sheet of this estate; that it entailed a large expenditure of money upon works of utility for the maintenance of the ryots; that it led to large remissions of rent, and also to charitable relief on a large scale. But making every allowance for this large extra expenditure, he could not persuade himself to believe that in the system on which the estate had been managed, due regard had been paid to the fiduciary nature of the charge devolving upon the Court of Wards. When Sir George Campbell remarked that ordinarily, after making every provision for the maintenance of the estate and necessary improvements, there would be left a balance of Rs. 10,00,000 a year, it should be remembered that he allowed nearly Rs. 10,00,000 annually for expenses of management and improvements. The expenses of management last year amounted to Rs. 2,74,000, and for the maintenance of the ward, improvements, and other legitimate charges there was left, according to Sir George Campbell's calculations, a balance of more than Rs. 8,00,000. But we found that the greater part of the old balance had disappeared and no new balance had accrued; the whole balance, after the management by the Court of Wards for so many years of the princely resources of the estate, amounted to Rs. 18,00,000. In the resolution from which BABOO KRISTODAS PAL had quoted the above figures, His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor had been pleased to remark as follows:—

"In the Durbhunga estate remissions of rent have been unavoidable, but the expenditure in the estate was larger than seems to have been warranted, especially upon public works; and the expenses of management bear a very high proportion to the amount of the current demand of rent due to the estate. Upon the whole, the Lieutenant-Governor, in reviewing the administration of these large estates during the year, while he fully admits the zeal and trouble that have been devoted by the Revenue authorities to improving the estates and benefiting the condition of the tenantry, cannot resist the impression that the facts disclosed in the Board's report evince the necessity of a much more careful control over expenditure, and, in some cases, of greater vigilance in the realization of old arrears of rent."

BABOO KRISTODAS PAL fully subscribed to that opinion, and he thought that sufficient reasons existed why this Council should limit the powers of the Court of Wards for the expenditure of money on improvements.

He was indebted to the courtesy of the hon'ble mover of the Bill for a copy of the report of the Board of Revenue on the management of wards' and attached estates in 1874-75, in which a history of all the estates under the management of the Court of Wards had been given in full detail. He found from this report that the normal condition of the estates was indebtedness; but, thanks to the management of the Court of Wards and the supervision of the Board of Revenue, the debts had been in most cases liquidated, and that, when an estate had been restored to its owner at the end of his minority, it had generally been restored in a prosperous condition. All this he gratefully acknowledged, and he thought the landed proprietary in Bengal were indebted to the Government for the protection and benefit which they derived under the management of the Court of Wards generally. But the principles upon which the management of estates had hitherto been carried on had lately been departed from, and considerable abuse had consequently ensued, and that was the reason which induced him to ask the Council to put some limit on the power of the Court of Wards to spend money on improvements. About four years ago, he believed, a distinguished predecessor of His Honor the President had actually recommended that model farms should be established and maintained at the expense of wards' estates, and he believed some farms were established under his orders, which ultimately proved to be huge failures. Now, when these farms were established, they were doubtless established under the impression that they would prove beneficial to the estate, inasmuch as the tenantry of the estate would learn improved systems of cultivation and improved methods of rearing cattle. But the experiment failed, and the loss had to be borne by the ward's estate. Now it was unlikely that, with the best of motives, works of so-called improvement might be undertaken, which after all might prove in the end to be wild speculations. How many works had not been launched by the State at different times with the best prospects of success, but which ultimately proved to be serious burdens, and for the continuance of which the Government had been driven to the necessity of raising fresh taxation? What was true of the State was equally true of the ward's estate, and the result of experimental improvements with other people's money would be a heavy loss to the innocent proprietor, who would not have even for his consolation the pleasure of spending his own money for the gratification of his own wishes.

All things considered, BABOO KRISTODAS PAL thought the Council could not be too cautious in authorizing the Court of Wards to spend money on improvements. Improvements should certainly be made where they were absolutely necessary, but within proper and reasonable bounds; and if the Government was satisfied with a three per cent. improvement fund in their own estates, he did not see why five per cent. should not be sufficient for wards' estates.

In all extraordinary cases, as he had already remarked, the Government and the Court of Wards would have ample discretion for the construction of well-assured projects of improvement.

It would be seen from the resolution of the Government of Bengal that, after paying the Government revenue, and also the rent payable to the superior landlord, the receipts of the estate did not amount to more than Rs. 18,000 per annum. The cost of management last year came to about Rs. 2,781; the sum of Rs. 500 was allowed for the education of the ward's adopted son, and Rs. 1,000 for the maintenance of her mother-in-law, leaving a surplus of Rs. 13,719. Out of this sum, the widow, who had a life interest in the estate, was given an allowance of Rs. 2,129 per annum, or Rs. 177 per mensem.

But this was not all. It would be seen that while the widow had been deprived of her life interest, and had been made to be content with an allowance of Rs. 177 only, there was a balance of not more than Rs. 4,700 in favour of the estate in hand. After three years' management the surplus amounted to Rs. 11,500 per annum, and the whole of that sum had been spent doubtless for the benefit of the estate, though the accounts given in the resolution were not quite clear, but certainly to the deprivation of the just right of the legal heir. But let that pass. What appeared to be most amazing was that, while the widow had a life interest in the estate, and there were large balances available, her applications for extra religious expenses and doctor's fees were not allowed. She was told that the "expense must be met from the fixed budget allowance." He submitted that in matters of this kind the Court of Wards should not be allowed any discretion. Law and justice required that what belonged to the widow in right, ought to be made over to her in fact.

Lastly, it was urged in Select Committee that it was not the function of the Legislature to legislate for a matter of that kind; that it was not quite germaine to the Bill. Now, if it was the object of this Bill to lay down instructions and directions for the guidance and control of the Court of Wards, surely it would not be foreign to its purpose to declare that the Court should give effect to the wishes of a testator when an estate so bequeathed would come under its management. Indeed, if it was considered necessary and reasonable that instructions should be given to the Court as to how to apply the funds of the estate, how to meet liabilities, how to expend the surplus, and so forth, it was quite within the scope of legislation that instructions should likewise be given to it to make over to the widow of the testator the profits of the estate which, under the will of her husband, she had a right to receive. He therefore moved that the words, notice of which he had given, be incorporated with Section 53.

The Hon'ble Mr. Bell said, with great respect to his hon'ble friend, he thought the greater part of the remarks which had just been made was beside the question. The point at issue was not one of principle, but of detail. The question before the Council was not whether the Court of Wards was to have unlimited and unrestricted power to expend money as they thought proper, but whether they were to be permitted to spend five or ten per cent. of the profits of the estate upon works of improvement. That was the simple question before the Council. When the Bill was first before the Select Committee, his hon'ble friend had brought under their notice what he considered to be the extravagant expenditure in the Durbhunga estate. With the facts of that case the Committee were not, however, familiar; but Mr. Bell had no doubt there were very good reasons for whatever expenditure had taken place in that estate. We knew that there was a disastrous famine, and we were told that irrigation works had been constructed, and that it was expected that these works would in time yield a return of some ten per cent. upon the outlay. It of course was possible that these expectations might prove delusive, but these were questions which it seemed quite unnecessary to enter into on the present occasion. The Select Committee were of opinion that it was not desirable that the Court of Wards should have what they had at present—the unrestricted power of spending upon improvements the surplus proceeds of an estate. The hon'ble member admitted that the power which the Court of Wards possessed had as a rule been used with scrupulous exactness in the interests of their wards; but while the Select Committee were of opinion that the Court of Wards had been most faithful in the discharge of their duties, they did not think it right that any person, or any body of persons, who were mere trustees and not the owners of the property, should exercise this unlimited and unrestricted power, and it was with that view that the power of expenditure on improvements was limited to five per cent. on the net profits of the estate. But in fixing that proportion the Select Committee had at the time no particular information before it. It was stated that the Government allowed three per cent. for improvements on their own estates, and MR. BELL individually thought that, if the Government allowed three per cent., it would be reasonable to allow the Court of Wards to expend five per cent. for similar purposes; but it afterwards appeared that the three per cent. set aside for improvement in Government estates was calculated not upon the net profits, but upon the gross collections. And it appeared to him that three per cent. upon the gross collections would be almost equal to ten per cent. on the gross profits. He had also consulted several very distinguished and experienced revenue officers, and they were all of opinion that five per cent. was too little. At the next meeting of the Select Committee the matter was again discussed, and his hon'ble friend the Senior Member of the Board of Revenue, whose vast experience entitled his opinion to great weight, also thought that ten per cent. ought to be set aside for improvements. It was therefore on these considerations that the Committee altered the five per cent. to ten per cent.

Now, his hon'ble friend, Baboo Isser Chunder Mitter, had a motion on the paper authorizing the Court of Wards to contribute to the support and maintenance of schools and dispensaries which the late zemindar might have established. MR. BELL thought it very desirable that the Court of Wards should have the power of making contributions to institutions of this nature, and if his hon'ble friend's amendment was adopted, he thought that contributions of this description might fairly come out of the ten per cent. fund. The hon'ble member opposite (Baboo Kristodas Pal) had pointed out that three per cent. in Government estates was divided into three parts—for roads, primary education, and local improvements—and he had said that no money need now be expended upon roads, as roads were constructed and maintained out of the Road Cess Fund. But there were roads within estates which were made for the improvement of the property, and which were not of such general importance to the public as to be made a charge upon a general fund like the Road Cess Fund. He saw no reason why, if the Government expended money for the construction and maintenance of roads in Government estates, zemindars should not find it necessary to provide funds for a similar purpose. It seemed to him that ten per cent. was a very reasonable limit to allow for the improvement of wards' estates.

There were many objects of local improvement, such as roads, schools, and dispensaries, for which a liberal landlord ought to provide; and he certainly thought that the limit of ten per cent. was not an excessive limit to ask the Council to sanction for such expenditure. He hoped, therefore, the Council would reject his hon'ble friend's amendment.

The HON'BLE MR. SCHALCH said the hon'ble member had brought forward in support of his amendment the fact that in Government suits a limit of three per cent. was fixed for expenditure upon improvements in wards' estates. But the hon'ble member must recollect that that limit was not fixed by law, and it might be exceeded in regard to any particular estate. Here, however, the percentage would be fixed by law, and the amount could not be exceeded. He would not take up the time of the Council further, but he thought that a fixed limit of ten per cent. would not be sufficient, and that a discretion should be allowed to the Collector.

The HON'BLE BABOO ISSER CHUNDER MITTER said he had only a few observations to make. He was quite in favour of the proposition that money should be expended upon improvements, which he considered was better than hoarding it. But the question was, what was the percentage that should be expended on improvements? He believed the sense of the Council was clear that not more than was expended in Government estates should be spent on improvements in wards' estates. There was not information enough before the Council to enable it to decide whether ten per cent. on the net profits of a ward's estate would be equivalent to three per cent. on the gross collections in Government estates. It was necessary, however, that some limit should be placed upon the action of the Court of Wards, and that principle had been accepted by the Council; he would only ask whether, instead of a percentage on the net profits, the Council would not fix a percentage on the gross collections, as in the case of Government estates.

The HON'BLE BABOO KRISTODAS PAL said he had one remark to make in reply to what had fallen from his hon'ble friend Mr. Schalch. He observed that the case between a Government estate and a ward's estate did not stand on all fours, because the percentage in the case of Government estates was fixed by executive order of Government, whereas in respect of wards' estates the limit would be fixed by law. BABOO KRISTODAS PAL was fully aware of the distinction, but he would ask his hon'ble friend to remember that, if the limit had been absolute, the remark would have been just. But under the Bill, whenever the Board and the Government were satisfied that the limit should be exceeded upon good and valid reasons, it might be so exceeded, and any amount might be then spent. Such being the case, it would always be in the power of the Court of Wards to exceed the limit; and therefore the argument that the three per cent. limit of Government estates was liable to be varied by executive order of Government, whereas the ten per cent. limit of wards' estates could not be varied, did not, in BABOO KRISTODAS PAL's opinion, hold good.

The HON'BLE MR. BELL remarked that it was true the ten per cent. limit could be exceeded by the order of Government, but it could only be exceeded where it was necessary for the protection of the estate, or in other extraordinary cases, which was a very different thing from exceeding the limit for purposes of ordinary improvement.

The motion was then negatived.

THE HON'BLE BABOO KRISTODAS PAL said the next amendment he had to move in Section 53 was the insertion of the following words at the end of the section:—

"If the ward is a widow above the age of twenty-one years, entitled to the estate for her life only by virtue of the will of her deceased husband or otherwise, such surplus, after providing for the expenditure specified in the preceding section, shall, if no such debts as aforesaid be outstanding, be paid to such ward."

In reference to this clause also he had to repeat that there had been an oscillation of opinion in Select Committee. This clause had been inserted in the first amended Bill at his instance. But when the Bill was referred back to the Select Committee, the majority of the members were of opinion that the clause should be left out. His object in proposing this clause was that in some cases a testator left his property by will to his widow for her life, and because the female was deemed incompetent for the management of the estate, the Court of Wards took over the management and deprived her of the benefit accruing under the will by limiting her monthly allowance to some fixed sum, and carrying the profits to the credit of the estate. The object of the Court of Wards in a matter like this was certainly to benefit the estate. But he submitted that the first duty of the Court of Wards was to carry out the intentions or directions of the testator. If it were the will and desire of the testator that his widow should enjoy the full benefit of the surplus proceeds of the estate, he did not think, whether in law or in equity, that the Court of Wards were competent to defeat the object of the testator and deprive the widow of the full benefit of the profits of the estate. It might be said that the widow might waste the profits which might be derived from the good and economic management of the estate by the Court of Wards. Well, that might be so. The widow might not properly use the profits which might come to her; but were there not many other cases in everyday life in which such waste was committed by persons who came to the possession of large estates, and the courts could not ordinarily interfere with the action of persons who thus profligately wasted their property? Who could say that a ward who was a minor now under the Court might not, when he came of age, waste the estate which the Court of Wards, after considerable trouble and economy, had accumulated for the benefit of the ward? But in the cases to which his amendment would apply, the estate could not be wasted; it was only the profits, which were the widow's by the will of her husband, that she could waste if she were so minded: the estate remained in the hands of the Court of Wards. If a minor came of age, he might waste his estate and reduce himself to beggary; whereas a widow, even if she were a profligate character, could not waste the estate, but only the profits derived from the property. On the other hand, if she were a sister of charity, if she were a friend to the cause of humanity, if she were religious and benevolent, how much good might she not effect by a proper use of her money? For instance, who had not heard how the Maharanee Surnomoyee or Maharanee Surrutsoondree had been using the resources of their vast estates for the benefit of humanity and the improvement of the country; and who knew whether there might not be other widows who might not in the same way employ their means for the benefit of their neighbours or their countrymen?

Then he was answered in Select Committee that if, under the law, a widow had an absolute right to the profits which her husband had bequeathed to her under a will, she could assert her right in a court of justice. But he would ask, why should the legislature step in and sanction a course of action by the Court of Wards which tended to defeat a right which the widow possessed under the ordinary law of the land?

He thought it would be admitted that it did not behove a great and powerful Government like ours to drive helpless widows to litigation for the assertion of their lawful and just rights. Just consider the position of the widow with life interest in an estate under the Court of Wards. In the first place, the Court of Wards took over the management of the estate, and the widow was deprived of all resources to carry on litigation; in the second place, if she were to sue, she must sue through the Court of Wards, because she had become a ward; and thirdly, when the suit was decided, when her right was admitted, who, after all, had to pay the expenses of litigation? It was the estate, or, in other words, it was the widow; for during her life she was the legitimate owner of the profits of the estate. From whatever point of view the question was looked at, it would be seen that it would be but bare justice that the Court of Wards should give to the widow what legitimately belonged to her under the will of her husband. He did not say that they should in any way remove the hands of the Court of Wards from the management and improvement of the estate, because the widow had only a life interest in it. Let all legitimate expenses be deducted from the proceeds of the estate, and whatever balance was left, let it be made over to her who had the greatest claim to it.

A notable case occurred lately in Chittagong, and made some noise at the time. It was the well-known case of Nyantara. He found, from a resolution of the Government in 1874, that this Chittagong case came under the management of the Court of Wards in 1873. It appeared that, under a will executed by the husband of Nyantara, she was left the entire profits of the estate during her life. The Board of Revenue in their report wrote as follows:—

"On the death of the late Baboo Grish Chunder Rai, one of the richest zemindars in the district of Chittagong, his estate devolved by a will upon his wife, Srimati Nyantara. Shortly after her succession to the property, the Collector having learnt that the people about her were mismanaging the estate and taking advantage of her incompetency, deputed a Deputy Collector to inquire into the matter and report. The Deputy Collector reported her to be incompetent to manage her property; it was therefore first attached early in 1873, and was subsequently brought under the Court's management under Act IV (B.C.) of 1870. The ward is 27 years old."

The Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds said he hoped the Council would not accept this amendment, as its acceptance would be tantamount to an abdication by the Court of Wards of its proper duties and functions. The hon'ble member had cited the cases of certain ladies whom every one would admit to be ornaments to their sex and their country, and who had managed their estates with exceptional ability. Mr. Reynolds would be the last person to deny that many ladies had shown themselves excellent managers of property; but he must point out that the estates of such ladies would not come under the operation of this Bill. A woman, as such, was not disqualified for the management of her estate; she was only disqualified if she was found incompetent to manage her affairs, and there appeared to him to be some inconsistency in declaring a lady incompetent to manage her property, and then giving to her the disposal of the whole surplus proceeds of her estate.

The amendment of the hon'ble member applied to all widows without exception or qualification, so long as they possessed a life interest. But the widow might be a mere child, quite unfit to have the disposal of large sums of money. He was not putting a merely hypothetical case, but was referring to an instance which fell within his own experience as a Collector. It had become his duty on one occasion to take charge of an estate under circumstances to which the amendment of the hon'ble member would have exactly applied.

The proprietor was a widow of the mature age of eleven years; she had a life interest in the estate under her husband's will, and the income of the property was about Rs. 40,000 a year. In that part of the country the incidence of the Government revenue was very light, the estate was not encumbered with debt, and the expenses of management were not large. As far as he recollected, the surplus income was about Rs 2,000 a month. He thought it could not seriously be contended that such an income as this ought to have been handed over to this young lady, whose only notion of the value of money probably was that money was an useful medium of exchange for toys and sweetmeats.

But there was another consideration against the adoption of this amendment. The widow, whose property was under the management of the Court of Wards, would have a son, either natural or adopted, to whom the estate would descend on her death. But, under section 4 of the Bill, this son would also be a ward of the Court, and the Court was bound to administer the estate in his interest, as well as in that of the widow.

But if the amendment of the hon'ble member were carried, if the whole surplus might be spent, he would not say at the descretion, but at the caprice, of a weak and incompetent female, it might reasonably be expected that no improvements would be made; that no money would be invested; and that the estate would descend to the heir in an impaired and impoverished condition. That, he thought, was precisely the state of things which it was the duty of the Court of Wards to prevent. And he must confess to a feeling of some surprise at finding the hon'ble member at one moment so chary of the surplus, that he would not allow the Collector and the Commissioner to spend more than five per cent. of it, and the next moment so liberal with it, that he was prepared to hand the whole of it over to a person who would not be qualified to spend it wisely or well.

He appealed to the Council not to nullify the Bill by accepting this amendment. Let the widow have an adequate provision, let her even have an ample and liberal allowance; but in the interests of the estate, and of those who would inherit it after her, do not give her unrestricted power to deal as she pleased with the whole surplus income.

The Hon'ble Mr. Bell said, as a member of the Select Committee, he wished to make one or two observations on this amendment. The Committee to whom the Bill was first referred unanimously adopted the amendment now proposed. Of that Committee his hon'ble and learned friend the Advocate-General was a member. On the Bill being referred back to the Select Committee, his hon'ble friend opposite Baboo Kristodas Pal) and himself were the only two members of the former Committee who were present on the day when this question was again discussed, and the consequence was that they were outvoted on a proposition which had in the first instance been unanimously adopted.

It seemed to him that the question was one which did not admit of any argument whatever. Take the case of two brothers—one having an income of a lakh of rupees from land; the other an income of a lakh of rupees from Government paper. Both of them die, and both leave wills in favor of their widows. The one leaves his widow a life income of a lakh of rupees from land; the other an income of a lakh of rupees from Government paper. The property from which the income is produced being in the one case land, the Collector takes charge of it, on the ground that the widow is not competent to manage the property; the other lady, whose income is derived from Government paper, cannot be interfered with, unless the civil court pronounces her insane. But the object of the Court of Wards' Act was simply to protect the property of incompetent females, and not to deprive them of the income of the property to which they were entitled under their husbands' will. The Court of Wards' Act was originally passed in 1793, and the reason for taking charge of the estates of minors and incapacited persons was that the Government revenue might be paid, and the estate might be preserved in the family of the proprietors. But there was no reason why, because the Court of Wards took charge of an estate to see that the revenue was paid and that the estate was properly maintained, they should not pay the income to the person who was legitimately entitled to it. His hon'ble friend on the right (Mr. Reynolds) had instanced a case from Mymensingh, where a large property was left by will to a female minor and the Court took charge of the estate, and he asked whether the Court ought, under these circumstances, to pay the whole income of the estate to the minor. But the Court in that case would take charge of the estate, not because the proprietor was a female, but because she was a minor. But when a Hindoo lady was entitled to a particular income, she could not by law be deprived of that income, simply because the Court of Wards might consider that, owing to the particular circumstances of the property, she was not fit to be trusted with its management. MR. BELL did not base his contention on the instances put forward by his hon'ble friend the mover of the amendment. That case might be explained by the fact that the lady had adopted a son, and hon'ble members were aware that by Hindoo law the moment a widow adopted a son the estate passed into the hands of the son, and therefore it was possible that the lady in that case lost the estate owing to the adoption.

MR. BELL supported the motion, simply on the broad ground of justice. If an estate was left to a lady for life, she was entitled to the income from it, and he could not conceive how she could be deprived of it. But if it was regarded as a mere matter of expediency whether the yearly income should be paid to the widow, to be expended in those acts of charity and religious observance to which the Hindoo religion attached so great importance, or should be accumulated in the treasury of the Collector, to be squandered by the next heir, he for one would undoubtedly prefer to see the money paid to the widow. But it seemed to him to be not a question of expediency, but a matter of simple justice. The income was the widow's, and he submitted that she ought to have it, and he should therefore support the amendment.

The HON'BLE MR. SCHALCH said the addition which was proposed was approved by the Select Committee, but was afterwards omitted at a second meeting. It had not yet been proved whether their insertion was necessary or not, as it would be in the power of a widow to obtain the order of a court that she had a right to the whole of the profits, and she would then receive the whole amount. We therefore left that question to be settled by a law court, and did not think ourselves justified in making any provision in the Bill.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT thought that the discussion had somewhat wandered from the subject. A great deal had been said about the law and justice of the case, and it was argued that because the widow took under a will, therefore we were bound to pay over to her the whole of the profits. There was no single remark which had been made with reference to a widow which would not apply with equal justice and force to the case of any other minor. The estate of a widow did not come under the management of the Court of Wards because she was a female, but because she was an incompetent female; therefore, the ground for dealing with her was capability or otherwise of acting in the management of the estate. The Court of Wards could only interfere if the woman was incapable of managing her own affairs. Her case was no more affected by the form in which the property was left than in the case of estates of male minors. As the amendment now stood, he gathered that it would apply not only to persons who were disqualified, but to persons under age; therefore, the result would be, if the amendment were adopted in its present form, that even where the widow was a minor, it would be necessary to pay over to her the whole of the profits of the estate. He must say that he was not prepared to admit that that was a proper discharge by the Government of its position as trustee of wards' estates.

The HON'BLE BABOO KRISTODAS PAL observed that as long as the widow was a minor she could not receive the surplus profits, because, as a minor, the Court would administer the estate and carry the surplus to the credit of the estate. She could not obviously claim to spend the profits during nonage. But after she had attained her majority, though she might not be competent to manage the estate, she would certainly be competent to enjoy the profits. In the case put by his hon'ble friend Mr. Bell, the position of the two widows was identical: the one was left the income derived from landed property, and the other the interest of Government securities; and BABOO KRISTODAS PAL did not see why the widow, to whom were left the rents and profits of an estate, should be deprived of what was bequeathed to her by her husband's will, merely because she was considered incapable of managing the estate.

The Council then divided:—

Ayes 5.	Noes—5.
The Hon'ble Nawab Meer Mahomed Ali.	The Hon'ble Mr. Brown.
„ „ Baboo Kristodas Pal.	„ „ Baboo Ram Shunker Sen.
„ „ „ Isser Chunder Mitter.	„ „ Mr. Reynolds.
„ „ Mr. Ravenshaw.	„ „ „ Schalch.
„ „ „ Bell.	His Honor the President.

The numbers being equal, the President gave his casting vote with the Noes.

So the motion was negatived.

The Hon'ble Baboo Isser Chunder Mitter moved the addition to section 50 of the following words:—

"and, subject to the approval of the Board, in payment of such charitable and other allowances as were paid out of the proceeds of the estate before it came under the management of the Court, or such allowances or donations as the Court may authorize to be paid."

He said that, as a matter of fact, expenditure not provided for in sections 50 and 70 was actually incurred. There was no provision for the usual ceremonies and performances which were ordinarily observed in native society. In the Gobardanga estate the late proprietor had founded charitable dispensaries and schools, and they had continued to be maintained under the management of the Court of Wards. Then, in many cases Koolins married into Hindoo families and were oftentimes supported by the head of the family. Then there were charities which ought to be maintained. These charities were referred to in the last resolution in reference to the Court of Wards' estates. There was an instance lately of a marriage in the family of the religious preceptor of a minor, and it was the custom of the family to give presents on such occasions. Such expenditure as these was not provided for under the Act. Section 86 provided that the Collector was personally liable to be sued by a ward on attaining his majority for any acts done without authority. Now, if such expenditure, which was incurred as a matter of fact, was not legal, the Collector made himself responsible to be sued hereafter. The object of this amendment was to legalize such customary expenditure.

The Hon'ble Baboo Kristodas Pal enquired whether the amendment would include expenditure on account of charities connected with religion. In the Paikpara estate for instance these charities had existed for generations, and it was very desirable that they should be continued. He would also suggest that allowances for these purposes should be paid out of the ten per cent. fund. If legal sanction were given to expenditure for charitable purposes without any limit, he did not know to what extent the income might be diverted to such purposes. It was therefore of the utmost importance that there should be some limit to expenditure of this description, and he thought that the ten per cent. fund for improvements should also cover the allowances contemplated by the amendment of the hon'ble member. He would move the addition to the amendment of the following words:—

"and that such allowances and donations shall be paid out of the ten per cent. fund provided for in section 53."

The Hon'ble Mr. Bell objected to the allowances being paid out of the ten per cent. fund. The whole of the fund might be absorbed in these charitable allowances, and nothing would then be left for improvements.

The motion as amended was then put and negatived.

The Hon'ble Nawab Meer Mahomed Ali moved the omission from section 60 of the words from "provided also" down to "eligible," and the substitution for them of the following words:—

"and that none but a person of the Mahomedan religion shall, except in the case of a testamentary guardian, be appointed guardian of a Mahomedan ward."

"Provided also that none but a person of the Hindoo religion shall, except in the case of a testamentary guardian, be appointed guardian of a female Hindoo ward, preference being given to female relatives if any such be eligible."

He said that this section appeared to be in conflict with the doctrines of the Mahomedan religion. Under the Mahomedan law no one could be appointed the guardian of a ward except a person of the same religion. In this section it was only provided that the guardians of the female ward should be of the same religion as the ward, and we proposed to extend that principle to the case of male wards also. Hitherto he had never seen an instance of a guardian of any other religion having been appointed to a ward of the Mahomedan religion.

The motion was agreed to.

The Hon'ble Baboo Isser Chunder Mitter moved the omission from section 72 of the words "and for the default in payment of the revenue of which the ward's share may, under the provisions of Act XI of 1859, be liable to sale," and the substitution for them of the words "and which in the interest of the ward it may be deemed proper to acquire." The object of this amendment was to provide for the purchase of a co-sharer's property whenever it was considered desirable to do so in the interest of the ward.

The motion was agreed to.

The Hon'ble Nawab Meer Mahomed Ali said that, according to the general Limitation Act, twelve years were allowed for the institution of suits relating to immoveable property, and three years in the case of moveable property; whereas, under section 84, only one year had been allowed for the institution of claims to wards' estates. He thought that, instead of selling such an estate after the expiration of one year from the death of a ward, arrangements might be made for its management until the determination of the right to the property in dispute. He would therefore move the substitution of the following for section 84:—

"If no suit be instituted within one year after the death of the ward to determine the right to the property in dispute, and the Court of Wards do not think fit to continue the charge and the management of the property, the Court of Wards may apply to the District Judge to issue notices of claimants, and the District Judge, on receipt of such application, shall give the said claimants notice to appear before him, and shall decide summarily to whom the Court is to make over the property."

The Hon'ble Baboo Kristodas Pal said he did not agree in the propriety of making a provision of this kind. He thought that if a claimant had any right to the property, he should come forward and institute a suit. A summary procedure for the determination of such claims would not be advisable. The Court of Wards had power to make over the property to any claimant, subject to the sanction of the Board. A dissatisfied claimant had a right of appeal to the Board of Revenue; whereas, under the amendment, the claimant must be satisfied with the summary jurisdiction of the District Judge. As far as he was aware, the discretion left to the Court of Wards had not been abused. For his own part, he did think that the power to sell the property ought to be restricted. He thought that in no instance should the landed property be sold without the consent of the parties concerned. If the Court of Wards did not wish to keep the estate in charge, and desired to relieve itself of its management, it could, under the authority of the law, make over the property to any claimant it thought fit; but to sell the property because it might not be satisfied with the claim of the claimant was not, he thought, just. He should observe that this as well as other points suggested by the examination of the existing Act were not taken into consideration, because it was an instruction to the Select Committee that they should confine their attention to those points only which had been referred to them. He thought that those who had given their attention to the existing law would agree with Mr. Justice Markby, who remarked in one of his lectures on Indian Law that "one could not help being surprised at the want of precision in the language of this Act."

The Hon'ble Mr. Bell said that perhaps it would be more convenient that the consideration of this section should stand over. If the amendment was adopted, it would very seriously conflict with an Act passed last session, in which the Council provided for summary inquiry into cases of disputed succession. It seemed a startling provision that the Court of Wards should have power to sell an estate; but he believed the power had never been exercised.

The further consideration of the section and of the Bill was postponed.

PROVINCIAL PUBLIC WORKS CESS.

THE HON'BLE MR. REYNOLDS moved for leave to bring in a Bill to provide for the levy of a rate for the construction and maintenance of provincial public works in Bengal. He said the financial statement which was made in the Council of the Governor-General on the 15th March, and the debate which subsequently followed, would have prepared the Council for some such measure as he had the honor to bring forward to-day. The Government of India had determined to develop still further the system of provincial finance established in 1871, and to make over to the management of the local Governments several departments of revenue which had hitherto been under the control of the Government of India. This transfer, as far as it related to departments which came under the head of what was termed ordinary budget expenditure, would not in itself require any increased taxation. The Government of Bengal had accepted a reduction of Rs. 5,90,000 from the existing grant. But it was anticipated that this sum would be made up by greater economy of administration, and by the natural growth of some of the branches of revenue which had been transferred, more particularly the great departments of Excise and Stamps.

But concurrently with this, it had been determined to render the local Governments responsible for the cost and management of extraordinary public works—that was to say, such public works as railways and works of irrigation—which had been constructed with borrowed money and had not been paid for out of the revenues of the year. These works were the three great irrigation canals on the Soane, in Orissa, and at Midnapore, and the State railways of Port Canning, Nulhattee, Northern Bengal, and Tirhoot. These works were of the greatest provincial utility, but they were at present carried on a financial loss. The working expenses on the canals exceeded the revenue at present realized by about one and a half lakhs, without taking into consideration the charges for interest, and though the traffic receipts from the railways were considerably in excess of the working expenses, they fell very short of the charges for the working expenses and the interest together. It should be explained that the Government of India did not propose to render this Government responsible for any accumulated arrears of interest on account of past years. The Government of Bengal would take over the works as they stood, and would be responsible for the payment of simple interest on the capital outlay up to date, and for the provision necessary for future working expenses.

Calculated upon this basis according to the figures which had been furnished, and which might be subject to modifications, the charge for interest upon irrigation works amounted to Rs. 20,69,000, and the working expenses exceeded the receipts by about Rs. 1,50,000, making a total charge of Rs. 22,19,000 on account of canals. The charge for interest on account of State railways was Rs. 8,21,000, and the net earnings, or the amount of traffic receipts in excess of the working expenses, was Rs. 2,93,000, reducing the total charge to Rs. 5,28,000. Taking the two heads of irrigation and railways together, the sum for which the Government was responsible amounted to Rs. 27,47,000.

It must be evident to hon'ble members that it was not possible by any reduction of expenditure, or by any normal growth of the present resources of revenue, to provide for a liability of this amount, and that it was necessary to take special measures for raising additional revenue. It might be added that even the sum he had mentioned hardly represented the entire liability; for provision must be made for the completion and extension of these works which were still unfinished, and for such new works as might be necessary in Bengal. And, moreover, it would not be prudent for the Government to calculate its ways and means on a scale which would leave just an equilibrium between income and expenditure, and would barely avoid a deficit at the end of the year. It was necessary for the Government of Bengal to do something more than this, and to have a surplus and a reserve fund in hand. It had been laid down by the Government of India that it was necessary to introduce a system of provincial and local responsibility for the provision of local relief in the event of a famine. It was true that Bengal was happily less liable to the contingency of famine than other parts of India; but the two great calamities which had befallen these provinces within the last twelve years must have shown that the contingency of famine was one which we could not afford altogether to overlook. He believed hon'ble members were aware that in the famine of 1874 the Government of India, besides the direct expenditure which it incurred in the purchase and transport of grain, contributed about a hundred and eighty lakhs towards relief works in the distressed districts. Under the policy which had now been declared, we could not expect such assistance in future, and we should be called upon to meet local requirements from local resources. He thought he was within the mark when he said that it was necessary for the local Government to raise from Rs. 30,00,000 to Rs. 35,00,000 in excess of its present receipts, and this could be done only by additional taxation.

It was then to be considered how far, and by what means, it might be possible to do this. Perhaps it might be thought of little use first to show that taxation was inevitable, and then to consider how far it might be possible. But he believed he was justified in saying that the local Government would not have consented to accept this financial responsibility, if it had not been satisfied that the necessary funds could be raised without unduly adding to the burdens of the people. He did not know whether it had been sufficiently taken into consideration that the people of Bengal were perhaps at present the most lightly taxed people of any country in the civilized world. Almost the only tax which the masses of the people were called upon to pay was the salt tax. In one sense no doubt this was a high tax—that was to say, the amount of the tax bore a large proportion to the cost of production of the article taxed. But that it was not felt as a burden by the people was shown by the fact that the consumption in these provinces was fully sufficient for all the requirements of necessities and health. The consumption of salt in these provinces was about ten pounds per head of the population per annum, and it was doubtful whether the consumption would be much larger than this if salt was not taxed at all. The salt tax then, even as it stood at present, was no oppressive burden, and the Government of India had expressed their intention of reducing the tax as soon as it was possible to do so. Amongst the other customs duties, the only tax largely paid by the people of Bengal was the duty upon imported cotton goods, and he need not remind hon'ble members that it was the declared policy of the Government of India to remove this tax as soon as financial considerations would allow of its abolition. The revenue from excise yielded in these provinces a sum of about Rs. 62,00,000 among a population of sixty-two millions; it was a revenue to which no one need contribute unless he liked; and, on the whole, the sum amounted to one rupee per annum to every ten of the population. The revenue derived from stamps yielded about Rs. 90,00,000, the greater part of which was derived from court fees, which the people could to a great extent avoid if they pleased, and after all the stamp revenue was only about from two to two-and-a-half annas per head of the population. Direct taxation did not exist in Bengal. The present road cess could not be looked upon as a tax; it was assessed by the people, administered by the people; and expended by the people. It was nothing more than a scheme by which legislative recognition had been given to an arrangement for allowing the inhabitants of a district to expend a part of their surplus wealth in the improvement of their own property. The financial burdens of the country being so light as they were, he did not think any apprehension need be felt that there would be an excessive strain on our resources by raising such a sum as Rs. 30,00,000 or 35,00,000 from so great and opulent a province as Bengal.

The statement of the Financial Member of Council, while recognizing the necessity for additional taxation, indicated two main principles which the Government of India desired to see maintained in any measures which might be brought forward. The first of these principles was that recourse should be had to the extension and expansion of the present means of raising money rather than to new and unfamiliar forms of taxation; the second was that the cost of the works should, as far as possible, be recovered from the persons who primarily benefited by them. In the two measures which would be proposed to the Council to-day, it had been the object of the Government to recognize and maintain these two principles. The second of these principles had more relation to the Bill which stood in the notice paper in the name of his hon'ble colleague Mr. Ravenshaw. The Bill which he (MR. REYNOLDS) was now asking for leave to introduce was founded on a system which was already in force, and which was understood and appreciated by the people.

It was proposed to make the road cess valuations the basis of a new additional assessment, the proceeds of which would be devoted to the construction and maintenance of provincial public works. The rate of the cess would be fixed by the local Government from time to time for each district, but it would never exceed the rate of half an anna in the rupee, and half of it would be paid, as the road cess was at present paid, by the ryot, and the other half by the zemindar. The time and the manner of making payments would be the same as under the existing Road Cess Act. The proceeds would be paid into the public treasury, and would be devoted to the construction and maintenance of these works. It appeared to MR. REYNOLDS that some measure of this kind was better suited perhaps than any other which could be devised for meeting the necessity which we were now called upon to face. The incidence of this tax upon individuals would be light, because the tax would be distributed over a large area. Every one would know with certainty how much he would be required to pay, and there would be no inquisition into the profits or income of any one. And even if the tax was fixed at the highest rate which would be authorized by law, a ryot who paid a rental of Rs. 64 per annum would only be required to contribute one rupee towards this cess, and this was a sum which such a ryot might reasonably be expected to be able to afford without any difficulty or distress.

He did not propose to go into any further details at present. The Bill had been drafted and would be placed in the hands of members in a day or two; and if leave was now given to bring it in, he proposed to move on Saturday next that the Bill be read in Council and referred to a Select Committee.

The motion was agreed to.

RATE UPON IRRIGATED LANDS.

The HON'BLE MR. RAVENSHAW moved for leave to bring in a Bill to provide for the levy of a rate upon irrigated lands in the Lower Provinces of Bengal. He said that the hon'ble member to the right had given a fair and able exposition of the position of the Government at the present time, and it was perhaps unnecessary that he should add much.

Under the late decision of the Government of India to enforce provincial responsibility for the financial results of public works constructed at the public expense for local and provincial purposes, the sum due to the Government of India from the province of Bengal had been estimated at Rs. 27,47,000. Of this amount, Rs. 22,19,000 was due for canals and irrigation works as representing the net working expenses plus charges for interest. The gross revenue derived from water-rates and other direct returns had, under the existing system of voluntary leasing, been estimated at Rs. 4,25,000 only for the year 1877-78—a sum which did not cover working expenses.

We had three great canal schemes in more or less active prosecution. These canals commanded an irrigable area of 690,000 acres, and it was expected that with vigorous prosecution of the works the irrigable area would annually increase, and in five years would have reached 1,121,000 acres. Of the 690,000 acres now irrigable, an insignificant proportion had so far been leased under the existing voluntary system, and there was no immediate prospect of these costly and necessary works yielding an adequate return. Drought and flood recurred periodically, and every year disclosed more and more the vital necessity for vigorous prosecution of canal and irrigation works, which were to India as arteries of trade and communication and veins which nourished the thirsty soil. He had personal experience in Orissa, extending over many years, of the frightful misery and loss caused by famine and flood; but he regretted to say that, notwithstanding the dire misfortunes and sufferings the people had sustained, they were still very backward in availing themselves of irrigation, even when the water was brought to their door.

Similar difficulty had been experienced on the Midnapore and Soane canals.

This backwardness in leasing for water, and the urgency of financial considerations, rendered it immediately necessary to move in the direction of helping the people to help themselves. Irrigation, drainage, and protection from flood must go hand in hand, and any measure it may now be necessary to propose would involve provision of these three advantages in exchange for a moderate, but compulsory, payment. In proposing to levy a compulsory rate, we should be giving the people more than an equivalent for any payment exacted.

The most recent inquiry, made with great care in Orissa last season, showed that the average value of rice raised on an acre of irrigated land exceeded the value of rice raised on an acre of similar unirrigated land by Rs. 3-3 per acre. This was wholly due to irrigation, and these results were obtained in a season of favourable rainfall.

The Bill he now asked permission to bring in might be correctly indicated as likely to afford security and profit to every landlord and cultivator within the irrigated tracts to which the Bill would apply. In fact it was proposed to give to each person holding irrigable land a value of Rs. 3-3 per acre, and to insist on a moderate proportion of this value being contributed as an insurance rate to enable Government to continue to afford protection from drought, flood, or famine in the future.

His Honor the President said, I think it will be expected perhaps that I should say something in respect of these measures which are now before the Council, and for the introduction of which leave has been asked. It has been explained by the Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds that we have been compelled to ask you to assist us in raising a considerable sum of money in order to give effect to the measures which we have been directed to carry out by the Government of India. The Government of India have given to the Provincial Government a very considerable amount of freedom in the future in the management of its own affairs; but it has also, as the hon'ble gentleman has explained, thrown upon us the responsibility of raising the money necessary to meet the interest upon the works already constructed, and about to be constructed, and to carry out such further works of improvement as the Provincial Government may consider necessary.

As has been pointed out by my hon'ble friend, in doing this the Government of India has not charged us, as it might have done, if it could be shown that the works were immediately remunerative, with the accumulated interest upon the capital of these works. It has wiped that off, and has allowed us to start fair with the works as they stand, and has merely imposed upon us the responsibility of paying the current interest which may arise year by year.

There is no use in our discussing the correctness of the principles by which the Government of India has been guided in this matter, because the thing has been done, and cannot be undone by anything we can say in this Council. For my own part, I must say that however painful and disagreeable it may be to me to commence my administration of these provinces by imposing further taxation, I, for my part, personally feel that the principles of the Government of India are correct in the abstract. Indeed their application would have fallen upon us very lightly, if it had not been for the accident that we are clogged at starting by those two great schemes—the Orissa and Midnapore schemes—which have been taken over by the Government of India from a private company. No doubt, as my hon'ble friend Mr. Ravenshaw has stated, the Orissa Canals have already done an enormous amount of good to immense tracts of country. They have brought into cultivation large areas of land which were hitherto arid plains; and where the water has been used, these plains have been converted into gardens. But the people, though they have seen the benefit derived by their neighbours from using the water, have not yet learned by their experience, and they abstain from using the water up to the very last moment that it is possible to do so, and until they are pressed by real drought bearing upon them. But we are compelled to be ready for them, and keep up the works and establishments, and to be prepared at the very last moment to supply the water which the people demand. This being so, it is only reasonable that the Government should call upon the people to contribute towards the expenses of the establishments, and to make provision for keeping up these works.

I have spoken on the subject to many experienced revenue officers and native gentlemen, and I have found that they all concur in thinking that the principle of levying a moderate compulsory water-rate is a reasonable and proper one, and it is one to which the people, although of course they would object to any form of taxation, will not raise any substantial objection. I cannot make them pay the whole cost of the work because, as I have said, the expenditure has been extravagant and wasteful; but I must levy all I can from them, and the balance required to meet the interest on the capital locked up in these works, as well as the interest on new railways which have not yet commenced to pay, and the first charge on the new cheap railways which we have to construct, and this I hope, as explained by the Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds, to meet by a general provincial public works cess, which I trust will cover the deficit and provide us with a small margin of reserve which will keep us out of difficulties, and, as to past expenditure, enable us to press on the work of providing such cheap railways as will confer the greatest possible benefit to the province. I shall take care in future that no capital is expended on railways and irrigation works without the most positive and conclusive evidence that they will yield the interest on the capital which is being expended on them. But it must be remembered that we must always have some money in hand to pay for the construction of new works, and we must keep a working margin in hand; therefore it will not do to cut down the amount we are to raise to the bare sum which will be required for the interest on the works which are already completed.

The road cess has now been tried, and has worked well and unoppressively; it has been collected without difficulty, and almost, I must say, without any complaint, as far as I have heard. Therefore I think, even if it is considered that there are forms of taxation which are preferable and theoretically open to less objection, it is better to apply the road cess machinery to our purpose and choose the evils which we do know, rather than plunge into evils that we do not know, on the mere chance that they may turn out to be better able to be borne than those from which we now suffer. I think it is better to endeavour to raise our taxation by a rough process which requires no fresh expenditure whatever on extensive establishments, than by a more carefully adjusted system of taxation, involving large assessing and collecting establishments and constant interference with the people. Let us raise what we require to raise this year, at all events, by the development of a form of taxation which is now in operation. We are much pressed for time and have not leisure now to commence discussions on the general principles of taxation, but during the year we shall have time to consider whether any other mode of taxation can be substituted for a portion of the cess which shall reach the trading classes. There seems to be a very general opinion that something should be done to put a tax upon the trading classes. I am not in a position now to propose any tax of this sort; but I do quite concur in the view that if it can be done it should be done. I have therefore consulted the Commissioners of Divisions as to whether any such tax can be imposed in Bengal as the license tax which has been passed for the North-Western Provinces; and if we wait, we shall by this time next year have the benefit of the experience of the working of that tax in the North-Western Provinces, and then we can consider whether we can shift any portion of the burden of our present taxation upon any other classes than those on which it now falls.

I expect to be met with the objection that I am imposing the whole cost of carrying out these works upon one particular class, viz. the class interested in the land. But I am sure that no one will deny that it is the land which has benefited more by these works than any other branch of national wealth; nothing has improved so much during my residence in India as the position of the cultivating classes, and nowhere has the position of these classes so much improved as in the neighbourhood of railways and canals which have been constructed, or in those parts of the eastern districts where Nature has provided water communication which has brought the people within easy reach of the large markets. I think there is no reason why those who have profited by these benefits, whether they are natural or artificial, should not be called upon to contribute something out of their accumulating wealth to the assistance of their brethren in the outlying districts who are now shut out from all markets, and who do not enjoy the same advantages as themselves.

There is one point in respect of which I admit the cess is deficient. It throws upon landlords the duty of collecting the rate, while they have not such facilities as they should have for the ready and prompt realization of their rent and the Government cesses. This difficulty had already attracted the attention of my predecessor Sir Richard Temple, and just before he left Bengal, he recorded a Minute expressing his intention of at once applying for the sanction of the Government of India to pass a short Bill to provide a system for the realization of rent in a somewhat more summary and prompt process than that which now exists. I shall give the subject my best attention, and I may say that I am already in communication with the officers subordinate to me, and I hope it will not be long before I shall be in a position to ask the Council, with the permission of the Government of India, to pass a Bill of this sort. I think that with that Bill the objection of the landlord classes will disappear. I can only add my hope that, having regard to the difficulties of the position in which I am placed, I shall have the cordial support of the Council in passing these measures, even if they do not think them absolutely perfect. The financial year begins to-morrow, and with it commences all our difficulties and responsibilities, which I must ask you to put me in a position to meet.

The motion was agreed to.

The Council was adjourned to Saturday, the 7th April.

Rainfall, Weather, and State and Prospects of the Crops.

Statement showing Rainfall, Weather, and State and Prospects of the Crops in the different Districts of Bengal, as reported to Government during the week ending the 7th April 1877.

No.	District, and date of return.	Rainfall at Sudder Station in inches.	Character of the weather, state and prospects of the crops, and state of health at date.
	BENGAL.
	Western Districts.
Burdwan Divn. 1	Burdwan, Apl. 9*'77	·78	The rainfall at Culna has been 1·10 inches, at Cutwa 1·87, at Jehanabad·29, and at Raneegunge ·32. Cotton and til (sessamum) are doing well. Cholera is still prevalent in the Culna sub-division.
2	Bankoora, „ 7 „	·45	Weather—Unusually cool, with slight rain at intervals. The rain has been sufficient for general preparatory ploughings. State and prospects of the crops are good.
3	Beerbhoom, „ 7 „	·29	Weather—Singularly cool. Severe hailstones fell on Friday evening, followed by heavy rain on the next morning. The damage, if any, done to the crops by the hail is not yet reported
4	Midnapore, „ 7 „	1·14	Weather—Cool and rainy, which is unusual for this season. State and prospects of the crops are good.
5	Hooghly, „ 7 „	·34	Weather—Cloudy, with intervals of sunshine It is unusually cool for this time of the year. The agriculturists are all very much delighted with the frequency of rain. The late rains have benefited the vegetables on the ground. The rice lands are still being ploughed. Sugarcane is being pressed in the mills, and the cuttings are being planted. A good deal of cholera exists in the town and mofussil.
	Howrah, „ 7 „	1·25	Weather—Cloudy. There are no crops on the ground at present.
	Central Districts.
Presidency Divn. 6	24-Pergannahs. Apl, 9.† '77	1·85	Weather—Unusually cool for this time of the year. Land is being ploughed for the spring sowings everywhere in the district except at Satkhira, where the ploughing for the present is rendered impracticable by the recent heavy rains. Public health is generally good.
7	Nuddea, „ 7 '77	3·71	Weather—Cold and stormy, with heavy rain. The rain is very favorable for the sowings of the early rice; but those portions of the cold-weather crops which have not been gathered have suffered.
8	Jessore, „ 7 „	3·51	Weather—Wet and stormy. The spring rice, which was promising well before, has been injured by hail-storms and heavy rain. The accumulation of water in the low lands will retard sowings thereon. The sowings on the higher lands have commenced, and the spring sowings of indigo are in progress.
9	Moorshedabad, „ 7 „	·62	Weather—Cool and cloudy, with occasional showers. More or less rain has fallen throughout the district. The rain will forward the preparation of lands for aous rice. The rubbee harvest is drawing to a close with a very fair outturn. Indigo and mulberry are fair. Prices are steady. General health is good.
Rajshahye Divn. 10	Dinagepore, „ 6 „	·85 ·75 at Roy-gunge.	Weather—Cloudy and very cold for the time of year. The rubbee crops are being harvested with good outturn. The land is being prepared for the aous rice.
11	Rajshahye, „ 7 „	4·71	Weather—Stormy, with a moderate rainfall, which has cooled the atmosphere to a degree unusual at this time of the year. Though the rain has been unfavorable as far as the rubbee harvest is concerned, still it has been of great good to the growing crops, and is favorable for the sowings of aman rice and jute. A few cases of cholera have been reported from Beauleah, Tannore, Pooteah, Manda, and Nattore.
Eastern and Cooch Behar Divn. 12	Rungpore, „ 6 „	2·12	Weather—Wet and cool, with strong wind at times. There has been much less rain in other parts of the district, viz. ·93 at Kurigram, ·58 at Gaibanda, and ·69 at Bagdogra. Ground is being sown with the aous crop and jute. The recent rain is not favorable for any tobacco still on the ground and for weeding.
13	Bogra, „ 7 „	1·27	Weather—Heavy storms at the close of the week; otherwise fair and warm. The sowings of jute and aous rice are nearly completed, and the ploughing for further sowings will be commenced at once. Health of the district is good, except that a little cholera is prevalent

* Telegram of the 9th April shows rainfall during the seven days immediately preceding.

BENGAL.—(Continued.)
	Central Districts.
Rajshahye and Cooch Behar Divn. 14	Pubna, Apl. 7 '77	1·43	Weather—Stormy, with frequent showers. The weather is very favorable for ploughing and sowing; on the other hand, the rain has been rather too heavy for wheat and barley, which however are not extensively grown in the district. A few cases of cholera and small-pox have been reported during the week.
15	Darjeeling, „ 6 „	3·36	The weather changed on the 31st of March, and there has been very severe hail and rain since. The reaping of wheat and barley is still going on with favorable results. Indian corn, potatoes, and buck-wheat, are being sown. The hail has done some slight damage only to a few gardens in the immediate vicinity of Darjeeling; in the rest of the district the rain has been favorable to tea cultivation.
16	Julpigoree, „ 7 „	1·27	Weather—Cloudy and cool. Strong easterly winds. Nothing particular to report. Tobacco is being cut, and the ploughing for early rice is going on.
	Cooch Behar, „ 5 „	2·05 1·16 at Mathabhanga. 1·37 at Mekligunge. 1·1 at Dinhatta.	The week has been marked by frequent storms accompanied by rain. Weather very cool and fresh, but sun sometimes very hot. The rains have been good for every thing but tobacco, which has partially suffered. There is a marked increase in fever cases owing to changeable weather, but no epidemic is as yet heard of.
	Eastern Districts.
Dacca Divn. 17	Dacca, Apl. 9*'77	2·33	Weather—Very cool. Rain fell on four days during the week. State and prospects of the crops are still good, but sunshine is wanted. More rain will do harm.
18	Fureedpore, „ 7 „	3·15 2·58 at Madaripore.	Weather—Abnormally cold, wet, and stormy. The cultivation of lands for rice sowings is much impeded by the rain. General health is good.
19	Backergunge, „ 5 „	3·82	There have been heavy showers of rain during the week, and generally the crops are good. A good deal of sporadic cholera and fever exists in the district, but the health of the cattle is everywhere good.
20	Mymensingh, „ 6 „	2·28	Weather—Equinoctial storms on all sides, and an unusually heavy fall of hail at head-quarters on the morning of the 6th instant. State and prospects of the crops are favorable.
21	Tipperah, „ 6 „	1·96	Weather—Rainy and cold for the time of year. The low lands are getting water-logged, and the persistent rain makes it difficult for the cultivators to plough. There is therefore some apprehension of a bad season.
Chittagong Divn. 22	Chittagong, „ 5 „	1·36	The whole week has been cloudy, with rain, thunder-storms, and high wind at intervals. The cold-weather crops are in good condition. Panic aous rice is thriving. A few scattered cases of cholera still exist. Small-pox at head-quarters is abating.
23	Noakholly, „ 5 „	1·29	Weather—Cloudy and rainy throughout the week. Strong southerly wind. Pulses, chillies, &c., are doing well. Ploughing for the early rice continues. Cholera still prevails in Begumgunge and Fenny.
24	Chittagong Hill Tracts, „ 3 „	5·76	There were heavy falls of rain with squalls on the 28th, 29th, and 30th March and 1st April. The jooms cut by the hill people have partially been destroyed and thereby their burning is delayed.
	Hill Tipperah, „ 4 „	1·30	There has been rain on four days of the week, and the state and prospects of the crops are good.
E HAR.
Patna Divn. 25	Patna, Apl. 9* '77	·13	Slight rain fell during the early part of the week. The harvesting of the rubbee crops is nearly completed. Sporadic cases of cholera and small-pox are reported throughout the district.
26	Gya, „ 7 „	·27	Weather—Cool, cloudy, and rainy. There has been a fall of hail throughout the greater part of the district. Maximum reading of the thermometer was 95·4. The hail and rainy weather have injured the prospects to some extent.
27	Shahabad, „ 7 „	·96	Weather—Cloudy and hot. The rubbee crops are somewhat damaged by the recent rainfall. Peas, masoor pulse, wheat, and barley, are being harvested.
28	Durbhunga, „ 7 „	·22	Weather—Cloudy, with slight rain and several thunder-storms during the week. High easterly winds. The rubbee harvest is progressing, and the outturn promises to be a good average.

* Telegrams of the 9th April show rainfall during the seven days immediately preceding.

No.	District, and date of return.	Rainfall, at Sudder Station in inches.	Character of the weather, state and prospects of the crops, and state of health at date.
BEHAR.—(Continued.)
Patna Divn. 29	Mozufferpore, Apl. 7 '77	·40	Weather—Unseasonably cloudy. The harvesting of the rubbee crops has not as yet been completed. A good outturn is reported. Health of the district is good.
Patna Divn. 30	Sarun, „ 7 „	·37 ·28 at Sewan. ·13 at Gopalgunge.	Weather—Cool for the time of year. Generally bright in the day time; cloudy nights with occasional drizzling rain. The rubbee harvest is nearly over with good outturn. China millet is being sown. Indigo is coming on well, though the late rain may necessitate the resowing of some of the lands. General health is good.
Patna Divn. 31	Chumparun, „ 7 „	·88	There was rain accompanied by thunder and lightning on the 31st of March and the 3rd and 7th of April. The rain has done some injury. Resowings of indigo have become necessary in some places. Prospects on the whole are good.
Bhagulpore Divn. 32	Monghyr, „ 7 „	·40 ·2 at Begusarai.	Weather—Unusually cool for the time of year. There has been no hot weather hitherto. The prospects of the crops continue good.
Bhagulpore Divn. 33	Bhagulpore, „ 9* „	·27	Extraordinary cool weather. ·31 of rain at Banka and ·29 at Soopole, with hail-storm. The rubbee crops are luckily reaped. The mango crop will be almost an entire failure. General health is very good, though cases of cholera and small-pox are reported.
Bhagulpore Divn. 34	Purneah, „ 7 „	1·66 1·59 at Kissengunge. ·60 at Arrareah.	Weather—Cold and stormy, with east wind. The crops are good, but the unseasonable rain has damaged the ripe and gathered grain. It has also caused sickness.
Bhagulpore Divn. 35	Maldah, „ 7 „	·42	Rain fell on the night of the 31st March; the other days of the week were rather fair. Heavy clouds, attended with thunder, lightning, and a few drops of rain, passed over on the night of the 6th instant. The wind is variable, and the temperature is lower. The crops are as good as before. Cholera is bad. Ninety-nine deaths reported.
Bhagulpore Divn. 36	Sonthal Perghs. „ 8 „	·95 ·33 at Deoghur.	Weather—Cool and cloudy, with light showers. Some thunder and lightning. The rubbee harvest in Godda is good. Mango and mohwa crops are not good. Cholera is decreasing in Deoghur; small-pox is appearing.
ORISSA.
Orissa Divn. 37	Cuttack Apl. 7 '77	·93	Weather—Stormy and rainy. The rain has slightly injured the cotton and other dry crops; otherwise it has been beneficial.
Orissa Divn. 38	Pooree, „ 5 „	2·27 1·42 at Khoordah.	Weather—Cloudy and rainy at intervals. Fair on the 5th instant. The heavy showers of rain did a great deal of injury to the dalua crop that was being cut and gathered. The ploughing for the next season has recommenced. The moog pulse and cotton crop will suffer, having been attacked by insects. Exportation is going on but slowly, and the price of rice is stationary. Cholera has diminished.
Orissa Divn. 39	Balasore, „ 6 „	·85	Weather—Squally and unsettled. Preparations for sowing continue. Sporadic cholera still causes many deaths.
CHOTA NAGPORE.
South-West Frontier Agency. 40	Hazareebagh, Apl. 6 '77	·20	Weather—Seasonable, but cooler than ordinary. The rubbee crops are nearly all harvested. The opium crop has been unusually good both in quantity and quality. Health of the district is good.
41	Lohardugga, „ 7 „	·55 ·20 at Palamow.	Weather—Unseasonably wet. Some damage has been done by hail in places, but the rubbee harvest, which is now going on, appears to be an average one on the whole. There have been some cases of small-pox in the Palamow sub-division and one case of cholera (not fatal) in the Ranchi jail.
42	Singbhoom, „ 6 „	3·50	Weather—Unusually cool for the time of year. There has been a good deal of rain during the week. No crops on the ground to report. Preparations of land for the coming crops are going on. The district is reported healthy.
43	Manbhoom, „ 7 „	·42	Weather—Pleasant but unseasonable. There is nothing on the ground worth noticing. Ploughing is going on.

The mean temperature of the seven days		74·2°
The average temperature of the corresponding period for 20 years ...		84·5°
The extreme variation of temperature during the seven days		23·8°
The maximum temperature during the seven days		89·3°
The total fall of rain from 1st to 7th April		1·65 inches.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from observations made at 6h., 10h., 16h. and 22h. The maximum and minimum temperatures from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 86, at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modification of August's formula.

The direction and movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

NOTIFICATION.

The 17th March 1877.—The following rules for the guidance of punchayets and for giving effect to the provisions of the Village Chowkeedaree Act, 1870, which have been prescribed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal under the authority vested in him by Section 65 of the said Act. are published for general information :—

RULES.

I. The Magistrate may determine the year current in a village, and inform the punchayet accordingly for action under Section 16 of the Act. The list under this section shall be made out in columns containing the information required by the law, opposite the names of the persons liable to assessment, as follows :—

Name.	Trade, &c.	Amount assessed.

The list shall be published in some conspicuous place in the village. The name of the member of the punchayet who has been appointed to receive and collect the rate, to grant receipts for the same, and to keep the accounts thereof, shall be mentioned at the foot of the list.

II. The list before publication shall be signed by each member of the punchayet.

III. Three or more members of the punchayet shall sit at a given time and place, to be notified beforehand, at least once during each week within one month after the publication of any assessment has been made, for the purpose of hearing and disposing of appeals. A note of the orders passed on each appeal disposed of shall be recorded and preserved.

IV. The collecting member of the punchayet shall keep and be responsible for all papers, accounts, and records connected with the administration of the Act by the punchayet.

V. A record of all proceedings taken under Section 27 et seq. of the Act shall be made and preserved by the collecting member of the punchayet. Two members of the punchayet shall be present at every sale held under Section 29.

VI. The record of any proceeding, order, or action of the punchayet, or any member or members of the punchayet, shall be kept in the form of a diary, which shall be open to general inspection.

VII. If, under Section 30, any defaulter disputes his liability and informs any member of the punchayet of the fact, the punchayet shall postpone the sale of any property which may have been distrained for five days, and shall refer the objector to the Magistrate to obtain orders within that period.

VIII. The following form of accounts shall be kept by the punchayet :—

Register I.—Of Collections.

Name. I.	Trade, &c. II.	Amount assessed. III.	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12

The entries in the first three columns will be similar to those entered in the three columns of the list to be prepared under Section 16 (vide Rule I) ; the twelve following columns are for the twelve months of the year, beginning with the first month of the year current in the village, and should be headed accordingly. Opposite each villager's name will be entered his monthly quota in these columns under each month as paid in by him. Each villager should be instructed to satisfy himself, when paying the cess, that the entry of the payment is duly made by the collecting member of the punchayet. This check, when properly understood and worked, will probably be of more value as proof of payment than receipts, which should nevertheless be granted under Section 22 of the Act.

Register II.—Of Receipts and Disbursements.—This will be an account in the simplest form of single entry, to be totalled and carried over at the close of every month, as follows :—

Date.	Jumma.	Amount.	Date.	Kuruch.	Amount.

PART IV.

Bills of the Bengal Council.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

THE following Bill was read in the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 14th April 1877, and was referred to a Select Committee for report:—

A Bill to extend the provisions of Bengal Act VII of 1873 (the Labor Districts Emigration Act) to the district of Chittagong and to the Chittagong Hill Tracts.

WHEREAS it is expedient to extend the provisions of Bengal Act VII of 1873 (the Labor Districts Emigration Act) to the district of Chittagong and to the Chittagong Hill Tracts: It is enacted as follows:—

Preamble.

1. For the third paragraph of section 3 of the said Act the following shall be substituted:

Amendment of section 3 of Act VII of 1873.

"The labor districts" means the districts of Assam, Cachar, Sylhet, Chittagong, and the Chittagong Hill Tracts, and "a labor district" means any one of those districts.

"Labor districts."

2. For the words "the districts of Assam, Cachar, and Sylhet," in Schedule C and Schedule D of the said Act respectively the words "Assam, Cachar, Sylhet, Chittagong, and the Chittagong Hill Tracts" shall be substituted.

Amendment of Schedules C and D.

3. The provisions of Part III of the said Act shall be deemed to extend to all laborers who at the time of the commencement of this Act shall be serving in the district of Chittagong or the Chittagong Hill Tracts in accordance with any contracts to labor under which they may have been conveyed to the said districts at the expense of their employers.

Part III of Act VII of 1873 to extend to existing contracts.

4. This Act shall come into force from the date on which it may be published in the Calcutta Gazette with the assent of the Governor-General.

Commencement of Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

OWING to the large number of imported laborers who are now employed in the tea gardens of Chittagong and the Chittagong Hill Tracts, it has been thought advisable to extend to those districts the provisions of the Labor Districts Emigration Act of 1873. At present that Act is confined to Assam, Cachar, and Sylhet, and the object of the present Bill is to extend it to Chittagong and the Chittagong Hill Tracts.

H. BELL.

W. E. H. FORSYTH,

THE following Bill was read in the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 14th April 1877, and was referred to a Select Committee, who are to report thereon in three weeks:—

A Bill to provide for Irrigation in the Provinces subject to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

WHEREAS it is necessary to make provision for the construction, maintenance, and regulation of canals, for the supply of water therefrom, and for the levy of rates on irrigable and protected lands in the provinces subject to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal: It is hereby enacted:—

PART I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Bengal Irrigation Act, 1877."

Local extent and commencement.

It shall take effect in those districts in the provinces subject to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, to which the said Lieutenant-Governor shall extend it by an order published in the Calcutta Gazette; and shall commence on the day which shall be in such order provided for the commencement thereof.

2. On and from such day Bengal Act III of 1876 (the Bengal Irrigation Act) shall be repealed.

This repeal shall not affect the validity or invalidity of anything done or suffered, or any right, title, obligation, or liability accrued before the commencement of this Act.

And all rules prescribed, orders or appointments made, and agreements executed under the said Act shall (so far as they are consistent with this Act) be deemed to be respectively prescribed, made, and executed under this Act.

And all suits and proceedings now pending, which may have been commenced under the said Act, shall be deemed to be commenced under this Act.

Interpretation clause.

3. In this Act—unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

"Canal."

(i) "Canal" includes—

(a) all canals, channels, and reservoirs hitherto constructed, maintained, or controlled by Government for the supply or storage of water, or which may hereafter be so constructed, maintained, or controlled;

(b) all works, embankments, structures, supply and escape-channels connected with such canals, channels, or reservoirs;

(c) all village-channels as defined in clause (ii) of the section;

(d) all drainage-works as defined in clause (iii) of this section;

(e) any part of a river, stream, lake, natural collection of water, or natural drainage-channel, to which the Lieutenant-Governor has applied the provisions of Part II of this Act, or of which the water has been applied or used for the passing of this Act for the purpose of any existing canal;

(f) all lands on the banks of any canal as defined in articles (a), (b), (c), (d), and (e) of this clause, which have been acquired by Government;

"Village-channel."

(ii) "Village-channel" means any channel by which water is led from a canal directly into the fields to be irrigated, and includes all subsidiary works connected with any such channel, except the sluice or outlet through which water is supplied from a canal to such channel.

"Drainage-work."

(iii) "Drainage-work" means any work in connection with a system of irrigation which has been or may hereafter be made or improved by the Government for the purposes of the drainage of the country, whether under the provisions of Part IV of this Act or otherwise, and includes escape-channels from a canal, dams, weirs, embankments, sluices, groins, and other works connected therewith, but does not include works for the removal of sewage from towns.

"Flood-embankment."

(iv) "Flood-embankment" means any embankment constructed or maintained by the officers of Government in connection with any system of irrigation works for the protection of lands from inundation, or which may be declared by the Lieutenant-Governor to be maintained in connection with any such system; and includes all groins, spurs, dams, and other protective works connected with such embankments.

'Collector."

(v) "Collector" means the head Revenue Officer of a district, and includes any officer appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor to exercise all or any of the powers of a Collector under this Act.

'Court."

(vi) "Court" means, in the Regulation Provinces, a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, and in the Non-Regulation Provinces, the Court of a Commissioner of a Division, unless when the Lieutenant-Governor has appointed (as he is hereby empowered to do), either specially for any case, or generally within any specified local limits, a judicial officer to perform the functions of a judge under this Act, and then the expression Court means the Court of such officer.

'Canal Officer."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE Government of India having imposed upon the Government of Bengal the duty of maintaining, and paying interest on, its own canals, it has become necessary to raise the required amount by imposing a rate on all lands benefited by such canals or protected from flood by embankments. It is proposed to make all irrigable lands liable to the payment of a rate not exceeding Rs. 2 per acre, and all protected lands, if not irrigable, liable to a rate not exceeding 8 annas per acre. These rates, as a general principle, are to be payable by the cultivator, the zemindar being made responsible for collecting them and handing them over to Government. The duty of constructing and maintaining village-channels is thrown upon the occupiers of land under supervision of the owner thereof, and provision is made in the Bill for the enforcement of these obligations. Remission of rates is to be allowed in cases where the Government may fail to supply sufficient water or to maintain adequate embankments.

In consequence of the principle of compulsory payment of rates being adopted, it becomes necessary to repeal the sections of the Bengal Irrigation Act, 1876, which relate to the voluntary payment of water-rates; and as the present Bill somewhat changes the law relating to the construction and maintenance of village-channels, it has been thought advisable to repeal the whole Act, and to incorporate in the present Bill such of its provisions as are not inconsistent with the new principles involved.

THE following report of a Select Committee, together with the Bill as amended by them, is, by order of the President, published for general information :—

WE, the undersigned members of the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, to whom the Bill "to provide for the levy of a cess for the construction and maintenance of provincial public works" was referred, have the honor to make the following report :—

The alterations which we have made in the Bill do not call for much remark.

In order to save expense we have explained that the notices to be served under sections 22 and 36 of the Road Cess Act may also include the amount of the public works cess.

We have provided for an annual statement of accounts in the Calcutta Gazette showing how the cess has been assessed.

We have given the Lieutenant-Governor the same power to make rules as are conferred by the Road Cess Act and made a few verbal changes.

We recommend that the Bill be passed as amended by us.

Explanation.—A suit in which the right to property or to an office is contested is a suit of a civil nature, notwithstanding that such right may depend entirely on the decision of questions as to religious rites or ceremonies.

Pending suits.

12. Except where a suit has been stayed under section 20, the Court shall not try any suit in which the matter in issue is also directly and substantially in issue in a previously instituted suit for the same relief between the same parties, or between parties under whom they or any of them claim, pending in the same or any other Court, whether superior or inferior, in British India having jurisdiction to grant such relief, or in any Court beyond the limits of British India established by the Governor General in Council and having like jurisdiction, or before Her Majesty in Council.

In such case, if the plaintiff so requires, the Court shall return the plaint with an endorsement thereon of the order staying proceedings.

Application when to be made.

Every such application shall be made at the earliest possible opportunity, and in all cases before the issues are settled; and any defendant not so applying shall be deemed to have acquiesced in the institution of the suit.

Remission of court-fee where suit instituted in another Court.

21. Where the Court, under section 20, stays proceedings, and the plaintiff re-institutes his suit in another Court, the plaint shall not be chargeable with any court-fee; provided that the proper fee has been levied on the institution of the suit in the former Court, and that the plaint has been returned by such Court.

Procedure where Courts in which suit may be instituted are subordinate to the same appellate Court.

22. Where a suit may be instituted in more Courts than one, and such Courts are subordinate to the same appellate Court, any defendant, after giving notice in writing to the other parties of his intention to apply to such Court to transfer the suit to another Court, may apply accordingly; and the appellate Court, after hearing the other parties, if they desire to be heard, shall determine in which of the Courts having jurisdiction the suit shall proceed.

Procedure where they are not so subordinate

23. Where such Courts are subordinate to different appellate Courts, but are subordinate to the same High Court, any defendant, after giving notice in writing to the other parties of his intention to apply to the High Court to transfer the suit to another Court having jurisdiction, may apply accordingly. If the suit is brought in any Court subordinate to a District Court, the application, together with the objections, if any, filed by the other parties, shall be submitted through the District Court to which such Court is subordinate. The High Court may, after considering the objections, if any, of the other parties, determine in which of the Courts having jurisdiction the suit shall proceed.

Procedure where they are subordinate to different High Courts.

24. Where such Courts are subordinate to different High Courts, any defendant may, after giving notice in writing to the other parties of his intention to apply to the High Court within whose jurisdiction the Court in which the suit is brought is situate, apply accordingly.

If the suit is brought in any Court subordinate to a District Court, the application, together with the objections, if any, filed by the other parties, shall be submitted through the District Court to which such Court is subordinate, and such High Court shall, after considering the objections, if any, of the other parties, determine in which of the several Courts having jurisdiction the suit shall proceed.

Transfer of suits.

25. The High Court or District Court may, on the application of any of the parties, after giving notice to the parties and hearing such of them as desire to be heard, or of its own motion, without giving such notice, withdraw any suit whether pending in a Court of first instance or in a Court of appeal subordinate to such High Court or District Court, as the case may be, and try the suit itself, or transfer it for trial to any other such subordinate Court competent to try the same in respect of its nature and the amount or value of its subject-matter.

For the purposes of this section, the Courts of Additional and Assistant Judges shall be deemed to be subordinate to the District Court.

The Court trying any suit withdrawn under this section from a Court of Small Causes shall, for the purposes of such suit, be deemed to be a Court of Small Causes.

CHAPTER III.

OF PARTIES AND THEIR APPEARANCES, APPLICATIONS AND ACTS.

Persons who may be joined as plaintiffs.

26. All persons may be joined as plaintiffs in whom the right to any relief claimed is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally, or in the alternative, in respect of the same cause of action. And judgment may be given for such one or more of the plaintiffs as may be found to be entitled to relief, for such relief as he or they may be entitled to, without any amendment. But the defendant, though unsuccessful, shall be entitled to his costs occasioned by so joining any person who is not found entitled to relief, unless the Court in disposing of the costs of the suit otherwise directs.

Court may substitute or add plaintiff for or to plaintiff suing.

27. Where a suit has been instituted in the name of the wrong person as plaintiff, or where it is doubtful whether it has been instituted in the name of the right plaintiff, the Court may, if satisfied that the suit has been so commenced through a bonâ fide mistake, and that it is necessary for the determination of the real matter in dispute so to do, order any other person or persons to be substituted or added as plaintiff or plaintiffs upon such terms as the Court thinks just.

Persons who may be joined as defendants.

28. All persons may be joined as defendants against whom the right to any relief is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally or in the alternative, in respect of the same matter. And judgment may be given against such one or more of the defendants as may be found to be liable, according to their respective liabilities, without any amendment.

Joinder of parties liable on same contract.

29. The plaintiff may, at his option, join as parties to the same suit all or any of the persons severally, or jointly and severally, liable on any one contract, including parties to bills of exchange, hundís and promissory notes.

One party may sue or defend on behalf of all in same interest.

30. Where there are numerous parties having the same interest in one suit, one or more of such parties may, with the permission of the Court, sue or be sued, or may defend in such suit, on behalf of all parties so interested. But the Court shall in such case give, at the plaintiff's expense, notice of the institution of the suit to all such parties either by personal service or (if from the number of parties or any other cause such service is not reasonably practicable), then by public advertisement, as the Court in each case may direct.

Suit not to fail by reason of misjoinder.

31. No suit shall be defeated by reason of the misjoinder of parties, and the Court may in every suit deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to enable plaintiffs to join in respect of distinct causes of action.

32. The Court may, on or before the first hearing, upon the application of either party, and on such terms as the Court thinks just, order that the name of any party, whether as plaintiff or as defendant, improperly joined, be struck out; and the Court may at any time, either upon or without such application, and on such terms as the Court thinks just, order that any plaintiff be made a defendant or that any defendant be made a plaintiff, and that the name of any person who ought to have been joined whether as plaintiff or defendant or whose presence before the Court may be necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit, be added.

Court may dismiss or add parties.

No person shall be added as a plaintiff, or as the next friend of a plaintiff, without his own consent thereto.

No one to be added as plaintiff or as next friend without his consent.

Any person on whose behalf a suit is instituted or defended under section 30 may apply to the Court to be made a party to such suit.

Parties to suits instituted or defended under section 30.

All parties whose names are so added as defendants shall be served with a summons in manner hereinafter mentioned, and (subject to the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act, section 22) the proceedings as against them shall be deemed to have begun only on the service of such summons.

Defendants added to be served.

The Court may give the conduct of the suit to such plaintiff as it deems proper.

Conduct of suit.

33. Where a defendant is added, the plaint, if previously filed, shall, unless the Court direct otherwise, be amended in such manner as may be necessary, and an amended copy of the summons shall be served on the new defendant and the original defendants.

Where defendant added, plaintiff to amend.

34. All objections for want of parties, or for joinder of parties who have no interest in the suit, or for misjoinder as co-plaintiffs or co-defendants, shall be taken at the earliest possible opportunity, and in all cases before the first hearing; and any such objection not so taken shall be deemed to have been waived by the defendant.

Time for taking objections as to non-joinder or misjoinder of parties.

35. When there are more plaintiffs than one, any one or more of them may be authorized by any other of them to appear, plead or act for such other in any proceeding under this Code: and in like manner when there are more defendants than one, any one or more of them may be authorized by any other of them to appear, plead or act for such other in any such proceeding.

Each of several plaintiffs or defendants may authorize any other to appear, &c., for him.

The authority shall be in writing, signed by the party giving it, and shall be filed in Court.

Authority to be in writing signed and filed.

Recognized Agents and Pleaders.

36. Any appearance, application or act in or to any Court, required or authorized by law to be made or done by a party to a suit or appeal in such Court, may, except when otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force, be made or done by the party in person, or by his recognized agent, or by a pleader duly appointed to act on his behalf:

Appearances, &c., may be in person, by recognized agent or by pleader.

Provided that any such appearance shall be made by the party in person if the Court so direct.

37. The recognized agents of parties by whom such appearances, applications and acts may be made or done are—Recognized agents.

(a) persons holding general powers-of-attorney from parties not resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court within which limits the appearance, application or act is made or done, authorizing them to make and do such appearances, applications and acts on behalf of such parties;

Persons holding powers-of-attorney from parties out of jurisdiction.

(b) mukhtárs duly certificated under any law for the time being in force, and holding special powers-of-attorney authorizing them to do, on behalf of their principals, such acts as may legally be done by mukhtárs;

Certificated mukhtárs.

(c) persons carrying on trade or business for and in the names of parties not resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court within which limits the appearance, application or act is made or done, in matters connected with such trade or business only, where no other agent is expressly authorized to make and do such appearances, applications and acts.

Persons carrying on trade or business for parties out of jurisdiction.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to the territories now administered respectively by the Lieutenant Governor of the Panjáb, and the Chief Commissioners of Oudh and the Central Provinces; but in those territories the recognized agents of parties by whom such appearances, applications and acts may be made and done shall be such persons as the Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, declare in this behalf.

Recognized agents in Panjáb, Oudh and Central Provinces.

38. Processes served on the recognized agent of a party to a suit or appeal shall be as effectual as if the same had been served on the party in person, unless the Court otherwise directs.

Service of process on recognized agent.

The provisions of this Code for the service of process on a party to a suit shall apply to the service of process on his recognized agent.

39. The appointment of a pleader to make or do any appearance, application or act as aforesaid shall be in writing, and such appointment shall be filed in court.

Appointment of pleader.

When so filed, it shall be considered to be in force until revoked with the leave of the Court, by a writing signed by the client and filed in Court, or until the client or the pleader dies, or all proceedings in the suit are ended so far as regards the client.

No advocate of any High Court established by Royal Charter shall be required to present any document empowering him to act.

Service of process on pleader.

40. Processes served on the pleader of any party or left at the office or ordinary residence of such pleader, relative to a suit or appeal, and whether the same be for the personal appearance of the party or not, shall be presumed to be duly communicated and made known to the party whom the pleader represents; and, unless the Court otherwise directs, shall be as effectual for all purposes in relation to the suit or appeal as if the same had been given to or served on the party in person.

Agent to receive process.

41. Besides the recognized agents described in section 37, any person residing within the jurisdiction of the Court may be appointed an agent to accept service of process.

His appointment to be in writing and to be filed in Court.

Such appointment may be special or general and shall be made by an instrument in writing signed by the principal, and such instrument, or, if the appointment be general, a duly attested copy thereof, shall be filed in Court.

CHAPTER IV.

OF THE FRAME OF THE SUIT.

Suit how to be framed.

42. Every suit shall, as far as practicable, be so framed as to afford ground for a final decision upon the subjects in dispute, and so to prevent further litigation concerning them.

Suit to include the whole claim.

43. Every suit shall include the whole of the claim arising out of the cause of action; but a plaintiff may relinquish any portion of his claim in order to bring the suit within the jurisdiction of any Court.

Relinquishment of part of claim.

If a plaintiff omit to sue for, or intentionally relinquish, any portion of his claim, he shall not afterwards sue for the portion so omitted or relinquished.

Omission to sue for one of several remedies.

A person entitled to more than one remedy in respect of the same claim may sue for all or any of his remedies; but if he omits (except with the leave of the Court obtained before the first hearing) to sue for any of such remedies, he shall not afterwards sue for the remedy so omitted.

Illustration.

A lets a house to B at a yearly rent of Rs. 1,200. The rent for the whole of the years 1874 and 1875 is due and unpaid. A sues B only for the rent due for 1875. A shall not afterwards sue B for the rent due for 1876.

Only certain claims to be joined with suit for recovery of land.

44. Rule a.—No cause of action shall, unless with the leave of the Court, be joined with a suit for the recovery of immoveable property, or to obtain a declaration of title to immoveable property, except—

(a) claims in respect of mesne profits or arrears of rent in respect of the property claimed,

(b) damages for breach of any contract under which the property or any part thereof are or is held, and

(c) claims by a mortgagee to enforce any of his remedies under the mortgage.

Claims by or against executor, administrator, or heir.

Rule b.—No claim by or against an executor, administrator or heir as such, shall be joined with claims by or against him personally, unless the last mentioned claims are alleged to arise with reference to the estate in respect of which the plaintiff or defendant sues or is sued as executor, administrator or heir.

Plaintiff may join several causes of action.

45. Subject to the rules contained in section 44, the plaintiff may unite in the same suit several causes of action, and any plaintiffs having causes of action against the same defendant or defendants, may unite such causes of action in the same suit.

Court may order separation.

But if it appear to the Court that any such causes of action cannot be conveniently tried or disposed of together, the Court may, at any time before the first hearing, of its own motion or on the application of the defendant, order separate trials of any such causes of action to be had, or make such other order as may be necessary or expedient for the separate disposal thereof.

When causes of action are united, the jurisdiction of the Court as regards the suit shall depend on the amount or value of the aggregate subject-matters at the date of instituting the suit, whether or not an order has been made under the second paragraph of this section.

Defendant may apply to confine suit.

46. Any defendant alleging that the plaintiff has united in the same suit several causes of action which cannot be conveniently disposed of in one suit may at any time before the first hearing, or, where issues are settled, before any evidence is recorded, apply to the Court for an order confining the suit to such of the causes of action as may be conveniently disposed of in one suit.

Court on hearing application may exclude some causes and order amendment.

47. If, on the hearing of such application, it appears to the Court that the causes of action are such as cannot all be conveniently disposed of in one suit, the Court may order any of such causes of action to be excluded, and may direct the plaint to be amended accordingly, and may make such order as to costs as may be just.

Every amendment made under this section shall be attested by the signature of the Judge.

CHAPTER V.

OF THE INSTITUTION OF SUITS.

Suits to be commenced by plaint.

48. Every suit shall be instituted by presenting a plaint to the Court or such officer as it appoints in this behalf.

Language of plaint.

49. The plaint must be distinctly written in the language of the Court; provided that if such language is not English, the plaint may (with the permission of the Court) be written in English; but in such case, if the defendant so require, a translation of the plaint into the language of the Court shall be filed in court.

Particulars to be contained in plaint.

50. The plaint must contain the following particulars :—

(a) the name of the Court in which the suit is brought;

(b) the name, description and place of abode of the plaintiff;

(c) the name, description and place of abode of the defendant, so far as they can be ascertained:

(d) a plain and concise statement of the circumstances constituting the cause of action, and where and when it arose;

(e) a demand of the relief which the plaintiff claims; and

(f) if the plaintiff has allowed a set-off or relinquished a portion of his claim, the amount so allowed or relinquished.

In money-suits.

If the plaintiff seek the recovery of money, the plaint must state the precise amount, so far as the case admits.

In a suit for mesne profits: and in a suit for the amount which will be found due to the plaintiff on taking unsettled accounts between him and the defendant the plaint need only state approximately the amount sued for.

Where plaintiff sues as a representative.

When the plaintiff sues in a representative character, the plaint should shew, not only that he has an actual existing interest in the subject-matter, but that he has taken the steps necessary to enable him to institute a suit concerning it.

Illustrations.

(a) A sues as B's executor. The plaint must state that A has proved B's will.

(b) A sues as C's administrator. The plaint must state that A has taken out administration to C's estate.

(c) A sues as guardian of D, a Muhammadan minor. A is not D's guardian according to Muhammadan law and usage. The plaint must state that A has been specially appointed D's guardian.

Defendant's interest and liability to be shewn.

The plaint must shew that the defendant is or claims to be interested in the subject-matter, and that he is liable to be called upon to answer the plaintiff's demand.

Illustration.

A dies leaving B his executor, C his legatee, and D a debtor to A's estate. C sues D to compel him to pay his debt in satisfaction of C's legacy. The plaint must shew that B has causelessly refused to sue D, or that B and D have colluded for the purpose of defrauding C, or other such circumstances rendering D liable to C.

Grounds of exemption from limitation law.

If the cause of action arose beyond the period ordinarily allowed by any law for instituting the suit, the plaint must shew the ground upon which exemption from such law is claimed.

Plaint to be subscribed and verified.

51. The plaint shall be subscribed by the plaintiff and his pleader (if any), and shall be verified at the foot by the plaintiff or, with the permission of the Court, by some other person proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be acquainted with the facts of the case.

Contents of verification.

52. The verification must be to the effect that the same is true to the knowledge of the person making it, except as to matters stated on information and belief, and that as to those matters he believes it to be true.

Verification to be signed and attested.

The verification shall be signed by the person making it, and when he makes it out of court he shall sign it in the presence of a witness, who shall also sign it.

The Court shall examine such witness as to the fact of the signature, unless the person making the verification is present.

When the plaint may be rejected, returned for amendment, or amended.

53. The plaint may, at the discretion of the Court, and at or before the first hearing, be rejected, returned for amendment within a time to be fixed by the Court, or amended then and there, upon such terms as to the payment of costs occasioned by the amendment as the Court thinks fit,

(a) if it do not state correctly and without prolixity the several particulars hereinbefore required to be specified therein; or

(b) if it contain any particulars other than those so required; or

(c) if it be not subscribed and verified as hereinbefore required; or

(d) if it do not disclose a cause of action; or

(e) if it is not framed in accordance with section 42; or

(f) if it is wrongly framed by reason of non-joinder or misjoinder of parties, or because the plaintiff has joined causes of action which ought not to be joined in the same suit:

Proviso.

Provided that a plaint cannot be altered so as to convert a suit of one character into a suit of another and inconsistent character.

Attestation of amendment.

When a plaint is amended, the amendment shall be attested by the signature of the Judge.

When the plaint shall be rejected.

54. The plaint shall be rejected in the following cases :—

(a) if the relief sought is undervalued, and the plaintiff, on being required by the Court to correct the valuation within a time to be fixed by the Court, fails to do so :

(b) if the relief sought is properly valued, but the plaint is written upon paper insufficiently stamped, and the plaintiff, on being required by the Court to supply the requisite stamp-paper within a time to be fixed by the Court, fails to do so :

(c) if the suit appear from the statement in the plaint to be barred by any positive rule of law :

(d) if the plaint having been returned for amendment within a time fixed by the Court is not amended within such time.

Procedure on rejecting a plaint.

55. When a plaint is rejected, the Judge shall record with his own hand an order to that effect with the reason for such order.

56. The rejection of the plaint on any of the grounds hereinbefore mentioned shall not of its own force preclude the plaintiff from presenting a fresh plaint in respect of the same cause of action.

When rejection of plaint does not preclude presentation of fresh plaint.

57. The plaint shall be returned to be presented to the proper Court in the following cases:

When the plaint shall be returned to be presented to the proper Court.

(a) If a suit has been instituted in a Court whose grade is lower or higher than that of the Court competent to try it, where such Court exists, or where no option as to the selection of the Court is allowed by law:

(c) If, in any other case, it appear that the cause of action did not arise, and that none of the defendants are dwelling or carrying on business, or personally working for gain, within such local limits.

On returning a plaint, the Judge shall, with his own hand, endorse thereon the date of its presentation and return, the name of the party presenting it, and a brief statement of the reason for returning it.

Procedure on returning plaint.

58. The plaintiff shall endorse on the plaint, or annex thereto, a memorandum of the documents (if any) which he has filed along with it; and if the plaint be admitted, shall present as many copies on plain paper of the plaint as there are defendants, unless the Court by reason of the length of the plaint or the number of the defendants, or for any other sufficient reason, permit him to present a like number of concise statements of the nature of the claim made, or of the relief or remedy required in the suit, in which case he shall present such statements.

Procedure on admitting plaint.

Concise statements.

If the plaintiff sues, or the defendant or any of the defendants is sued, in a representative capacity, such statements shall show in what capacity the plaintiff or defendant sues or is sued.

The plaintiff may, by leave of the Court, amend such statements so as to make them correspond with the plaint.

The chief ministerial officer of the Court shall sign such memorandum and copies or statements if, on examination, he finds them to be correct.

The Court shall also cause the particulars mentioned in section 50 to be entered in a book to be kept for the purpose and called the Register of civil suits. Such entries shall be numbered in every year according to the order in which the plaint is admitted.

Statement in case of documents not in his possession or power.

61. In case of any suit founded upon a bill of exchange or other negotiable instrument, if it be proved that the instrument is lost, and if an indemnity be given by the plaintiff, to the satisfaction of the Court, against the claims of any other person upon such instrument, the Court may make such decree as it would have made if the plaintiff had produced the instrument in Court when the plaint was presented, and had at the same time delivered a copy of the instrument to be filed with the plaint.

Suits on lost negotiable instruments.

62. If the document on which the plaintiff sues be an entry in a shop-book or other book in his possession or power, the plaintiff shall produce the book at the time of filing the plaint, together with a copy of the entry on which he relies.

Production of shop-book.

The Court, or such officer as it appoints in this behalf, shall forthwith mark the document for the purpose of identification; and after examining and comparing the copy with the original and attesting the copy if found correct, shall return the book to the plaintiff and cause the copy to be filed.

Original entry to be marked and returned.

Inadmissibility of document not produced when plaint filed.

Nothing in this section applies to documents produced for cross-examination of the defendant's witnesses, or in answer to any case set up by the defendant, or handed to a witness merely to refresh his memory.

CHAPTER VI.

Issue of Summons.

The day for the appearance of the defendant shall be fixed by the Court with reference to its current business, the place of residence of the defendant and the time necessary for the service of the summons; and the day shall be so fixed as to allow the defendant sufficient time to enable him to appear and answer on such day.

81. The serving-officer shall, in all cases in which the summons has been served under section 79, endorse or cause to be endorsed on the original summons, the time when and the manner in which the summons was served.

Examination of serving officer.

82. When a summons is returned under section 80, the Court shall examine the serving-officer on oath touching his proceedings and may make such further enquiry in the matter as it thinks fit; and shall either declare that the summons has been duly served or order such service as it thinks fit.

Substituted service.

Where the Court is satisfied that there is reason to believe that the defendant is keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding the service, or that for any other reason the summons cannot be served in the ordinary way, the Court shall order the summons to be served by affixing a copy thereof in some conspicuous place in the Court-house, and also upon some conspicuous part of the house, if any, in which the defendant is known to have last resided, or in such other manner as the Court thinks fit.

Effect of substituted service.

83. The service substituted by order of the Court, shall be as effectual as if it had been made on the defendant personally.

When service is substituted, time for appearance to be fixed.

84. Whenever service is substituted by order of the Court, the Court shall fix such time for the appearance of the defendant as the case may require.

Service of summons when defendant resides within jurisdiction of another Court and has no agent to accept service.

85. If the defendant resides within the jurisdiction of any Court other than the Court in which the suit is instituted, and has no agent resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the latter Court empowered to accept the service of the summons, such Court shall send the summons, either by one of its officers or by post, to any Court, not being a High Court, having jurisdiction at the place where the defendant resides, by which it can be conveniently served, and shall fix such time for the appearance of the defendant as the case may require.

The Court to which the summons is sent shall, upon receipt thereof, proceed as if it had been issued by such Court and shall then return the summons to the Court from which it originally issued, together with the record (if any) made under this paragraph.

Service within Presidency towns and Rangoon of process issued by Mufassal Courts.

86. Whenever any process issued by any Court established beyond the limits of the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay and Rangoon is to be served within any such town, it shall be sent to the Court of Small Causes within whose jurisdiction the process is to be served, and such Court of Small Causes shall deal with such process in the same manner as if the process had been issued by itself, and shall then return the process to the Court from which it issued.

Service on defendant in jail.

87. If the defendant be in jail, the summons shall be delivered to the officer in charge of the jail in which the defendant is confined, and such officer shall cause the summons to be served upon the defendant.

The summons shall be returned to the Court from which it issued, with a statement of the service endorsed thereon and signed by the officer in charge of the jail and by the defendant.

Procedure if jail be in a different district.

88. If the jail in which the defendant is confined is not in the district in which the suit is instituted, the summons may be sent by post or otherwise to the officer in charge of such jail, and such officer shall cause the summons to be served upon the defendant, and shall return the summons to the Court from which it issued, with a statement of the service endorsed thereon, and signed as provided in section 87.

Service when defendant resides out of British India and has no agent to accept service.

89. If the defendant resides out of British India, and has no agent in British India empowered to accept the service, the summons shall be addressed to the defendant at the place where he is residing, and forwarded to him by post if there be postal communication between such place and the place where the Court is situate.

Service through British Resident or Agent of Government.

90. If there be a British Resident or Agent of Government in or for the territory in which the defendant resides, the summons may be sent to such Resident or Agent, by post or otherwise, for the purpose of being served upon the defendant; and if the Resident or Agent return the summons with an endorsement under his hand that the summons has been served on the defendant in manner hereinbefore directed, such endorsement shall be conclusive evidence of the service.

Substitution of letter for summons.

91. The Court may, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, substitute for the summons a letter signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints in this behalf, when the defendant is, in the opinion of the Court, of a rank which entitles him to such mark of consideration.

The letter shall contain all the particulars required to be stated in the summons, and, subject to the provisions contained in section 92, shall be treated in all respects as a summons.

Mode of sending such letter.

92. When a letter is so substituted for a summons, it may be sent to the defendant by post or by a special messenger selected by the Court; or in any other manner which the Court thinks fit; unless the defendant has an agent empowered to accept service of summons, in which case the letter may be delivered or sent to such agent.

Service of Process.

Process to be served at expense of party issuing it.

93. Every process issued under this Code shall be served at the expense of the party on whose behalf it is issued, unless the Court otherwise directs.

Costs of service.

The court-fee leviable for such service shall be levied before the process is issued.

Notices and orders in writing how served.

94. All notices and orders required by this Code to be given to or served on any person shall be in writing, and shall be served in the manner hereinbefore provided for the service of summons.

Postage.

Postage.

95. Postage, where chargeable on any notice, summons or letter issued under this Code and forwarded by post, and the fee for registering the same, shall be paid before the communication is forwarded.

CHAPTER VII.

OF THE APPEARANCE OF THE PARTIES AND CONSEQUENCE OF NON-APPEARANCE.

Parties to appear on day fixed in summons for defendant to appear and answer.

96. On the day fixed in the summons for the defendant to appear and answer, the parties shall be in attendance at the Court-house in person or by their respective pleaders, and the suit shall then be heard, unless the hearing be adjourned to a future day fixed by the Court.

Dismissal of suit where summons not served in consequence of plaintiff's failure to pay fee for issuing it.

97. If on the day so fixed for the defendant to appear and answer, it be found that the summons has not been served upon him in consequence of the failure of the plaintiff to pay the court-fee leviable for such service, the Court may order that the suit be dismissed:

Proviso.

Provided that no such order shall be passed, although the summons has not been served upon the defendant, if, on the day fixed for him to appear and answer, he attends in person or by a duly authorized agent, when he is allowed to appear by agent.

If neither party appear, suit to be dismissed.

98. If on the day fixed for the defendant to appear and answer, or on any other subsequent day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned, neither party appears, the suit shall be dismissed, unless the Judge, for reasons to be recorded under his hand, otherwise directs.

In such case plaintiff may bring fresh suit; or Court may restore the suit to its file.

99. Whenever a suit is dismissed under section 97 or section 98, the plaintiff may (subject to the law of limitation) bring a fresh suit; or if, within the period of thirty days from the date of the order dismissing the suit, he satisfies the Court that there was a sufficient excuse for his not paying the court-fee required within the time allowed for the service of the summons or for his non-appearance, as the case may be, the Court shall pass an order to set aside the dismissal and appoint a day for proceeding with the suit.

Procedure if only plaintiff appear.

when summons was duly served.

100. If the plaintiff appears and the defendant does not appear, the procedure shall be as follows:

(a) if it is proved that the summons was duly served, the Court may proceed ex parte:

when summons not duly served.

(b). If it is not proved that the summons was duly served, the Court shall direct a second summons to be issued and served on the defendant:

when summons served, but not in due time.

(c) If it is proved that the summons was served on the defendant, but not in sufficient time to enable him to appear and answer on the day fixed in the summons, the Court shall postpone the hearing of the suit to a future day to be fixed by the Court, and shall direct notice of such day to be given to the defendant.

If it is owing to the plaintiff's default that the summons was not served in sufficient time, the Court shall order him to pay the costs occasioned by such postponement.

Procedure where defendant appears on day of adjourned hearing, and assigns good cause for previous non-appearance.

101. If the Court has adjourned the hearing of the suit ex parte, and the defendant, at or before such hearing, appears and assigns good cause for his previous non-appearance, he may, upon such terms as the Court directs as to costs or otherwise, be heard in answer to the suit, as if he had appeared on the day fixed for his appearance.

Procedure where defendant only appears.

102. If the defendant appears and the plaintiff does not appear, the Court shall dismiss the suit, unless the defendant admits the claim, or part thereof, in which case the Court shall pass a decree against the defendant upon such admission, and where part only of the claim has been admitted, shall dismiss the suit so far as it relates to the remainder.

Decree against plaintiff by default bars fresh suit.

103. When a suit is wholly or partially dismissed under this section, the plaintiff shall be precluded from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action. But he may apply for an order to set the dismissal aside; and if it be proved that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall set aside the dismissal upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit.

No order shall be made under the second paragraph of this section unless the plaintiff has served the defendant with notice in writing of his application.

Procedure where defendant residing out of British India does not appear.

104. If, on the day fixed for the hearing of a suit against a defendant residing out of British India, who has no agent empowered to accept service of summons, or on any day to which the hearing has been adjourned, the defendant does not appear, the plaintiff may apply to the Court for permission to proceed with his suit, and the Court may direct that the plaintiff be at liberty to proceed with his suit in such manner and subject to such conditions as the Court thinks fit.

Procedure in case of non-attendance of one or more of several plaintiffs.

105. If there be more plaintiffs than one, and one or more of them appear, and the others do not appear, the Court may, at the instance of the plaintiff or plaintiffs appearing, permit the suit to proceed in the same way as if all the plaintiffs had appeared, and pass such order as it thinks fit.

Procedure in case of non-attendance of one or more of several defendants.

106. If there be more defendants than one, and one or more of them appear, and the others do not appear, the suit shall proceed, and the Court shall, at the time of passing judgment, make such order as it thinks fit with respect to the defendants who do not appear.

Consequence of non-attendance, without sufficient cause shewn, of party ordered to appear in person.

107. If a plaintiff or defendant, who has been ordered to appear in person under the provisions of section 66 or section 436, does not appear in person, or shew sufficient cause to the satisfaction of the Court for failing so to appear, he shall be subject to all the provisions of the foregoing sections applicable to plaintiffs and defendants, respectively, who do not appear.

Of setting aside Decrees ex parte.

Setting aside decree ex parte against defendant.

108. In any case in which a decree is passed ex parte against a defendant under section 100, he may apply to the Court by which the decree was made for an order to set it aside; and if it be proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the defendant was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall pass an order to set aside the decree upon such terms as to costs, payment into Court, or otherwise, as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit.

No decree to be set aside, without notice to opposite party.

109. No decree shall be set aside on any such application as aforesaid, unless notice thereof in writing has been served on the opposite party.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF WRITTEN STATEMENTS AND SET-OFF.

Written statements.

110. The parties may, at any time before or at the first hearing of the suit, tender written statements of their respective cases, and the Court shall receive such statements and place them on the record.

Particulars of set-off to be given in written statement.

111. If in a suit for the recovery of money the defendant claims to set-off against the plaintiff's demand any ascertained sum of money legally recoverable by him from the plaintiff, and if in such claim of the defendant against the plaintiff both parties fill the same character as they fill in the plaintiff's suit, the defendant may, at the first hearing of the suit, but not afterwards, unless permitted by the Court, tender a written statement containing the particulars of the debt sought to be set-off.

Inquiry.

The Court shall thereupon inquire into the same, and if it find that the case fulfils the requirements of the former part of this section, and that the amount claimed to be set-off does not exceed the pecuniary limits of its jurisdiction, the Court shall set-off the one debt against the other.

Effect of set-off.

Such set-off shall have the same effect as a plaint in a cross-suit, so as to enable the Court to pronounce a final judgment in the same suit, both on the original and on the cross-claim; but it shall not affect the lien upon the amount decreed of any pleader in respect of the costs payable to him under the decree.

Illustrations.

(a) A bequeaths Rs. 2,000 to B, and appoints C his executor and residuary legatee. B dies and D takes out administration to B's effects. C pays Rs. 1,000 as surety for D. Then D sues C for the legacy. C cannot set-off the debt of Rs. 1,000 against the legacy, for neither C nor D fills the same character with respect to the legacy as they fill with respect to the payment of the Rs. 1,000.

(b) A dies intestate and in debt to B. C takes out administration to A's effects, and B buys part of the effects from C. In a suit for the purchase-money by C against B, the latter cannot set-off the debt against the price, for C fills two different characters, one as the vendor to B, in which he sues B, and the other as representative to A.

(c) A sues B on a bill of exchange. B alleges that A has wrongfully neglected to insure B's goods and is liable to him in compensation which he claims to set-off. The amount not being ascertained cannot be set-off.

(d) A sues B on a bill of exchange for Rs. 500. B holds a judgment against A for Rs. 1,000. The two claims being both definite pecuniary demands may be set-off.

(e) A sues B for compensation on account of a trespass. B holds a promissory note for Rs. 1,000 from A and claims to set-off that amount against any sum that A may recover in the suit. B may do so, for as soon as A recovers, both sums are definite pecuniary demands.

(f) A and B sue C for Rs. 1,000. C cannot set-off a debt due to him by A alone.

(g) A sues B and C for Rs. 1,000. B cannot set-off a debt due to him alone by A.

(h) A owes the partnership firm of B and C Rs. 1,000. B dies leaving C surviving. A sues C for a debt of Rs. 1,500 due in his separate character. C may set-off the debt of Rs. 1,000.

112. Except as provided in the last preceding section, no written statement shall be received after the first hearing of the suit:.

No written statement to be received after first hearing unless called for by Court.

Provided that the Court may at any time require a written statement, or additional written statement, from any of the parties, and fix a time for presenting the same:

Court may at any time call for written statement.

Provided also that a written statement, or an additional written statement, may, with the permission of the Court, be received at any time for the purpose of answering written statements so required and presented.

113. If any party from whom a written statement is so required fails to present the same within the time fixed by the Court, the Court may pass a decree against him, or make such other order in relation to the suit as it thinks fit.

Procedure when party fails to present written statement called for by Court.

114. Written statements shall be as brief as the nature of the case admits, and shall not be argumentative, but shall be confined as much as possible to a simple narrative of the facts which the party by whom or on whose behalf the written statement is made believes to be material to the case, and which he either admits or believes he will be able to prove.

Frame of written statements.

Every such statement shall be divided into paragraphs, numbered consecutively, and each paragraph containing as nearly as may be a separate allegation.

115. Written statements shall be subscribed and verified in the manner hereinbefore provided for subscribing and verifying plaints, and no written statement shall be received unless it be so subscribed and verified.

Written statements to be subscribed and verified.

The provisions of section 52 as to examining witnesses as to the fact of signature shall apply in the case of written statements.

116. If it appear to the Court that any written statement, whether called for by the Court or spontaneously tendered, is argumentative or prolix, or contains matter irrelevant to the suit, the Court may amend it then and there, or may, by an order to be endorsed thereon, reject the same, or return it to the party by whom it was made for amendment within a time to be fixed by the Court, imposing such terms as to costs or otherwise as the Court thinks fit.

Rejection of argumentative, prolix or irrelevant written statements.

When any amendment is made under this section, the Judge shall attest it by his signature.

Attestation of amendments.

When a statement has been rejected under this section, the party making it shall not present another written statement, unless it be expressly called for or allowed by the Court.

Effect of rejection.

CHAPTER IX.

OF THE EXAMINATION OF THE PARTIES BY THE COURT.

117. At the first hearing of the suit, the Court shall ascertain from the defendant or his pleader whether he admits or denies the allegations of fact made in the plaint and shall ascertain from each party or his pleader whether he admits or denies such allegations of fact as are made in the written statement (if any) of the opposite party, and as are not expressly or by necessary implication admitted or denied by the party against whom they are made. The Court shall record such admissions and denials.

Ascertainment from each party whether allegations in written statements are admitted or denied.

118. At the first hearing of the suit, or at any subsequent hearing, any party appearing in person or present in Court, or any person able to answer any material questions relating to the suit by whom such party or his pleader is accompanied, may be examined orally by the Court; and the Court may, if it thinks fit, put in the course of such examination questions suggested by either party.

Oral examination of party, or companion of himself or his pleader.

119. The substance of the examination shall be reduced to writing by the Judge, and shall form part of the record.

Substance of examination to be written.

120. If the pleader of any party who appears by a pleader refuses or is unable to answer any material question relating to the suit which the Court is of opinion that the party whom he represents ought to answer, and is likely to be able to answer if interrogated in person, the Court may postpone the hearing of the suit to a future day, and direct that such party shall appear in person on such day.

Consequence of refusal or inability of pleader to answer.

If such party fails without lawful excuse to appear in person on the day so appointed, the Court may pass a decree against him, or make such order in relation to the suit as it thinks fit.

CHAPTER X.

OF DISCOVERY AND OF THE ADMISSION, INSPECTION, PRODUCTION, IMPOUNDING AND RETURN OF DOCUMENTS.

121. Any party may at any time by leave of the Court, deliver through the Court interrogatories in writing for the examination of the opposite party, or where there are more opposite parties than one, any one or more of such parties, with a note at the foot thereof stating which of such interrogatories each of such persons is required to answer:

Power to deliver interrogatories.

Provided that no party shall deliver more than one set of interrogatories to the same person without the permission of the Court, and that no defendant shall deliver interrogatories for the examination of the plaintiff unless such defendant has previously tendered a written statement and such statement has been received and placed on the record.

Service of interrogatories.

122. Interrogatories delivered under section 121 shall be served on the pleader (if any) of the party interrogated or in the manner hereinbefore provided for the service of summons, and the provisions of sections 79, 80, 81 and 82 shall, in the latter case, apply so far as may be practicable.

Inquiry into propriety of exhibiting interrogatories.

123. The Court, in adjusting the costs of the suit, shall, at the instance of any party, inquire or cause inquiry to be made into the propriety of delivering such interrogatories; and if it thinks that such interrogatories have been delivered unreasonably, vexatiously or at improper length, the costs occasioned by the said interrogatories and the answers thereto shall be borne by the party in fault.

Service of interrogatories on officer of corporation or company.

124. If any party to a suit be a body corporate or a joint stock company, whether incorporated or not, or any other body of persons empowered by law to sue or be sued, whether in his own name or in the name of any officer or other person, any opposite party may apply to the Court for an order allowing him to deliver interrogatories to any member or officer of such corporation, company or body, and an order may be made accordingly.

Power to strike out interrogatories as irrelevant, &c.

125. Any party called upon to answer interrogatories, whether by himself or by any such member or officer, may refuse to answer any interrogatory on the ground that it is irrelevant, or is not put bonâ fide for the purposes of the suit, or that the matter inquired after is not sufficiently material at that stage of the suit, or on any other like ground.

Time for filing affidavit in answer.

126. Interrogatories shall be answered by affidavit to be filed in Court within ten days from the service thereof or within such further time as the Judge may allow.

Procedure where a party omits to answer sufficiently.

127. If any person interrogated omits or refuses to answer, or answers insufficiently, any interrogatory, the party interrogating may apply to the Court for an order requiring him to answer or to answer further, as the case may be. And an order may be made requiring him to answer or to answer further either by affidavit or by viva voce examination as the Judge may direct: Provided that the Judge shall not require an answer to any interrogatory which in his opinion need not have been answered under section 125.

Power to demand admission of genuineness of documents.

128. Either party may, by a notice through the Court, within a reasonable time not less than ten days before the hearing, require the other party to admit (saving all just exceptions to the admissibility of such document in evidence) the genuineness of any document material to the suit.

The admission shall also be made in writing, signed by the other party or his pleader and filed in Court.

If such notice be not given, no costs of proving such document shall be allowed, unless the Judge otherwise orders.

If such notice is not complied with within four days after its being served, and the Judge thinks it reasonable that the admission should have been made, the party refusing shall bear the expense of proving such document, whatever may be the result of the suit.

Application for order for discovery of document.

129. The Court may, at any time during the pendency therein of any suit, order any party to the suit to declare by affidavit all the documents which are or have been in his possession or power relating to any matter in question in the suit, and any party to the suit may, at any time before the first hearing, apply to the Court for a like order.

Affidavit in answer to such order.

Every affidavit made under this section shall specify which, if any, of the documents therein mentioned the declarant objects to produce, together with the grounds of such objection.

Power to order production of documents during suit.

130. The Court may, at any time during the pendency therein of any suit, order the production by any party thereto of such of the documents in his possession or power relating to any matter in question in such suit or proceeding as the Court thinks right; and the Court may deal with such documents when produced in such manner as appears just.

Notice to produce for inspection documents referred to in plaint, &c.

131. Every party to a suit may at any time before or at the hearing thereof give notice through the Court to any other party in whose plaint, written statement or affidavits reference is made to any document, to produce such document in the presence of such officer as the Court appoints in this behalf, for the inspection of the party giving such notice or of his pleader, and to permit such party or pleader to take copies thereof.

Consequence of non-compliance with such notice.

No party failing to comply with such notice shall afterwards be at liberty to put any such document in evidence on his behalf in such suit, unless he satisfies the Court that such document relates only to his own title, or that he had some other and sufficient cause for not complying with such notice.

Party receiving such notice to deliver notice when and where inspection may be had.

132. The party to whom such notice is given shall, within ten days from the receipt thereof, deliver through the Court to the party giving the same a notice stating a time within three days from such delivery at which the documents or such of them as he does not object to produce, may be inspected at his pleader's office or some other convenient place, and stating which, if any, of the documents he objects to produce, and on what grounds.

Application for order of inspection.

133. If any party served with notice under section 131 omits to give notice under section 132 of the time for inspection, or objects to give inspection, or names an inconvenient place for inspection, the party desiring it may apply to the Court for an order of inspection.

Application to be founded on affidavit.

134. Except in the case of documents referred to in the plaint, written statement, or affidavit of the party against whom the application is made, or disclosed in his affidavit of documents, such application shall be founded upon an affidavit shewing (a) of what documents inspection is sought, (b) that the party applying is entitled to inspect them, and (c) that they are in the possession or power of the party against whom the application is made.

Power to order issue or question on which right to discovery depends to be first determined.

135. If the party from whom discovery of any kind or inspection is sought, objects to the same or any part thereof, and if the Court is satisfied that the right to such discovery or inspection depends on the determination of any issue or question in dispute in the suit, or that for any other reason it is desirable that any such issue or question should be determined before deciding upon the right to the discovery or inspection, the Court may order that the issue or question be determined first and reserve the question as to the discovery or inspection.

Consequences of failure to answer or give inspection.

136. If any party fail to comply with any order under this chapter to answer interrogatories or for discovery or inspection, which has been duly served, he shall, if a plaintiff, be liable to have his suit dismissed for want of prosecution, and if a defendant, to have his defence, if any, struck out, and to be placed in the same position as if he had not appeared and answered; and the party interrogating or seeking discovery or inspection may apply to the Court for an order to that effect, and the Court may make such order accordingly.

Any party failing to comply with any order under this chapter to answer interrogatories or for discovery or inspection which has been served personally upon him, shall also be deemed guilty of an offence under section 188 of the Indian Penal Code.

Court may send for papers from its own records or from other Courts.

137. The Court may, of its own accord, and may, in its discretion, upon the application of any of the parties to a suit, send for, either from its own records or from any other Court, the record of any other suit or proceeding, and inspect the same.

Every application made under this section shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be supported by an affidavit of the applicant or his pleader, shewing how the record is material to the suit in which the application is made, and that the applicant cannot without unreasonable delay or expense obtain a duly authenticated copy of the record or of such portion thereof as the applicant requires, or that the production of the original is necessary for the purposes of justice.

Nothing contained in this section shall be deemed to enable the Court to use in evidence any document which under the Indian Evidence Act would be inadmissible in the suit.

Documentary evidence to be in readiness at first hearing.

138. The parties or their pleaders shall bring with them and have in readiness at the first hearing of the suit, to be produced when called for by the Court, all the documentary evidence of every description in their possession or power, on which they intend to rely, and which has not already been filed in Court, and all documents which the Court at any time before such hearing has ordered to be produced.

Effect of non-production of documents.

139. No documentary evidence in the possession or power of any party the production of which has been called for under section 138, and which has not been produced, shall be received at any subsequent stage of the proceedings unless good cause be shewn to the satisfaction of the Court for the non-production thereof. And the Judge receiving any such evidence shall record his reasons for so doing.

Documents to be received by Court.

140. The Court shall receive the documents respectively produced by the parties at the first hearing, provided that the documents produced by each party be accompanied by an accurate list thereof prepared in such form as the High Court may from time to time direct.

Rejection of irrelevant or inadmissible documents.

The Court may at any stage of the suit reject any document which it considers irrelevant or otherwise inadmissible, recording the grounds of such rejection.

No documents to be placed on record unless proved.

141. No document shall be placed on the record unless it has been proved or admitted in accordance with the law of evidence for the time being in force. Every document so proved or admitted shall be endorsed with the number and title of the suit, the name of the person producing it, and the date on which it was produced. The Judge shall then endorse with his own hand a statement that it was proved against or admitted by (as the case may be) the person against whom it is used. The document shall then be filed as part of the record:

Proved documents to be marked and filed.

Entries in shop-books.

Provided that, if the document be an entry in a shop-book or other book, the party on whose behalf such book is produced may furnish a copy of the entry, which may be endorsed as aforesaid, and shall be filed as part of the record, and the Court shall mark the entry and shall then return the book to the person producing it.

All documents produced at the first hearing and not so proved or admitted shall be returned to the parties respectively producing them.

Rejected documents to be marked,

142. When a document so proved or admitted is relied on as evidence by either party, but the Court considers it inadmissible, it shall be further endorsed with the addition of the word "rejected," and the endorsement shall be signed by the Judge.

and returned, unless detained by Court.

The document shall then be returned to the party who produced it.

143. Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 62, 141 and 142, the Court may, if it see sufficient cause, direct any document or book produced before it in any suit to be impounded and kept in the custody of an officer of the Court, for such period and subject to such conditions as the Court thinks fit.

Court may order any document to be impounded.

144. In suits in which an appeal is not allowed, when the suit has been disposed of, and in suits in which an appeal is allowed, when the time for preferring an appeal from the decree has elapsed, or, if an appeal has been preferred, then after the appeal has been disposed of, any person, whether a party to the suit or not, desirous of receiving back any document produced by him in the suit, and placed on the record, shall, unless the document is impounded under section 143, be entitled to receive back the same:

After lapse of time for appeal, document admitted in evidence may be returned.

Provided that a document may be returned at any time before either of such events, if the person applying for such return delivers to the proper officer a certified copy of such document to be substituted for the original:

When document may be returned before time limited.

Provided also that no document shall be returned which, by force of the decree, has become void or useless.

Document not to be returned in certain cases.

On the return of a document which has been admitted in evidence, a receipt shall be given by the party receiving it, in a receipt-book to be kept for the purpose.

Receipt to be given for returned document.

145. The provisions herein contained as to documents shall, so far as may be, apply to all other material objects producible as evidence.

Provisions as to documents applied to material objects.

CHAPTER XI.

OF THE SETTLEMENT OF ISSUES.

146. Issues arise when a material proposition of fact or law is affirmed by the one party and denied by the other.

Framing of issues.

Material propositions are those propositions of law or fact which a plaintiff must allege in order to shew a right to sue.

Each material proposition affirmed by one party and denied by the other must form the subject of a distinct issue.

Issues are of two kinds: (a) issues of fact, (b) issues of law.

At the first hearing of the suit, the Court shall, after reading the plaint and the written statements, if any, and after such examination of the parties as may appear necessary, ascertain upon what material propositions of fact or of law the parties are at variance, and shall thereupon proceed to frame and record the issues on which the right decision of the case appears to the Court to depend.

When issues both of law and of fact arise in the same suit, and the Court is of opinion that the case may be disposed of on the issues of law only, it shall try those issues first, and for that purpose may, if it thinks fit, postpone the settlement of the issues of fact until after the issues of law have been determined.

Nothing in this section requires the Court to frame and record issues when the defendant at the first hearing of the suit makes no defence.

147. The Court may frame the issues from all or any of the following materials:—

Allegations from which issues may be framed.

(a) allegations made on oath by the parties, or by any persons present on their behalf, or made by the pleaders of such parties or persons;

(b) allegations made in the plaint or in the written statements (if any) tendered in the suit, or in answer to interrogatories delivered in the suit;

(c) the contents of documents produced by either party.

148. If the Court be of opinion that the issues cannot be correctly framed without the examination of some person not before the Court, or without the inspection of some document not produced in the suit, it may adjourn the framing of the issues to a future day, to be fixed by the Court, and may (subject to the rules contained in the Indian Evidence Act) compel the attendance of any person or the production of any document by the person in whose hands it may be, by summons or other process.

Court may examine witnesses or documents before framing issues.

149. The Court may at any time before passing a decree amend the issues or frame additional issues on such terms as it thinks fit, and all such amendments or additional issues as may be necessary for determining the controversy between the parties shall be so made or framed.

Power to amend, add and strike out issues.

The Court may also, at any time before passing a decree, strike out any issues that appear to it to be wrongly framed or introduced.

150. When the parties to a suit are agreed as to the question of fact or of law to be decided between them, they may state the same in the form of an issue, and enter into an agreement in writing

Questions of fact or law may by agreement be stated in the form of an issue.

(a) that upon the finding of the Court in the affirmative or the negative of such issue, a sum of money specified in the agreement, or to be ascertained by the Court, or in such manner as the Court may direct, shall be paid by one of the parties to the other of them, or that one of them be declared entitled to some right or subject to some liability specified in the agreement,

(b) that upon such finding some property specified in the agreement and in dispute in the suit shall be delivered by one of the parties to the other of them, or as that other may direct, or

(c) that upon such finding one or more of the parties shall do or abstain from doing some particular act, specified in the agreement, and relating to the matter in dispute.

Court if satisfied that the agreement was executed in good faith may pronounce judgment.

151. If the Court be satisfied, after making such inquiry as it deems proper,

(a) that the agreement was duly executed by the parties,

(b) that they have a substantial interest in the decision of such question as aforesaid, and

(c) that the same is fit to be tried and decided, it may proceed to record and try the issue, and state its finding or opinion thereon in the same manner as if the issue had been framed by the Court; and may, upon the finding or decision on such issue, pronounce judgment according to the terms of the agreement; and upon the judgment so given, decree shall follow and may be executed in the same way as if the judgment had been pronounced in a contested suit.

CHAPTER XII.

DISPOSAL OF THE SUIT AT THE FIRST HEARING.

If parties are not at issue on any question of law or fact.

152. If at the first hearing of a suit it appears that the parties are not at issue on any question of law or of fact, the Court may at once pronounce judgment.

If one of several defendants be not at issue with the plaintiff.

153. Where there are more defendants than one, and any one of the defendants is not at issue with the plaintiff on any question of law or fact, the Court may at once pronounce judgment for or against such defendant, and the suit shall proceed only against the other defendants.

If parties are at issue on questions of law or fact.

154. When the parties are at issue on some question of law or of fact, and issues have been framed by the Court as hereinbefore provided, if the Court be satisfied that no further argument or evidence than the parties can at once supply is required upon such of the issues as may be sufficient for the decision of the suit, and that no injustice will result from proceeding with the suit forthwith, the Court may proceed to determine such issues, and if the finding thereon is sufficient for the decision, may pronounce judgment accordingly, whether the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only or for the final disposal of the suit:

Court may determine issue and pronounce judgment.

Provided that where the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only, the parties or their pleaders are present and none of them object.

If the finding is not sufficient for the decision, the Court shall postpone the further hearing of the suit, and shall fix a day for the production of such further evidence, or for such further argument as the case requires.

If either party fails to produce his evidence, Court may pronounce judgment.

155. If the summons has been issued for the final disposal of the suit, and either party fails without sufficient cause to produce the evidence on which he relies, the Court may at once pronounce judgment, or may if it thinks fit, after framing and recording issues under section 146, adjourn the suit for the production of such evidence as may be necessary to its decision upon such issues.

Procedure where Court cannot pronounce judgment at first hearing.

CHAPTER XIII.

OF ADJOURNMENTS.

Court may grant time, or adjourn hearing.

156. The Court may, if sufficient cause be shewn, at any stage of the suit, grant time to the parties, or to any of them, and may from time to time adjourn the hearing of the suit.

Costs of adjournment.

In all such cases the Court shall fix a day for the further hearing of the suit, and may make such order as it thinks fit with respect to the costs occasioned by the adjournment:

Provided that, when the hearing of evidence has once begun, the hearing of the suit shall be continued from day to day until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined, unless the Court finds the adjournment of the hearing to be necessary for reasons to be recorded by the Judge with his own hand.

Procedure if parties fail to appear on day fixed.

157. If, on any day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned, the parties or any of them fail to appear, the Court may proceed to dispose of the suit in one of the modes directed in that behalf by chapter VII, or make such other order as it thinks fit.

Court may proceed notwithstanding either party fails to produce his evidence.

158. If any party to a suit to whom time has been granted fails to produce his evidence, or to cause the attendance of his witnesses, or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit, for which time has been allowed, the Court may, notwithstanding such default, proceed to decide the suit forthwith.

CHAPTER XIV.

OF THE SUMMONING AND ATTENDANCE OF WITNESSES.

Summons to attend to give evidence or produce documents.

159. The parties may, after the summons has been delivered for service on the defendant, whether it be for the settlement of issues only, or for the final disposal of the suit, obtain, on application to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf, before the day fixed for such settlement or disposal, as the case may be, summonses to persons whose attendance is required either to give evidence or to produce documents.

160. The party applying for a summons shall before the summons is granted and within a period to be fixed by the Court, pay into court such a sum of money as appears to the Court to be sufficient to defray the travelling and other expenses of the person summoned, in passing to and from the Court in which he is required to attend, and for one day's attendance.

Expenses of witnesses to be paid into court on applying for summons.

If the Court be subordinate to a High Court, regard shall be had, in fixing the scale of such expenses, to the rules (if any) laid down by competent authority.

Scale of expenses.

161. The sum so paid into court shall be tendered to the person summoned, at the time of serving the summons if it can be served personally.

Tender of expenses to witness.

162. If it appear to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf that the sum paid into court is not sufficient to cover such expenses, the Court may direct such further sum to be paid to the person summoned as appears to be necessary on that account; and, in case of default in payment, may order such sum to be levied by attachment and sale of the moveable property of the party obtaining the summons; or the Court may discharge the person summoned without requiring him to give evidence; or may both order such levy and discharge such person as aforesaid.

Procedure where insufficient sum paid in.

If it be necessary to detain the person summoned for a longer period than one day, the Court may from time to time order the party at whose instance he was summoned, to pay into Court such sum as is sufficient to defray the expenses of his detention for such further period, and in default of such deposit being made, may order such sum to be levied by attachment and sale of the moveable property of the party at whose instance he was summoned; or the Court may discharge the person summoned without requiring him to give evidence; or may both order such levy and discharge such person as aforesaid.

Expenses if witness detained more than one day.

163. Every summons for the attendance of a person to give evidence or produce a document shall specify the time and place at which he is required to attend, and also whether his attendance is required for the purpose of giving evidence or to produce a document, or for both purposes; and any particular document which the person summoned is called on to produce, shall be described in the summons with reasonable accuracy.

Time, place, and purpose of attendance to be specified in summons.

164. Any person may be summoned to produce a document, without being summoned to give evidence; and any person summoned merely to produce a document shall be deemed to have complied with the summons, if he cause such document to be produced instead of attending personally to produce the same.

Summons to produce document.

165. Any person present in court may be required by the Court to give evidence or to produce any document then and there in his actual possession or power.

Power to require persons present in Court to give evidence.

166. Every summons to a person to give evidence or produce a document shall be served as nearly as may be in manner hereinbefore prescribed for the service of summons on the defendant; and the rules contained in chapter VI as to proof of service shall apply in the case of all summonses served under this section.

Summons how served.

167. The service shall in all cases be made a sufficient time before the time specified in the summons for the attendance of the person summoned, to allow him a reasonable time for preparation and for travelling to the place at which his attendance is required.

Time for serving summons.

168. If the serving-officer certify to the Court that the summons for the attendance of a person, either to give evidence or to produce a document, cannot be served, the Court shall examine the serving-officer on oath touching the non-service and upon being satisfied that such evidence or production is material, and that the person for whose attendance the summons has been issued is absconding or keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding the service of the summons, may issue a proclamation requiring him to attend to give evidence, or produce the document, at a time and place to be named therein; and a copy of such proclamation shall be affixed on the outer door of the house in which he ordinarily resides.

If he does not attend at the time and place named in such proclamation, the Court may in its discretion, at the instance of the party on whose application the summons was issued, make an order for the attachment of the property of the person whose attendance is required, to such amount as the Court thinks fit, not exceeding the amount of the costs of attachment and of the fine which may be imposed under section 170:

Provided that no Court of Small Causes shall make an order for the attachment of immoveable property.

169. If, on the attachment of his property, such person appears and satisfies the Court that he did not abscond or keep out of the way to avoid service of the summons, and that he had not notice of the proclamation in time to attend at the time and place named therein, the Court shall direct that the property be released from attachment, and shall make such order as to the costs of the attachment as it thinks fit.

If witness appears, attachment may be withdrawn.

170. If such person does not appear, or appearing, fails to satisfy the Court that he did not abscond or keep out of the way to avoid service of the summons, and that he had not notice of the proclamation in time to attend at the time and place named therein, the Court may impose upon him such fine not exceeding five hundred rupees as the Court thinks fit, having regard to his condition in life and all the circumstances of the case, and may order the property attached, or any part thereof, to be sold for the purpose of satisfying all costs incurred in consequence of such attachment, together with the amount of the said fine, if any:

Procedure if witness fails to appear.

Provided that if the person whose attendance is required pays into court the costs and fine as aforesaid, the Court shall order the property to be released from attachment.

Court may of its own accord summon as witnesses strangers to suit.

171. Subject to the rules of this Code as to attendance and appearance and to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, if the Court at any time thinks it necessary to examine any person other than a party to the suit, and not named as a witness by a party to the suit, the Court may, of its own motion, cause such person to be summoned as a witness to give evidence, or to produce any document in his possession, on a day to be appointed, and may examine him as a witness or require him to produce such document.

Persons summoned to give evidence must attend.

172. Subject as last aforesaid, whoever is summoned to appear and give evidence in a suit must attend at the time and place named in the summons for that purpose, and whoever is summoned to produce a document must either attend to produce it, or cause it to be produced, at such time and place.

When they may depart.

173. No person so summoned and attending shall depart unless and until (a) he has been examined or has produced the document and the Court has risen, or (b) he has obtained the Court's leave to depart.

Consequences of non-attendance.

174. If any person on whom a summons to give evidence or produce a document has been served fails to comply with the summons, or if any person so summoned and attending departs in contravention of section 173, the Court may order him to be arrested and brought before the Court:

Provided that no such order shall be made when the Court has reason to believe that the person so failing had a lawful excuse for such failure.

When any person so brought before the Court fails to satisfy it that he had a lawful excuse for not complying with the summons, the Court may sentence him to fine not exceeding five hundred rupees.

Explanation.—Non-payment or non-tender of a sum sufficient to defray the expenses mentioned in section 160 shall be deemed a lawful excuse within the meaning of this section.

Consequences of refusal to give evidence or produce documents.

If any person so apprehended and brought before the Court cannot, owing to the absence of the parties or any of them, give the evidence or produce the document which he has been summoned to give or produce, the Court may require him to give reasonable bail or other security for his appearance at such time and place as it thinks fit, and on such bail or security being given, may release him.

Procedure when witness absconds.

175. If any person so failing to comply with a summons absconds or keeps out of the way, so that he cannot be apprehended and brought before the Court, the provisions of sections 168, 169 and 170 shall, mutatis mutandis, apply.

Person summoned to attend in person if so required.

176. No one shall be bound to attend in person to give evidence or to be examined in Court unless he resides—

(a) within the local limits of its ordinary original jurisdiction, or

(b) without such limits and at a place less than fifty or (where there is railway communication for five-sixths of the distance between the place where he resides and the place where the Court is situate) two hundred miles distant from the Court-house.

Consequence of refusal of party to give evidence when called on by the Court.

177. If any party to a suit present in Court refuses, without lawful excuse, when required by the Court, to give evidence, or to produce any document then and there in his actual possession or power, the Court may in its discretion either pass a decree against him, or make such other order in relation to the suit as the Court thinks fit.

Rules as to witnesses to apply to parties summoned.

178. Whenever any party to a suit is required to give evidence or to produce a document, the rules as to witnesses contained in this Code shall apply to him so far as they are applicable.

CHAPTER XV.

OF THE HEARING OF THE SUIT AND EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

Statement and production of evidence by party having right to begin.

179. On the day fixed for the hearing of the suit, or on any other day to which the hearing is adjourned, the party having the right to begin shall state his case and produce his evidence in support of the issues which he is bound to prove.

Rules as to right to begin.

Explanation.—The plaintiff has the right to begin unless where the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff and contends that either in point of law or on some additional facts alleged by the defendant the plaintiff is not entitled to any part of the relief which he seeks, in which case the defendant has the right to begin.

Statement and production of evidence by other party.

Reply by party beginning.

180. The other party shall then state his case and produce his evidence (if any). The party beginning is then entitled to reply.

Where there are several issues, the burden of proving some of which lies on the other party, the party beginning may, at his option, either produce his evidence on those issues or reserve it by way of answer to the evidence produced by the other party. In the latter case the party beginning may produce evidence on those issues after the other party has produced all his evidence, and the other party may then reply specially on the evidence so produced by the party beginning; but the party beginning will then be entitled to reply generally on the whole case.

Witnesses to be examined in open Court.

181. The evidence of the witnesses in attendance shall be taken orally in open Court in the presence and under the personal direction and superintendence, of the Judge.

How evidence shall be taken in appealable cases.

182. In cases in which an appeal is allowed, the evidence of each witness shall be taken down in writing, in the language of the Court, by or in the presence and under the personal direction and superintendence of the Judge, not ordinarily in the form of question and answer, but in that of a narrative, and, when completed, shall be read over in the presence of the Judge and of the witness, and also in the presence of the parties or their pleaders, and the Judge shall, if necessary, correct the same and shall sign it.

When witness may require his deposition be interpreted.

183. If the evidence is taken down under section 182 in a language different from that in which it was given, and the witness does not understand the language in which it is taken down, the evidence as taken down in writing shall be interpreted to him in the language in which it was given.

Memorandum when evidence is not taken down by Judge.

184. In cases in which the evidence is not taken down in writing by the Judge, he shall be bound, as the examination of each witness proceeds, to make a memorandum of the substance of what each witness deposes, and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Judge with his own hand, and shall form part of the record.

When evidence may be taken in English.

185. Where English is not the language of the Court, but all the parties to the suit who appear in person, and the pleaders of such as appear by pleaders, do not object to have such evidence as is given in English taken down in English, the Judge may so take it down with his own hand.

Any particular question and answer may be taken down.

186. The Court may of its own motion or on the application of any party or his pleader take down, or cause to be taken down, any particular question and answer, or any objection to any question, if there appear any special reason for so doing.

Questions objected to.

187. If any question put to a witness be objected to by a party or his pleader, and the Court allows the same to be put, the Judge shall take down the question, the answer, the objection and the name of the person making it, together with the decision of the Court thereon.

Remarks on demeanour of witnesses.

188. The Court may record such remarks as it thinks material respecting the demeanour of any witness while under examination.

Memorandum of evidence in unappealable cases.

189. In cases in which an appeal is not allowed, it shall not be necessary to take down the evidence of the witnesses in writing at length; but the Judge, as the examination of each witness proceeds, shall make a memorandum of the substance of what he deposes, and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Judge with his own hand, and shall form part of the record.

Judge unable to make such memorandum to record reason of his inability.

190. If the Judge be rendered unable to make a memorandum as above required by this chapter, he shall cause the reason of such inability to be recorded, and shall cause the memorandum to be made in writing from his dictation in open Court.

Every memorandum so made shall form part of the record.

Power to deal with evidence taken down by Judge removed before conclusion of suit.

191. Where the Judge taking down any evidence, or causing any memorandum to be made under this chapter, dies or is removed from the Court before the conclusion of the suit, his successor may, if he thinks fit, deal with such evidence or memorandum as if he himself had taken it down or caused it to be made.

Power to examine witness immediately.

192. If a witness be about to leave the jurisdiction of the Court, or if other sufficient cause be shewn to the satisfaction of the Court why his evidence should be taken immediately, the Court may, upon the application of either party or of the witness, at any time after the institution of the suit, take the evidence of such witness in manner hereinbefore provided.

Where such evidence is not taken forthwith and in the presence of the parties, such notice as the Court thinks sufficient of the day fixed for the examination shall be given to the parties.

The evidence so taken shall be read over to the witness, and, if he admits it to be correct, shall be signed by him, and may then be read at any hearing of the suit.

Court may recall and examine witness.

193. The Court may at any stage of the suit recall any witness who has been examined and who has not departed in accordance with section 173, and may (subject to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act) put such questions to him as the Court thinks fit.

CHAPTER XVI.

OF AFFIDAVITS.

Power to order any point to be proved by affidavit.

194. Any Court of first instance and any Appellate Court may at any time for sufficient reason order that any particular fact or facts may be proved by affidavit, or that the affidavit of any witness may be read at the hearing, on such conditions as the Court thinks reasonable:

Provided that where it appears to the Court that either party bonâ fide desires the produtions of a witness for cross-examination, and that such witness can be produced, an order shall not be made authorizing the evidence of such witness to be given by affidavit.

When evidence may be given by affidavit.

195. Upon any application evidence may be given by affidavit, but the Court may at the instance of either party order the attendance for cross-examination of the declarant.

Such attendance shall be in Court unless the declarant is exempted under this Code from personal appearance in Court, or the Court otherwise directs.

Matters to which affidavits shall be confined.

196. Affidavits shall be confined to such facts as the declarant is able of his own knowledge to prove, except on interlocutory applications, on which statements of his belief may be admitted, provided that reasonable grounds thereof be set forth.

The costs of every affidavit which shall unnecessarily set forth matters of hearsay or argumentative matter, or copies of or extracts from documents, shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be paid by the party producing the same.

Oath of declarant by whom to be administered.

197. In the case of any affidavit under this Code—

(a) any Court or Magistrate, or

(b) any officer whom a High Court may appoint in this behalf, or

(c) any officer appointed by any other Court which the Local Government has generally or specially empowered in this behalf, may administer the oath of the declarant.

CHAPTER XVII.

OF JUDGMENT AND DECREE.

Judgment when pronounced.

198. The Court, after the evidence has been duly taken and the parties have been heard either in person or by their respective pleaders or recognized agents, shall pronounce judgment in open Court, either at once or on some future day, of which due notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders.

Power to pronounce judgment written by Judge's predecessor.

199. A Judge may pronounce a judgment written by his predecessor, but not pronounced, and in such case he shall not be bound by section 198, except as to giving notice.

Language of judgment.

200. The judgment shall be written in the language of the Court, or in English, or in the Judge's mother-tongue.

Translation of judgment.

201. Whenever the judgment is written in any language other than that of the Court, the judgment shall, if any of the parties so require, be translated into the language of the Court, and the translation shall also be signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints in this behalf.

Judgment to be dated and signed.

202. The judgment shall be dated and signed by the Judge in open Court at the time of pronouncing it, and shall not be altered or added to, save to correct verbal errors or to supply some accidental defect not affecting a material part of the case, or on review.

Judgments of Small Cause Courts.

203. The judgments of the Courts of Small Causes need not contain more than the points for determination and the decision thereupon.

Judgments of other Courts.

The judgments of all other Courts shall contain a concise statement of the case, the points for determination, the decision thereon, and the reasons for such decision.

Court to state its decision on each issue.

204. In suits in which issues have been framed, the Court shall state its finding or decision, with the reasons thereof, upon each separate issue, unless the finding upon any one or more of the issues be sufficient for the decision of the suit.

Exception

Date of decree.

205. The decree shall bear date the day on which the judgment was pronounced; and when the Judge has satisfied himself that the decree has been drawn up in accordance with the judgment, he shall sign the decree.

Contents of decree.

206. The decree must agree with the judgment: it shall contain the number of the suit, the names and descriptions of the parties, and particulars of the claim, as stated in the register, and shall specify clearly the relief granted or other determination of the suit.

The decree shall also state the amount of costs incurred in the suit, and by what parties and in what proportions such costs are to be paid.

Power to amend decree.

If the decree is found to be at variance with the judgment, or if any clerical or arithmetical error be found in the decree, the Court shall, of its own motion or on that of any of the parties, amend the decree so as to bring it into conformity with the judgment or to correct such error: provided that reasonable notice have been given to the parties or their pleaders of the proposed amendment.

Decree for recovery of portion of immoveable property.

207. When the subject-matter of the suit is immoveable property, and such property is identified by boundaries or numbers in a record of settlement or survey, if the decree be for the recovery of a portion only of such property, it shall specify the boundaries or number of such portion.

Decree for delivery of moveable property.

208. When the suit is for moveable property, if the decree be for the delivery of such property, it shall also state the amount of money to be paid as an alternative if delivery cannot be had.

In suits for money, decree may order certain interest to be paid on principal sum adjudged.

209. When the suit is for a sum of money due to the plaintiff, the Court may, in the decree, order interest at such rate as the Court deems reasonable to be paid on the principal sum adjudged, from the date of the suit to the date of the decree, in addition to any interest adjudged on such principal sum for any period prior to the institution of the suit, with further interest at such rate as the Court deems reasonable on the aggregate sum so adjudged, from the date of the decree to the date of payment, or to such earlier date as the Court thinks fit.

Payment by instalments.

210. In all decrees for the payment of money, the Court may for any sufficient reason order that the amount shall be paid by instalments, with or without interest.

When Court may order payment by instalments.

And after the passing of any such decree the Court may, on the application of the judgment-debtor, and with the consent of the decree-holder, order that the amount decreed be paid by instalments on such terms as to the payment of interest, the attachment of the property of the defendant, or the taking of security from him, or otherwise, as it thinks fit:

Save as provided in this section and section 206, no decree shall be altered at the request of parties.

In suits for land, Court may decree payment of mesne profits with interest.

211. When the suit is for land or other property yielding rent or other profit, the Court may provide in the decree for the payment of rent or mesne profits in respect of such property from the institution of the suit until the delivery of possession to the party in whose favour the decree is made, or until the expiration of three years from the date of the decree (whichever event first occurs), with interest thereupon at such rate as the Court thinks fit.

Explanation.—'Mesne profits' of property mean those profits which the person in wrongful possession of such property actually received, or might with ordinary diligence have received, therefrom.

Court may determine amount of mesne profits prior to passing decree, or may reserve inquiry.

212. When the suit is for immoveable property and for mesne profits which have accrued on the property during a period prior to the institution of the suit, and the amount of such profits is disputed, the Court may either determine the amount by the decree itself, or may pass a decree for the property and direct an inquiry into the amount of mesne profits, and dispose of the same on further orders.

Administration-suit.

213. When the suit is for an account of any property and for its due administration under the decree of the Court, the Court, before making the decree, shall order such accounts and inquiries to be taken and made, and give such other directions as it thinks fit.

In the administration by the Court of the property of any person who dies after this Code comes into force, if such property proves to be insufficient for the payment in full of his debts and liabilities, the same rules shall be observed as to the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors and as to debts and liabilities proveable, and as to the valuation of annuities and future and contingent liabilities respectively, as may be in force for the time being with respect to the estates of persons adjudged insolvent;

And all persons who in any such case would be entitled to be paid out of such property may come in under the decree for its administration, and make such claims against the same as they may respectively be entitled to by virtue of this Code.

Applications under section 265 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, shall be deemed to be suits within the meaning of this section.

Suit to enforce right of pre-emption.

214. When the suit is to enforce a right of pre-emption in respect of a particular sale of property, and the Court finds for the plaintiff, if the amount of purchase-money has not been paid into Court, the decree shall specify a day on or before which it shall be so paid, and shall declare that on payment of such purchase-money, together with the costs (if any) decreed against him, the plaintiff shall obtain possession of the property, but that if such money and costs are not so paid, the suit shall stand dismissed with costs.

Suit for dissolution of partnership.

215. When the suit is for the dissolution of a partnership, the Court, before making its decree, may pass an order fixing the day on which the partnership shall stand dissolved, and directing such accounts to be taken and other acts to be done as it thinks fit.

If set-off be allowed.

216. If the defendant has set-off the amount of a debt against the claim of the plaintiff, and such set-off has been allowed, the decree shall state what amount is due to the plaintiff and what amount (if any) is due to the defendant, and shall be for the recovery of any sum which appears to be due to either party.

Effect of decree.

The decree of the Court with respect to any sum awarded to the defendant shall have the same effect, and be subject to the same rules in respect of appeal or otherwise, as if such sum had been claimed by the defendant in a separate suit against the plaintiff.

Certified copies of decree and judgment to be furnished.

217. Certified copies of the judgment and decree shall be furnished to the parties on application to the Court, and at their expense.

CHAPTER XVIII.

OF COSTS.

Costs of applications.

305. When an order for the sale of immoveable property has been made, if the judgment-debtor can satisfy the Court that there is reason to believe that the amount of the decree may be raised by mortgage or lease or private sale of such property, or some part thereof, or of any other immoveable property of the judgment-debtor, the Court may on his application postpone the sale of property comprised in the order for sale for such period as it thinks proper, to enable him to raise the amount.

Certificate to judgment-debtor.

In such case the Court shall grant a certificate to the judgment-debtor authorizing him, within a period to be mentioned therein, to make the proposed mortgage, lease or sale: provided that all moneys payable under such mortgage, lease or sale, shall be paid into Court and not to the judgment-debtor.

Where such certificate has been granted and so long as it remains in force, the provisions of section 248 shall not apply.

Deposit by purchaser of immoveable property.

306. On every sale of immoveable property under this chapter, the person declared to be the purchaser shall pay immediately after such declaration a deposit of twenty-five per centum on the amount of his purchase-money to the officer conducting the sale, and, in default of such deposit, the property shall forthwith be put up again and sold.

Effect of objection being disallowed and of its being allowed.

312. If no such application as is mentioned in the last preceding section be made, or if such application be made and the objection be disallowed, the Court shall pass an order confirming the sale as regards the parties to the suit and the purchaser.

If such application be made, and if the objection be allowed, the Court shall pass an order setting aside the sale.

No suit to set aside on the ground of such irregularity an order passed under this section shall be brought by the party against whom such order has been made.

Power to apply to set aside the sale.

313. The purchaser at any such sale may apply to the Court to set aside the sale, on the ground that the person whose property purported to be sold had no saleable interest therein, and the Court may make such order as it thinks fit: provided that no order to set aside a sale shall be made, unless the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder have had opportunity of being heard against such order.

Confirmation of sale.

314. No sale of immoveable property shall become absolute until it has been confirmed by the Court.

If sale set aside, price to be returned to purchaser.

315. When a sale of immoveable property is set aside under section 312 or 313, or when it is found that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property which purported to be sold and the purchaser is for that reason deprived of it, the purchaser shall be entitled to receive back his purchase-money (with or without interest as the Court may direct) from any person to whom the purchase-money has been paid.

The repayment of the said purchase-money and of the interest (if any) allowed by the Court may be enforced against such person under the rules provided by this Code for the execution of a decree for money.

Delivery of immoveable property in occupancy of judgment-debtor.

318. When the property sold is in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor or of some person on his behalf, or of some person claiming under a title created by the judgment-debtor subsequently to the attachment of such property, and a certificate in respect thereof has been granted under section 316, the Court shall, on application by the purchaser, order delivery to be made by putting the purchaser or any person whom he may appoint to receive delivery on his behalf in possession of the property, and, if need be, by removing any person who refuses to vacate the same.

Delivery of immoveable property in the occupancy of tenant.

319. When the property sold is in the occupancy of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same, and a certificate in respect thereof has been granted under section 316, the Court shall order delivery thereof to be made by affixing a copy of the certificate of sale in some conspicuous place on the property, and proclaiming to the occupant by beat of drum or in such other mode as may be customary, at some convenient place, that the interest of the judgment-debtor has been transferred to the purchaser.

or the execution of any particular kind of such decrees, or the execution of decrees ordering the sale of any particular kind of, or interest in, immoveable property, shall be transferred to the Collector; and rescind or modify any such declaration.

The Local Government may also from time to time prescribe rules for the transmission of the decree from the Court to the Collector, and for regulating the procedure of the Collector and his subordinates in executing the same, and for retransmitting the decree from the Collector to the Court.

Power to prescribe rules as to transmission, execution and retransmission of decrees.

Power of Collector as to sale of land in execution of decree.

321. Whenever the execution of a decree has been so transferred, the Collector may—

(a) sell the property comprised in the decree by public auction and either in one or more lots as he thinks fit:

(b) fix a reasonable reserved price for each lot:

(c) adjourn the sale for a reasonable time, whenever he deems the adjournment necessary for the purpose of obtaining a fair price for the property, recording his reasons for such adjournment:

(d) buy in the property offered for sale and re-sell the same.

Powers of Collector as to execution of certain money-decrees so transferred.

322. Whenever the execution of a decree not being a decree directing the sale of immoveable property in pursuance of a contract specifically affecting the same, but being a decree for money in satisfaction of which the Court has ordered the sale of immoveable property, has been so transferred, the Collector may either proceed as the Court would proceed under section 305, or if he has reason to believe that the judgment-debts of the judgment-debtor can be discharged without a sale of the whole of such property, the Collector may (notwithstanding any order under section 303, but subject to such rules as may from time to time be made in this behalf by the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority) raise the amount necessary to discharge such debts with interest thereon according to the decree, or, if the decree makes no provision as to interest, then with interest (if any) at such rate as he thinks fit,

(a) by letting in perpetuity, or for a term, on payment of a premium equivalent to such amount, the whole or any part of the judgment-debtor's immoveable property: or

(b) by mortgaging the whole or any part of such property: or

(c) by selling part of such property: or

(e) partly by one of such modes and partly by another or others of them.

For the purpose of managing under this section the whole or any part of such property, the Collector may exercise all the powers of its owner.

Procedure of Collector.

323. In the case of a decree for money, if the Collector proposes to proceed under section 322, he shall publish a notice in the language of the district, calling upon all persons holding decrees against the judgment-debtor to notify the same in writing to the Collector within sixty days from the date of such publication.

Such notice shall be published by being posted in the court-house of the Court which made the order under section 304, and at such other places (if any) as the Collector thinks fit.

So long as any letting or management under section 322 continues, the judgment-debtor and his representative in interest shall be incompetent to mortgage, charge, lease or alienate the property so let or managed, or any part thereof.

Sale by Collector.

324. If on the expiration of the letting or management, the amount necessary to discharge such debts in full with the interest (if any) payable thereon has not been raised, the Collector shall notify the fact in writing to the judgment-debtor or his representative, stating at the same time that, if the balance necessary to discharge such debts and interest is not paid to the Collector within six weeks of the date of such notice, the Collector will proceed to sell the said property; and if on the expiration of the said six weeks the said balance is not so paid, the Collector shall sell such property accordingly.

Sale, &c., to be reported to Court by Collector.

325. Whenever the Collector sells any property pursuant to the said order of sale or exercises any of the powers conferred upon him by section 321 or 322, he shall inform the Court which made such order of the fact of such sale or exercise, and shall render accounts to such Court of his receipts and payments in respect of the said property, and shall hold the balance at the disposal of such Court.

Application of balance.

Such balance (after deducting therefrom any debts due or liabilities incurred to Government by the judgment-debtor) shall be applied rateably in discharging the claims of all the decree-holders who have complied with the said notice; and no other person making any claim against the property so let or managed, or against such proceeds, shall be entitled to be paid thereout.

When Court may authorize Collector to stay public sale of land.

326. When, in any local area in which no declaration under section 320 is in force, the property attached consists of land or of a share in land, and the Collector represents to the Court that the public sale of the land or share is objectionable, and that satisfaction of the decree may be made within a reasonable period by a temporary alienation or management of the land or share, the Court may authorize the Collector to provide for such satisfaction in the manner recommended by him, instead of proceeding to a sale of the land or share. The provisions of sections 322 to 325 (both inclusive) shall in such case apply to the Collector.

Local rules as to sales of land in execution of decrees for money.

327. The Local Government may from time to time, with the sanction of the Governor General in Council, make special rules for any local area imposing conditions in respect of sale of any class of interests in land in execution of decrees for money, where such interests are so uncertain or undetermined as in the opinion of the Local Government to make it impossible to fix their value:

and if, when this Code comes into operation in any local area, any special rules as to sale of land in execution of decrees are in force therein, the Local Government may continue such rules in force, or may from time to time, with the sanction of the Governor General in Council, modify the same.

All rules so made or continued, and all such modifications of the same, shall be published in the local official Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law.

tion of resistance was occasioned by the judgment-debtor or by some person at his instigation, the Court shall inquire into the matter of the complaint, and pass such order as it thinks fit.

330. If the Court is satisfied that the resistance or obstruction was without any just cause, and that the complainant is still resisted or obstructed in obtaining possession of the property by the judgment-debtor or some other person at his instigation, the Court may, at the instance of the decree-holder and without prejudice to any penalty to which such judgment-debtor or other person may be liable, under the Indian Penal Code or any other law, for such resistance or obstruction, commit the judgment-debtor or such other person to jail for a term which may extend to thirty days, and direct that the decree-holder be put into possession of the property.

Procedure when obstruction continues.

331. If the resistance or obstruction has been occasioned by any person other than the judgment-debtor claiming in good faith to be in possession of the property on his own account or on account of some person other than the judgment-debtor, the claim shall be numbered and registered as a suit between the decree-holder as plaintiff and the claimant as defendant; and the Court shall, without prejudice to any proceedings to which the claimant may be liable under the Indian Penal Code or any other law for the punishment of such resistance or obstruction, proceed to investigate the claim in the same manner and with the like power as if a suit for the property had been instituted by the decree-holder against the claimant under the provisions of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, section 9, and shall pass such order as it thinks fit for executing or staying execution of the decree.

332. If any person other than the defendant is dispossessed of any property in execution of a decree, and such person disputes the right of the decree-holder to dispossess him of such property under the decree, on the ground that the property was bond fide in his possession on his own account or on account of some person other than the judgment-debtor, and that it was not comprised in the decree, or that, if it was comprised in the decree, he was not a party to the suit in which the decree was passed, he may apply to the Court.

Procedure in case of person dispossessed of property disputing right of decree-holder to be put into possession.

If, after examining the applicant, it appears to the Court that there is probable cause for making the application, the application shall be numbered and registered as a suit between the applicant as plaintiff and the decree-holder as defendant, and the Court shall proceed to investigate the matter in dispute in the same manner and with the like power as if a suit for the property had been instituted by the applicant against the decree-holder under the provisions of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, section 9, and shall pass such order as it thinks fit for executing or staying execution of the decree.

In hearing applications under this section the Court shall confine itself to the grounds of objection above specified.

Nothing in this section or section 330 applies to a person to whom the judgment-debtor has transferred the property after the institution of the suit in which the decree is made.

333. The order passed under either of sections 331 and 332 shall be in the nature of, and shall have the same force as, a decree in a suit, and shall be subject to the same conditions as to appeal or otherwise.

Orders passed under sections 331 and 332 to have force of decrees, and to be subject to appeal.

334. If the purchaser of any immoveable property sold in execution of a decree be resisted or obstructed by the judgment-debtor or any one on his behalf in obtaining possession of the property, the provisions of this chapter relating to resistance or obstruction to a decree-holder in obtaining possession of the property adjudged to him, shall be applicable.

Resisting or obstructing purchasers in obtaining possession of immoveable property.

335. If it appear that the resistance or obstruction was occasioned by any person other than the judgment-debtor, not in possession of the property sold, but claiming a right thereto as proprietor, mortgagee, lessee or under any other title, the Court, on the complaint of the purchaser, shall enquire into the matter of the resistance or obstruction, and pass such order thereon as it thinks fit.

Obstruction by claimant other than defendant.

The party against whom such order is passed may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the present possession of the property, but subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be conclusive.

I.—Of Arrest and Imprisonment.

336. A judgment-debtor may be arrested in execution of a decree at any hour and on any day, and shall as soon as practicable be brought before the Court, and his imprisonment may be in the civil jail of the district in which the Court ordering the imprisonment is situate, or, when such jail does not afford suitable accommodation, in any other place which the Local Government may appoint for the confinement of persons ordered to be imprisoned by the Courts of such district:

Place of judgment-debtor's imprisonment.

Provided that no house shall be entered after sunset and before sunrise for the purpose of making an arrest under this section:

Arrest in houses.

Provided also that when the decree in execution of which a judgment-debtor is arrested is a decree for money and the judgment-debtor pays the amount of the decree and the costs of the arrest to the officer arresting him, such officer shall at once release him.

Proviso.

The Local Government may, by notification published in the official Gazette, direct that whenever a judgment-debtor is arrested in execution of a decree for money and brought before the Court under this section, the Court shall inform him that he may apply under chapter XX to be declared an insolvent, and that he will be discharged if he has not committed any act of bad faith regarding the subject of his application and if he places all his property in possession of a receiver appointed by the Court.

If after such publication the judgment-debtor express his intention so to apply, and if he furnish sufficient security that he will appear when called upon, and that he will within one month apply under section 344 to be declared an insolvent, the Court shall release him from arrest:

But if he fails so to apply, the Court may either direct the security to be realised or commit him to jail in execution of the decree.

Warrant for arrest to direct judgment-debtor to be brought up.

337. Every warrant for the arrest of the judgment-debtor shall direct the officer entrusted with its execution to bring him before the Court with all convenient speed, unless the amount which he has been ordered to pay, together with the interest thereon and the costs, if any, to which he is liable, be sooner paid.

Scales of subsistence-allowances.

338. The Local Government may from time to time prescribe scales, graduated according to rank, race and nationality, of monthly allowances payable for the subsistence of judgment-debtors.

Judgment-debtor's subsistence-money.

339. No judgment-debtor shall be arrested in execution of a decree unless and until the decree-holder pays into court such sum as, having regard to the scales so fixed, the Judge thinks sufficient for the subsistence of the judgment-debtor from his arrest until he can be brought before the Court.

When a judgment-debtor is committed to jail in execution of a decree, the Court shall fix for his subsistence such monthly allowance as he may be entitled to according to the said scales, or where no such scales have been fixed, as it considers sufficient with reference to the class to which he belongs.

The monthly allowance fixed by the Court shall be supplied by the party on whose application the decree has been executed, to the proper officer of the Court by monthly payments in advance before the first day of each month.

The first payment shall be made for such portion of the current month as remains unexpired before the judgment-debtor is committed to jail.

Subsistence-money to be added to amount of decree.

340. Sums disbursed by the decree-holder for the subsistence of the judgment-debtor in jail shall be deemed to be costs on the suit:

Provided that the judgment-debtor shall not be detained in jail or arrested on account of any sum so disbursed.

Release of judgment-debtor.

341. The judgment-debtor shall be discharged from jail,

(a) on the decree being fully satisfied, or

(b) at the request of the person on whose application he has been imprisoned, or

(c) on such person omitting to pay the allowance as hereinbefore directed, or

(d) if the judgment-debtor be declared an insolvent, as hereinafter provided, or (e) when the term of his imprisonment as limited by section 342 is fulfilled:

Provided that in the first, second, third and fourth cases mentioned in this section, the judgment-debtor shall not be discharged without the order of the Court.

A judgment-debtor discharged under this section is not thereby discharged from his debt, but he cannot be re-arrested under the decree in execution of which he was imprisoned.

Imprisonment not to exceed six months.

342. No person shall be imprisoned in execution of a decree for a longer period than six months; or for a longer period than six weeks if the decree be for the payment of a sum of money not exceeding fifty rupees.

When not to exceed six weeks.

Endorsement on warrant.

343. The officer entrusted with the execution of the warrant shall endorse thereupon the day on, and the manner in, which it was executed; and if the latest day specified in the warrant for the return thereof has been exceeded, the reason of the delay; or if it was not executed, the reason why it was not executed, and shall return the warrant with such endorsement to the Court.

If the endorsement is to the effect that such officer is unable to execute the warrant, the Court shall examine him on oath touching his alleged inability, and may, if it think fit, summon and examine witnesses as to such inability and shall record the result.

CHAPTER XX.

OF INSOLVENT JUDGMENT-DEBTORS.

Power to apply to be declared an insolvent.

344. Any person arrested or imprisoned in execution of a decree for money may apply in writing to be declared an insolvent.

Such application shall be made to the District Court which ordered his arrest or imprisonment, or when the District Court did not make such order, then to the District Court to which the Court that made the order is subordinate.

Contents of application.

345. The application shall set forth—

(a) the fact of such person's arrest or imprisonment, the Court by whose order he was arrested or imprisoned, and the place in which he is in custody;

(b) the amount, kind and particulars of his property, and the value of any such property not consisting of money;

(c) the place or places in which such property is to be found;

(d) his willingness to put it at the disposal of the Court;

(e) the amount and particulars of all pecuniary claims against him; and (f) the names and residences of his creditors, so far as they are known to or can be ascertained by him.

Subscription and verification of application.

346. The application shall be subscribed and verified by the applicant in manner hereinbefore prescribed for subscribing and verifying plaints.

Service on decree-holder of copy of application and notice.

347. The Court shall fix a day for hearing the application, and shall cause a copy thereof, with a notice in writing of the time and place at which it will be heard, to be stuck up in Court and served at the applicant's expense on the holder of the decree in execution of which he was arrested or imprisoned, or on the pleader of such decree-holder, and on the other creditors (if any) mentioned in the application.

The Court may, if it thinks fit, publish at the applicant's expense the application in such official Gazettes and public newspapers as it thinks fit.

348. The Court may also, if it thinks fit, cause a like copy and notice to be served on any other person alleging himself to be a creditor of the applicant and applying for leave to be heard on the application.

Power to serve other creditors.

349. Where the applicant is under arrest, the Court may, pending the hearing under section 350, order him to be immediately committed to jail; or leave him in the custody of the officer to whom the service of the warrant was entrusted.

Powers of Court as to applicant under arrest.

350. On the day so fixed, or on any subsequent day to which the Court may adjourn the hearing, the Court shall examine the applicant, in the presence of the persons on whom such notice has been served or their pleaders, as to his then circumstances and as to his future means of payment, and shall hear the said decree-holder, the other creditors mentioned in the application and the other persons (if any) alleging themselves to be creditors, in opposition to the applicant's discharge; and may, if it thinks fit, grant time to the said decree-holder and other creditors or persons to adduce evidence showing that the applicant is not entitled to be declared an insolvent.

Procedure at hearing.

351. If the Court is satisfied—

Declaration of insolvency and appointment of receiver.

(a) that the statements in the application are substantially true;

(b) that the applicant has not, with intent to defraud his creditors, concealed, transferred or removed any part of his property since the institution of the suit in which was passed the decree in execution of which he was arrested or imprisoned or at any subsequent time;

(c) that he has not, knowing himself to be unable to pay his debts in full, recklessly contracted debts or given an unfair preference to any of his creditors by any payment or disposition of his property;

(d) that he has not committed any other act of bad faith regarding the matter of the application, the Court may declare him to be an insolvent, and may also, if it think fit, make an order appointing a receiver of his property, or if it does not appoint such receiver, may discharge the insolvent.

352. The creditors mentioned in the application and the other persons (if any) alleging themselves to be creditors of the insolvent, shall then produce evidence of the amount and particulars of their respective pecuniary claims against him; and the Court shall by order determine the persons who have proved themselves to be the insolvent's creditors and their respective debts; and shall frame a schedule of such persons and debts; and the declaration under section 351 shall be deemed to be a decree in favour of each of the said creditors for their said respective debts.

Creditors to prove their debts.

Schedule to be framed.

A copy of every such schedule shall be stuck up in the court-house.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to entitle a partner in an insolvent firm or, when he has died before the insolvency, his legal representative, to prove in competition with the creditors of the firm.

353. Any creditor of the insolvent who is not mentioned in such schedule may, within three months from its publication, apply to the Court for permission to produce evidence of the amount and particulars of his pecuniary claims against the insolvent, and in case the applicant proves himself to be a creditor of the insolvent, for an order directing his name to be inserted in the schedule as a creditor for the debt so proved.

Applications by creditors.

Any creditor mentioned in the schedule may within three months from the publication of the schedule apply to the Court for an order altering the schedule so far as regards the amount, nature, or particulars of his own debt, or to strike out the name of another creditor, or to alter the schedule so far as regards the amount, nature, or particulars of the debt of another creditor.

In the case of any application under this section, the Court, after causing such notices as it thinks fit to be served, at the applicant's expense, on the insolvent and the other creditors and hearing their objections, if any, may comply with or reject the application.

354. Every order under section 351 shall be published in the local official Gazette and shall operate to vest in the Receiver all the insolvent's property (except the particulars specified in the first proviso to section 266), whether set forth in his application or not.

Effect of order appointing Receiver.

355. The Receiver so appointed shall give such security as the Court may direct and shall possess himself of all such property, except as aforesaid; and on his certifying that the insolvent has placed him in possession thereof, or has done everything in his power for that purpose, the Court may discharge the insolvent from arrest or imprisonment, as the case may be, upon such conditions (if any) as the Court thinks fit.

Receiver to give security and collect assets.

Discharge of insolvent.

356. The Receiver shall proceed under the direction of the Court—

Duty of Receiver.

(a) to convert the property into money:

(b) to pay thereout debts, fines and penalties (if any) due by the insolvent to Government:

(c) to pay the said decree-holder's costs:

(d) to distribute the balance among the scheduled creditors rateably according to the amounts of their respective debts, and without any preference; and such Receiver may retain as a remuneration for the performance of his duties a commission, to be fixed by the Court, not exceeding the rate of five per centum upon the amount of the balance so distributed (the amount of the commission so retained being deemed a distribution), and shall deliver the surplus, if any, to the insolvent or his legal representative.

His right to remuneration.

Delivery of surplus.

357. An insolvent discharged under section 355 shall not be arrested or imprisoned on account of any of the scheduled debts

Effect of discharge.

But (subject to the provisions of section 358) his property, whether previously or subsequently acquired (except the particulars specified in the first proviso to section 266 and except the property vested in the Receiver), shall, by order of the Court, be liable to attachment and sale until the decrees against him held by the scheduled creditors are fully satisfied or become incapable of being executed.

When Court may declare insolvent absolved from further liability.

358. If the aggregate amount of the scheduled debts is two hundred rupees or a less sum, the Court may declare the insolvent discharged as aforesaid absolved from further liability in respect of such debts.

Procedure in case of dishonest applicant.

359. Whenever, at the hearing under section 350, it is proved that the applicant has

(a) been guilty, in his application, of any concealment or of wilfully making any false statement as to the debts due by him, or respecting the property belonging to him, whether in possession or in expectancy, or held for him in trust;

(b) fraudulently concealed, transferred or removed any property; or

(c) committed any other act of bad faith regarding the matter of the application, the Court shall, at the instance of any of his creditors, sentence him to imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year from the date of committal.

Or the Court may, if it think fit, send him to the Magistrate to be dealt with according to law.

Investment of other Courts with powers of District Courts.

Transfer of cases.

360. The Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, invest any Court other than a District Court with the powers conferred on District Courts by sections 344 to 359 (both inclusive), and the District Judge may transfer to any Court situate in his district and so invested any case instituted under section 344.

Any Court so invested may entertain any application under section 344 by any person arrested in execution of a decree of such Court.

PART II.

OF INCIDENTAL PROCEEDINGS.

CHAPTER XXI.

OF THE DEATH, MARRIAGE AND INSOLVENCY OF PARTIES.

No abatement by party's death, if cause of action survive.

361. The death of a plaintiff or defendant shall not cause the suit to abate if the cause of action survives.

Illustrations.

(a) A covenants with B and C to pay an annuity to B during C's life. B and C sue A to compel payment. B dies before the decree: the cause of action survives to C, and the suit does not abate.

(b) In the same case, all the parties die before decree. The cause of action survives to the representative of the survivor of B and C, and he may continue the suit against A's representative.

(c) A sues B for libel. A dies. The cause of action does not survive and the suit abates.

(d) A, a member of a Hindú joint family under the Mitákshará law, institutes a suit for partition of the family property. A dies, leaving B, a minor son, his heir. The cause of action survives to B, and the suit does not abate.

Proceeding in case of death of one of several plaintiffs or defendants, if cause of action survive.

362. If there be more plaintiffs or defendants than one, and any of them dies, and if the cause of action survives to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs alone, or against the surviving defendant or defendants alone, the Court shall cause an entry to that effect to be made on the record, and the suit shall proceed at the instance of the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs, or against the surviving defendant or defendants.

Proceeding in case of death of one of several plaintiffs where cause of action survives to survivors and representative of deceased.

363. If there be more plaintiffs than one, and any of them dies, and if the cause of action does not survive to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs alone, but survives to him or them and the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff jointly, the Court may, on the application of such legal representative, enter his name on the record in the place of such deceased plaintiff, and the suit shall proceed at the instance of the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs and such legal representative.

Proceeding where no application made by representative of deceased plaintiff.

364. If no application be made to the Court by any person claiming to be the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff, the suit shall proceed at the instance of the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs; and the legal representative (if any) of the deceased plaintiff shall be made a party and shall be interested in and bound by the decree passed in the suit, in the same manner as if the suit had proceeded at his instance conjointly with the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs.

Proceeding in case of death of sole, or sole surviving, plaintiff.

365. In case of the death of a sole plaintiff or sole surviving plaintiff, the Court may, where the cause of action survives, on the application of the legal representative of the deceased, enter his name in the place of such plaintiff on the record, and the suit shall thereupon proceed.

Abatement where no application by representative of deceased plaintiff.

366. If no such application be made to the Court by any person claiming to be the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff, the Court may pass an order that the suit shall abate, and award to the defendant the costs which he may have incurred in defending the suit, to be recovered from the estate of the deceased plaintiff; or the Court may, if it think proper, on the application of the defendant, and upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, pass such other order as it thinks fit for bringing in the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff, or for proceeding with the suit in order to a final determination of the matter in dispute, or for both those purposes.

Explanation.—A certificate of heirship, or a certificate to collect debts, does not of itself constitute the person holding it the legal representative of the deceased. But when the person holding any such certificate obtains thereby property belonging to the deceased, he may be treated as a legal representative liable in respect of such property.

367. If any dispute arise as to who is the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff, the Court may either stay the suit until the fact has been determined in another suit, or decide at or before the hearing of the suit who shall be admitted to be such legal representative for the purpose of prosecuting the suit.

Procedure in case of dispute as to representative of deceased plaintiff.

368. If there be more defendants than one, and any of them die before decree and the cause of action does not survive against the surviving defendant or defendants alone,

Procedure in case of death of one of several defendants, or of sole or sole surviving defendant.

and also in case of the death of a sole defendant, or sole surviving defendant, where the right to sue survives, the plaintiff may make an application to the Court, specifying the name, description and place of abode of any person whom he alleges to be the legal representative of the deceased defendant, and whom he desires to be made the defendant in his stead.

The Court shall thereupon enter the name of such representative on the record in the place of such defendant, and shall issue a summons to such representative to appear on a day to be therein mentioned to defend the suit; and the case shall thereupon proceed in the same manner as if such representative had originally been made a defendant and had been a party to the former proceedings in the suit:

Provided that the person so made defendant may object that he is not the legal representative of the deceased defendant, or may make any defence appropriate to his character as such representative.

369. The marriage of a female plaintiff or defendant shall not cause the suit to abate, but the suit may notwithstanding be proceeded with to judgment, and where the decree is against a female defendant, it may thereupon be executed against her alone.

Suit not abated by marriage of female party.

If the case is one in which the husband is by law liable for the debts of his wife, the decree may, with the permission of the Court, be executed against the husband also; and in case of judgment for the wife, execution of the decree may with such permission be issued upon the application of the husband, where the husband is by law entitled to the subject-matter of the decree.

370. The bankruptcy or insolvency of a plaintiff in any suit which his assignee or the receiver appointed under section 351 might maintain for the benefit of his creditors shall not bar the suit, unless such assignee or receiver declines to continue the suit and to give security for the costs thereof within such time as the Court may order.

When plaintiff's bankruptcy or insolvency bars suit.

If the assignee or receiver neglect or refuse to continue the suit and to give such security within the time so ordered, the defendant may apply for the dismissal of the suit on the ground of the plaintiff's bankruptcy or insolvency, and the Court may dismiss the suit and award to the defendant the costs which he has incurred in defending the same, to be proved as a debt against the plaintiff's estate.

Procedure when assignee fails to continue suit or give security.

371. When a suit abates or is dismissed under this chapter, no fresh suit shall be brought on the same cause of action.

Effect of abatement on parties' rights.

But the person claiming to be the legal representative of the deceased bankrupt or insolvent plaintiff, may apply for an order to set aside the order for abatement or dismissal; and if it be proved that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from continuing the suit, the Court shall set aside the abatement or dismissal upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

Application to set aside abatement or dismissal.

372. In other cases of assignment, creation or devolution of any interest pending the suit, the suit may, with the leave of the Court, given either with the consent of all parties or after service of notice in writing upon them, and hearing their objections, if any, be continued by or against the person to whom such interest has come, either in addition to or in substitution for the person from whom it has passed, as the case may require.

Procedure in case of assignment pending the suit.

CHAPTER XXII.

OF THE WITHDRAWAL AND ADJUSTMENT OF SUITS.

373. If, at any time after the institution of the suit, the Court is satisfied on the application of the plaintiff (a) that the suit must fail by reason of some formal defect, or (b) that there are sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw from the suit or to abandon part of his claim with liberty to bring a fresh suit for the subject-matter of the suit or for the part so abandoned, the Court may grant such permission on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

Power to allow plaintiff to withdraw with liberty to bring fresh suit.

If the plaintiff withdraw from the suit, or abandon part of his claim, without such permission, he shall be liable for such costs as the Court may award, and shall be precluded from bringing a fresh suit for the same matter.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize the Court to permit one of several plaintiffs to withdraw without the consent of the others.

374. In any fresh suit instituted on permission granted under the last preceding section, the plaintiff shall be bound by the law of limitation in the same manner as if the first suit had not been brought.

Limitation-law not affected by first suit.

375. If a suit be adjusted by any lawful agreement or compromise, or if the defendant satisfy the plaintiff in respect to the matter of the suit, such agreement, compromise or satisfaction shall be recorded, and the Court shall pass a decree in accordance therewith so far as it relates to the suit, and such decree shall be final.

Compromise of suits.

CHAPTER XXIII.

OF PAYMENT INTO COURT.

Deposit by defendant of amount in satisfaction of claim.

376. The defendant in any suit to recover a debt or damages, may, at any stage of the suit, deposit in Court such sum of money as he considers a satisfaction in full of the claim.

Notice of deposit.

377. Notice of the deposit shall be given by the defendant to the plaintiff, and the amount of the deposit shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be paid to the plaintiff on his application.

Interest on sum deposited not allowed to plaintiff after receipt of notice.

378. No interest shall be allowed to the plaintiff on any sum deposited by the defendant from the date of the receipt of such notice, whether the sum deposited be in full of the claim or fall short thereof.

Procedure where plaintiff accepts deposit as satisfaction in part.

379. If the plaintiff accept such amount only as satisfaction in part of his claim, he may prosecute his suit for the balance; and if the Court decides that the deposit by the defendant was a full satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim, the plaintiff must pay the costs of the suit incurred after the deposit and the costs incurred previous thereto, so far as they were caused by excess in the plaintiff's claim.

Procedure where he accepts it as satisfaction in full.

If the plaintiff accept such amount as satisfaction in full of his claim, he shall present to the Court a statement to that effect, and such statement shall be filed and the Court shall pass judgment accordingly, and in directing by whom the costs of each party are to be paid, the Court shall consider which of the parties is most to blame for the litigation.

Illustrations.

(a) A owes B Rs. 100. B sues A for the amount, having made no demand for payment and having no reason to believe that the delay caused by making a demand would place him at a disadvantage. On the plaint being filed, A pays the money into Court. B accepts it in full satisfaction of his claim, but the Court should not allow him any costs, the litigation being presumably groundless on his part.

(b) B sues A under the circumstances mentioned, in illustration (a). On the plaint being filed, A disputes the claim. Afterwards A pays the money into Court. B accepts it in full satisfaction of his claim. The Court should also give B his costs of suit, A's conduct having shown that the litigation was necessary.

(c) A owes B Rs. 100 and is willing to pay him that sum without suit. B claims Rs. 150 and sues A for that amount. On the plaint being filed, A pays Rs. 100 into Court and disputes only his liability to pay the remaining Rs. 50. B accepts the Rs. 100 in full satisfaction of his claim. The Court should order him to pay A's costs.

CHAPTER XXIV.

OF REQUIRING SECURITY FOR COSTS.

When security for costs may be required from plaintiff at any stage of suit.

380. If, at the institution or at any subsequent stage of a suit, it appears to the Court that a sole plaintiff is, or (when there are more plaintiffs than one) that all the plaintiffs are, residing out of British India, and that such plaintiff does not, or that no one of such plaintiffs does, possess any sufficient immoveable property within British India independent of the property in suit, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any defendant, order the plaintiff or plaintiffs, within a time to be fixed by the order, to give security for the payment of all costs incurred and likely to be incurred by any defendant.

Procedure where requisition is not complied with.

381. In the event of such security not being furnished within the time so fixed, the Court shall dismiss the suit unless the plaintiff or plaintiffs be permitted to withdraw therefrom under the provisions of section 373.

Residence out of British India.

382. Whoever leaves British India under such circumstances as to afford reasonable probability that he will not be forthcoming whenever he may be called upon to pay costs shall be deemed to be residing out of British India, within the meaning of section 380.

CHAPTER XXV.

OF COMMISSIONS.

A.—Commissions to examine Witnesses.

Cases in which Court may issue commission to examine witness.

383. Any Court may in any suit issue a commission for the examination on interrogatories or otherwise of persons resident within the local limits of its jurisdiction, who are exempted under this Code from attending the Court, or who are from sickness or infirmity unable to attend it.

Order for commission may be made either on application of parties or by Court of its own accord.

384. Such order may be made by the Court either of its own motion, or on the application, supported by affidavit, of any party to the suit or of the witness to be examined.

When witness resides within Court's jurisdiction.

385. The commission for the examination of a person who resides within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same, may be issued to any person whom the Court thinks fit to execute the same.

When witness resides beyond Court's jurisdiction, but in British India.

386. Any Court may in any suit issue a commission for the examination of—

(a) any person resident beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction;

(b) persons who are about to leave such limits before the date on which they are required to be examined in Court; and

(c) civil and military officers of Government who cannot, in the opinion of the Judge, attend the Court without detriment to the public service.

Such commission shall ordinarily be issued to any Court not being a High Court, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such person resides, and which can most conveniently execute the same:

When witness is within local limits of ordinary original civil jurisdiction of a High Court.

Provided that if he resides beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the commission and within the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay or Rangoon, the commission shall be issued to the Court of Small Causes within whose jurisdiction he resides:

Provided also that, under special circumstances, the commission may be directed to any person whom the Court issuing the commission thinks fit to appoint.

The Court on issuing any commission under this section shall direct whether the commission shall be returned to itself or to any subordinate Court.

When witness is not within British India.

387. When any Court to which application is made for the issue of a commission for the examination of a person residing at any place not within British India is satisfied that his evidence is necessary, the Court may issue such commission.

Court to examine witness pursuant to commission.

388. Every Court receiving a commission for the examination of any person shall examine him pursuant thereto.

Commission when executed to be returned to Court issuing it with depositions of witnesses.

389. After the commission has been duly executed, it shall be returned, together with the evidence taken under it, to the Court out of which it issued, unless the order for issuing the commission has otherwise directed, in which case the commission shall be returned in terms of such order; and the commission and the return thereto, and the evidence taken under it, shall (subject to the provisions of the next following section) form part of the record of the suit.

When depositions may be read in evidence.

390. Evidence taken under a commission shall not be read as evidence in the suit without the consent of the party against whom the same is offered, unless

(a) the person who gave the evidence is beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, or dead, or unable from sickness or infirmity to attend to be personally examined, or exempted from personal appearance in Court, or

(b) the Court in its discretion dispenses with the proof of any of the circumstances mentioned in the last preceding clause, and authorizes the evidence of any person being read as evidence in the suit, notwithstanding proof that the cause for taking such evidence by commission has ceased at the time of reading the same.

Provisions as to execution and return of commissions to apply to commissions issued by foreign Courts.

391. The provisions hereinbefore contained as to the execution and return of commissions shall apply to commissions issued by

(a) Courts situate beyond the limits of British India and established by the authority of Her Majesty or of the Governor General in Council, or

(b) Courts situate in any part of the British Empire other than British India, or (c) Courts of any foreign country for the time being in alliance with Her Majesty.

B.—Commissions for Local Investigations.

Commission to make local investigations.

392. In any suit or proceeding in which the Court deems a local investigation to be requisite or proper for the purpose of elucidating any matter in dispute, or of ascertaining the market-value of any property, or the amount of any mesne profits or damages or annual nett profits, and the same cannot be conveniently conducted by the Judge in person, the Court may issue a commission to such person as it thinks fit, directing him to make such investigation and to report thereon to the Court:

Provided that, when the Local Government has made rules as to the persons to whom such commission shall be issued, the Court shall be bound by such rules.

Procedure of Commissioner.

393. The Commissioner, after such local inspection as he deems necessary, and after reducing to writing the evidence taken by him, shall return such evidence, together with his report in writing, subscribed with his name, to the Court.

Report and depositions to be evidence in suit.

The report of the Commissioner and the evidence taken by him (but not the evidence without the report) shall be evidence in the suit and shall form part of the record; but the Court, or any of the parties to the suit may, with the permission of the Court, examine the Commissioner personally in open Court touching any of the matters referred to him or mentioned in his report, or as to the manner in which he has made the investigation.

Commissioner may be examined in person.

C.—Commissions to examine Accounts.

Commission to examine or adjust accounts.

394. In any suit in which an examination or adjustment of accounts is necessary, the Court may issue a commission to such person as it thinks fit directing him to make such examination or adjustment.

Court to give Commissioner necessary instructions.

395. The Court shall furnish the Commissioner with such part of the proceedings and such detailed instructions as appear necessary, and the instructions shall distinctly specify whether the Commissioner is merely to transmit the proceedings which he may hold on the inquiry, or also to report his own opinion on the point referred for his examination.

Proceedings of Commissioner receivable in evidence.

Power to make further inquiry.

The proceedings of the Commissioner shall be received in evidence in the suit, unless the Court has reason to be dissatisfied with them, in which case the Court shall direct such further inquiry as is requisite.

D.—Commission to make Partition.

Commission to make partition of non-revenue-paying immoveable property.

396. In any suit in which the partition of immoveable property not paying revenue to Government appears to the Court to be necessary, the Court, after ascertaining the several parties interested in such property and their several rights therein, may issue a commission to such persons as it thinks fit to make a partition according to such rights.

The Commissioners shall ascertain and inspect the property, and shall divide the same into as many shares as may be directed by the order under which the commission issues, and shall allot such shares to the parties, and may, if authorized thereto by the said order, award sums to be paid for the purpose of equalizing the value of the shares.

The Commissioners shall then prepare and sign a report, or (if they cannot agree) separate reports, appointing the share of each party, and distinguishing each share (if so directed by the said order) by metes and bounds. Such report or reports shall be annexed to the commission and transmitted to the Court: and the Court, after hearing any objections which the parties may make to the report or reports shall either quash the same and issue a new commission, or (where the Commissioners agree in their report) pass a decree in accordance therewith.

E.—General Provisions.

Expenses of commission to be paid into Court.

397. Before issuing any commission under this chapter, the Court may order such sum (if any) as it thinks reasonable for the expenses of the commission to be paid into Court by the party at whose instance or for whose benefit the commission is issued.

Commissioner may examine parties and witnesses and call for papers.

398. Any Commissioner appointed under this chapter may, unless otherwise directed by the order of appointment,

(a) examine the parties themselves and any witness whom they or any of them may produce, and any other person whom the Commissioner thinks proper to call upon to give evidence in the matter referred to him:

(b) call for and examine documents and other things relevant to the subject of inquiry:

(c) at any reasonable time enter upon or into any land or building mentioned in the order.

Attendance, examination and punishment of witnesses before Commissioner.

399. The provisions of this Code relating to the summoning, attendance and examination of witnesses and to the remuneration of, and penalties to be imposed upon, witnesses, shall apply to persons required to give evidence or to produce documents under this chapter, whether the commission in execution of which they are so required has been issued by a Court situate within, or by a Court situate beyond, the limits of British India.

Procedure ex parte where parties do not appear.

400. Whenever a commission is issued under this chapter, the Court shall direct that the parties to the suit shall appear before the Commissioner in person or by their agents or pleaders.

If the parties do not so appear, the Commissioner may proceed ex parte.

PART III.

OF SUITS IN PARTICULAR CASES.

CHAPTER XXVI.

SUITS BY PAUPERS.

Suits may be brought in forma pauperis.

401. Subject to the following rules, any suit may be brought by a pauper.

Explanation.—A person is a 'pauper' when he is not possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fee prescribed by law for the plaint in such suit, or, where no such fee is prescribed, when he is not entitled to property worth one hundred rupees other than his necessary wearing apparel and the subject-matter of the suit.

What suits excepted.

402. No suit shall be brought by a pauper to recover compensation for loss of caste, libel, slander, abusive language or assault.

Application to be in writing.

403. The application for permission to sue by a pauper shall be in writing, and shall contain the particulars required by section 50 in regard to plaints in suits: a schedule of any moveable or immoveable property belonging to the petitioner, with the estimated value thereof, shall be annexed thereto; and it shall be subscribed and verified in the manner hereinbefore prescribed for the subscription and verification of plaints.

Contents of application.

Presentation of application.

404. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 36, the application shall be presented to the Court by the applicant in person unless he is exempted from appearing in Court under section 640 or 641, in which case the application may be presented by a duly authorized agent, who can answer all material questions relating to the application, and who may be examined in the same manner as the party represented by him might have been examined had such party attended in person.

Rejection of application.

405. If the application be not framed or presented in the manner prescribed by sections 403 and 404, the Court shall reject it.

Examination of applicant.

406. If the application be in proper form and duly presented, the Judge shall examine the petitioner, or his agent when the applicant is allowed to appear by agent, regarding the merits of the claim and the property of the applicant.

If presented by agent, Court may order applicant to be examined by commission.

When the application is presented by an agent, the Court may, if it thinks fit, order that the applicant be examined by a commission in the manner in which the examination of an absent witness may be taken under the provisions of this Code.

Rejection of application.

407. If it appear to the Court upon such examination

(a) that the applicant is not a pauper, or

(b) that he has, within the two months next before the presentation of the application, disposed of any property fraudulently or with a view to obtain the benefit of this chapter, or

(c) that his allegations do not show a right to sue in such Court, or

(d) that he has entered into any agreement with reference to the subject-matter of the proposed suit under which any other person has obtained an interest in such subject-matter, the Court shall reject the application.

Notice of day for receiving evidence of applicant's pauperism.

408. If upon such examination the Court sees no reason to refuse the application on any of the grounds stated in section 407, it shall fix a day (of which at least ten days' previous notice shall be given to the opposite party and the Government Pleader) for receiving such evidence as the applicant may adduce in proof of his pauperism, and for hearing any evidence which may be adduced in disproof thereof.

Procedure at hearing.

409. On the day so fixed, or as soon thereafter as may be convenient, the Court shall examine the witnesses (if any) produced by either party, and may cross-examine the applicant or his agent, and shall make a memorandum of the substance of their evidence.

The Court shall also hear any argument which the parties may desire to offer on the question whether, on the face of the application and of the evidence (if any) taken by the Court as herein provided, the applicant is or is not subject to any of the prohibitions specified in section 407.

The Court shall then either allow or refuse to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper.

Procedure if application admitted.

410. If the application be granted, it shall be numbered and registered, and shall be deemed the plaint in the suit, and the suit shall proceed in all other respects as a suit instituted under chapter V, except that the plaintiff shall not be liable to any court-fee (other than fees payable for service of process) in respect of any petition, appointment of a pleader, or other proceeding connected with the suit.

Costs when pauper succeeds.

411. If the plaintiff succeed in the suit, the Court shall calculate the amount of court-fees which would have been paid by the plaintiff if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper; and such amount shall be a first charge on the subject-matter of the suit, and shall also be recoverable by the Government from any party ordered by the decree to pay the same, in the same manner as costs of suit are recoverable under this Code.

Recovery of court-fees.

Procedure when pauper fails.

412. If the plaintiff fails in the suit, or if he is dispaupered, the Court shall order the plaintiff, or any person made under section 32 co-plaintiff to the suit, to pay the court-fees which would have been paid by the plaintiff if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper; and, if it find that the suit was frivolous or vexatious, it may also punish the plaintiff with fine not exceeding one hundred rupees, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to a month, or with both.

Refusal to allow applicant to sue as pauper to bar subsequent application of like nature.

413. Refusal to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper shall be a bar to any subsequent application of the like nature by him in respect of the same right to sue; but the applicant shall be at liberty to institute a suit in the ordinary manner in respect of such right, provided that he first pays the costs (if any) incurred by Government in opposing his application for leave to sue as a pauper.

Dispaupering.

414. The Court may, on motion by the defendant, or by the Government Pleader, of which one week's notice in writing has been given to the plaintiff, order the plaintiff to be dispaupered—

(a) if he is guilty of vexatious or improper conduct in the course of the suit;

(b) if it appears that his means are such that he ought not to continue to sue as a pauper, or

(c) if he has entered into any agreement with reference to the subject-matter of the suit, under which any other person has obtained an interest in such subject-matter.

Costs.

415. The costs of an application for permission to sue as a pauper and of an inquiry into pauperism are costs in the suit.

served on him, if it appear to the Court that the summons may be most conveniently so served.

Extension of time to enable officer to make reference to Government.

423. If the public officer on receiving the summons considers it proper to make a reference to the Government before answering to the plaint, he may apply to the Court to grant such extension of the time fixed in the summons as may be necessary to enable him to make such reference and to receive orders thereon through the proper channel; and the Court upon such application may extend the time for so long as appears to be requisite. . .

Notice previous to suing Secretary of State in Council or public officer.

424. No suit shall be instituted against the said Secretary of State in Council or against a public officer until the expiration of two months next after notice in writing has been in the case of the Secretary of State in Council delivered to, or left at the office of, a Secretary to the Local Government or the Collector of the District, and, in the case of a public officer, delivered to him or left at his office, stating the cause of action and the name and place of abode of the intending plaintiff; and the plaint must contain a statement that such notice has been so delivered or left.

427. If such application is not made by the Government Pleader on or before the day fixed in the notice for the defendant to appear and answer to the plaint, the case shall proceed as in a suit between private parties, except that the defendant shall not be liable to arrest, nor his property to attachment, otherwise than in execution of a decree.

If the interest of the next friend of a minor is adverse to that of such minor, or if he is so connected with a defendant whose interest is adverse to that of the minor, as to make it unlikely that the minor's interest will be properly protected by him, or if he does not do his duty, or, pending the suit, ceases to reside within British India, or for any other sufficient cause, application may be made on behalf of the minor or by a defendant for his removal; and the Court (if satisfied of the sufficiency of the cause assigned) may order the next friend to be removed accordingly.

When minor co-plaintiff.

Notice of the application shall be served on the next friend, as well as on the defendant; and it must be proved by affidavit that the late minor has attained his full age. The costs of all parties of such application and of all or any proceedings theretofore had in the suit shall be paid by such persons as the Court directs.

Costs.

If the late minor be a necessary party to the suit, the Court may direct him to be made a defendant.

455. If any minor on attaining majority can prove to the satisfaction of the Court that a suit instituted in his name by a next friend was unreasonable or improper, he may, if a sole plaintiff, apply to have the suit dismissed.

When suit unreasonable or improper.

Notice of the application shall be served on all the parties concerned: and the Court, upon being satisfied of such unreasonableness or impropriety, may grant the application, and order the next friend to pay the costs of all parties in respect of the application and of anything done in the suit.

Costs.

456. An order for the appointment of a guardian for the suit may be obtained upon application in the name of the minor. Such application must be supported by an affidavit verifying the fact that the proposed guardian has no interest in the matters in question in the suit adverse to that of the minor, and that he is a fit person to be so appointed.

Petition for appointment of guardian ad litem.

457. A co-defendant of sound mind and of full age may be appointed guardian for the suit, if he has no interest adverse to that of the minor; but neither a plaintiff, nor a married woman, can be so appointed.

Who may be guardian ad litem.

458. If the guardian for the suit of a minor defendant does not do his duty, or if other sufficient ground be made to appear, the Court may remove him, and may order him to pay such costs as may have been occasioned to any party by his breach of duty.

Guardian neglecting his duty may be removed.

Costs.

459. If the guardian for the suit dies pending such suit or is removed by the Court, the Court shall appoint a new guardian in his place.

On death of guardian, pendente lite, new guardian to be appointed.

When decree to be enforced against heir or representative.

461. No sum of money or other thing shall be received or taken by a next friend or guardian for the suit at any time on behalf of a minor, at any time before decree or order, unless he has first obtained the leave of the Court, and given security to its satisfaction that such money or other thing shall be duly accounted for, to, and held for the benefit of, such minor.

Before decree, next friend or guardian ad litem not to receive money without leave of Court and giving security.

462. No next friend or guardian for the suit shall, without the leave of the Court, enter into any agreement or compromise on behalf of a minor, with reference to the suit in which he acts as next friend or guardian.

Officers or soldiers who cannot obtain leave may authorize any person to sue or defend for them.

The authority shall be in writing and shall be signed by the officer or soldier in the presence of (a) his commanding officer or of the next subordinate officer, if the party be himself the commanding officer, or (b) where the officer or soldier is serving in military staff employment, the head or other superior officer of the office in which he is employed. Such commanding or other officer shall countersign the authority which shall be filed in Court.

When so filed, the countersignature shall be sufficient proof that the authority was duly executed, and that the officer or soldier by whom it was granted could not obtain leave of absence for the purpose of prosecuting or defending the suit in person.

Explanation.—In this chapter the expression 'commanding officer' means the officer in actual command for the time being of any regiment, corps, detachment or depôt, to which the officer or soldier belongs.

466. Any person authorized by an officer or soldier to prosecute or defend a suit in his stead may prosecute or defend it in person in the same manner as the officer or soldier could do if present; or he may appoint a pleader to prosecute or defend the suit on behalf of such officer or soldier.

Person so authorized may act personally or appoint pleaders.

467. Processes served upon any person authorized by an officer or soldier, as in section 465, or upon any pleader appointed as aforesaid by such person to act for, or on behalf of, such officer or soldier, shall be as effectual as if they had been served on the party in person or on his pleader.

Execution of warrant of arrest in cantonments, &c.

The commanding officer shall back the warrant with his signature, and the person named therein is within the limits of his command shall cause him to be arrested and delivered to the officer so charged.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

INTERPLEADER.

470. When two or more persons claim adversely to one another the same payment or property from another person, whose only interest therein is that of a mere stakeholder and who is ready to render it to the right owner, such stakeholder may institute a suit of interpleader against all the claimants for the purpose of obtaining a decision as to whom the payment or property should be made or delivered, and of obtaining indemnity for himself:

When interpleader-suit may be instituted.

Provided that if any suit is pending in which the rights of all parties can properly be decided, the stakeholder shall not institute a suit of interpleader.

471. In every suit of interpleader the plaint must, in addition to the other statements necessary for plaints, state—

Plaint in such suit.

(a) that the plaintiff has no interest in the thing claimed otherwise than as a mere stakeholder;

(b) the claims made by the defendants severally; and (c) that there is no collusion between the plaintiff and any of the defendants.

Payment of thing claimed into court.

472. When the thing claimed is capable of being paid into court or placed in the custody of the Court, the plaintiff must so pay or place it before he can be entitled to any order in the suit.

Procedure at first hearing.

473. At the first hearing the Court may

(a) declare that the plaintiff is discharged from all liability to the defendants in respect of the thing claimed, award him his costs, and dismiss him from the suit:

or, if it thinks that justice or convenience so require,

(b) retain all parties until the final disposal of the suit:

and, if it finds that the admissions of the parties or other evidence enable it,

(c) adjudicate the title to the thing claimed, or else it may

(d) direct the defendants to interplead one another by filing statements and entering into evidence for the purpose of bringing their respective claims before the Court.

When agents and tenants may institute interpleader-suits.

474. Nothing in this chapter shall be taken to enable agents to sue their principals, or tenants to sue their landlords, for the purpose of compelling them to interplead with any persons other than persons making claim through such principals or landlords.

Illustrations.

(a) A deposits a box of jewels with B as his agent. C alleges that the jewels were wrongfully obtained from him by A, and claims them from B. B cannot institute an interpleader-suit against A and C.

(b) A deposits a box of jewels with B as his agent. He then writes to C for the purpose of making the jewels a security for a debt due from himself to C. A afterwards alleges that C's debt is satisfied, and C alleges the contrary. Both claim the jewels from B. B may institute an interpleader-suit against A and C.

Charge of plaintiff's costs.

475. When the suit is properly instituted, the Court may provide for the plaintiff's costs by giving him a charge on the thing claimed or in some other effectual way.

Procedure where a defendant is suing stakeholder.

476. If any of the defendants in an interpleader-suit is actually suing the stakeholder in respect of the subject of such suit, the Court in which the suit against the stakeholder is pending shall, on being duly informed by the Court which passed the decree in the interpleader-suit in favour of the stakeholder, that such decree has been passed, stay the proceedings as against him; and his costs in the suit so stayed may be provided for in such suit; but if, and so far as, they are not provided for in that suit, they may be added to his costs incurred in the interpleader-suit.

Costs.

PART IV.

PROVISIONAL REMEDIES.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

OF ARREST AND ATTACHMENT BEFORE JUDGMENT.

A.—Arrest before Judgment.

When plaintiff may apply that security be taken.

477. If at any stage of any suit, other than a suit for the possession of immoveable property, the plaintiff satisfies the Court by affidavit—that the defendant, with intent to avoid or delay the plaintiff, or to avoid any process of the Court, or to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him,

(a) has absconded or left the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(b) is about to abscond or to leave the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(c) has disposed of or removed from the jurisdiction of the Court his property or any part thereof, or that the defendant is about to leave British India under circumstances affording reasonable probability that the plaintiff will or may thereby be obstructed or delayed in the execution of any decree that may be passed against the defendant in the suit, the plaintiff may apply to the Court that security be taken for the appearance of the defendant to answer any decree that may be passed against him in the suit.

Order to bring up defendant to show cause why he should not give security.

478. If the Court, after examining the applicant, and making such further investigation as it thinks fit, is satisfied that the defendant, with any such intent as aforesaid,

(a) has absconded or left the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(b) is about to abscond or to leave the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(c) has disposed of or removed from the jurisdiction of the Court his property or any part thereof, or that the defendant is about to leave British India under the circumstances last aforesaid, the Court may issue an order for bringing the defendant before the Court to show cause why he should not give security for his appearance.

If defendant fail to show cause, Court may order him to make deposit or give security.

479. If the defendant fail to show such cause, the Court shall order him either to deposit in court money or other property sufficient to answer the claim against him, or to give security for his appearance at any time when called upon while the suit is pending, and until execution or satisfaction of any decree that may be passed against him in the suit.

The surety shall bind himself, in default of such appearance, to pay any sum of money which the defendant may be ordered to pay in the suit.

480. The surety for the appearance of the defendant may at any time apply to the Court in which he became such surety to be discharged from his obligation.

Procedure in case of application by surety to be discharged.

On such application being made, the Court shall summon the defendant to appear, or, if it thinks fit, may issue a warrant for his arrest in the first instance.

On the appearance of the defendant pursuant to the summons or warrant, or on his voluntary surrender, the Court shall direct the surety to be discharged from his obligation, and shall call upon the defendant to find fresh security.

481. If the defendant fail to comply with any order under section 479 or section 480, the Court may commit him to jail until the decision of the suit, or, if judgment be given against the defendant, until the execution of the decree: Provided that no person shall be imprisoned under this section in any case for a longer period than six months, nor for a longer period than six weeks when the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit does not exceed fifty rupees.

Procedure where defendant fails to give security or find fresh security.

482. The provisions of section 339 as to allowances payable for the subsistence of judgment-debtors shall apply to all defendants arrested under this chapter.

Subsistence of defendant arrested.

B.—Attachment before Judgment.

483. If at any stage of any suit the plaintiff satisfies the Court by affidavit that the defendant, with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him,

Application before judgment for security from defendant to satisfy decree, and in default, for attachment of property.

(a) is about to dispose of the whole or any part of his property, or to remove the same from the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is pending, or the plaintiff may apply to the Court to call upon the defendant to furnish security to satisfy any decree that may be passed against him in such suit, and, on his failing to give such security, to direct that any portion of his property shall be attached until the further order of the Court.

(b) has quitted the jurisdiction of the Court, leaving therein property belonging to him,

The application shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, specify the property required to be attached and the estimated value thereof.

Contents of application.

484. If the Court, after examining the applicant, and making any further investigation which it thinks fit, is satisfied that the defendant is about to dispose of or remove his property, with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him in the suit, the Court may require him, within a time to be fixed by the Court, either to furnish security in such sum as may be specified in the order, to produce and place at the disposal of the Court, when required, the said property or the value of the same, or such portion thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree, or to appear and show cause why he should not furnish security.

Court may call on defendant to furnish security or show cause.

The Court may also in the order direct the conditional attachment of the whole or any portion of the property specified in the application.

485. If the defendant fail to show cause why he should not furnish security, or fail to furnish the security required within the time fixed by the Court, the Court may order that the property specified in the application, or such portion thereof as appears sufficient to satisfy any decree which may be passed in the suit, shall be attached.

Attachment if cause not shown or security not furnished.

If the defendant show such cause or furnish the required security, and the property specified in the application or any portion of it has been attached, the Court shall order the attachment to be withdrawn.

Withdrawal of attachment.

486. The attachment shall be made in the manner herein provided for the attachment of property in execution of a decree for money.

Mode of making attachment.

487. If any claim be preferred to the property attached before judgment, such claim shall be investigated in the manner hereinbefore provided for the investigation of claims to property attached in execution of a decree for money.

Investigation of claims to property attached before judgment.

488. When an order of attachment before judgment is passed, the Court which passed the order shall remove the attachment whenever the defendant furnishes the security required, together with security for the costs of the attachment, or when the suit is dismissed.

Removal of attachment when security furnished.

489. Attachment before judgment shall not affect the rights, existing prior to the attachment, of persons not parties to the suit, nor bar any person holding a decree against the defendant from applying for the sale of the property under attachment in execution of such decree.

Attachment not to affect rights of strangers, or bar the decree-holder from applying for sale.

490. Where property is under attachment by virtue of the provisions of this chapter, and a decree is given in favour of the plaintiff, it shall not be necessary to re-attach the property in execution of such decree.

Property attached under this chapter, not to be re-attached in execution of decree.

C.—Compensation for improper Arrests or Attachments.

491. If in any suit in which an arrest or attachment has been effected, it appear to the Court that such arrest or attachment was applied for on insufficient grounds,

Compensation for obtaining arrest or attachment on insufficient grounds.

or if the suit of the plaintiff fails, and it appears to the Court that there was no probable ground for instituting the suit, the Court may, on the application of the defendant, award against the plaintiff in its decree such amount, not exceeding one thousand rupees, as it deems a reasonable compensation to the defendant for the expense or injury caused to him by the arrest or attachment:

Proviso.

Provided that the Court shall not award under this section a larger amount than it might decree in a suit for compensation.

An award under this section shall bar any suit for compensation in respect of such arrest or attachment.

CHAPTER XXXV.

OF TEMPORARY INJUNCTIONS AND INTERLOCUTORY ORDERS.

A.—Temporary Injunctions.

Cases in which temporary injunction may be granted.

492. If in any suit it be proved by affidavit or otherwise

(a) that any property in dispute in a suit is in danger of being wasted, damaged or alienated by any party to the suit, or wrongfully sold in execution of a decree, or

(b) that the defendant threatens, or is about to remove or dispose of his property with intent to defraud his creditors, the Court may by order grant a temporary injunction to restrain such act, or give such other order for the purpose of staying and preventing the wasting, damaging, alienation, sale, removal or disposition of the property as the Court thinks fit, or refuse such injunction or other order.

Injunction to restrain repetition or continuance of breach.

493. In any suit for restraining the defendant from committing a breach of contract or other injury whether compensation be claimed in the suit or not, the plaintiff may, at any time after the commencement of the suit, and either before or after judgment, apply to the Court for a temporary injunction to restrain the defendant from committing the breach of contract or injury complained of, or any breach of contract or injury of a like kind arising out of the same contract or relating to the same property or right.

The Court may by order grant such injunction on such terms as to the duration of the injunction, keeping an account, giving security, or otherwise, as the Court thinks fit, or refuse the same.

In case of disobedience, an injunction granted under this section or section 492 may be enforced by the imprisonment of the defendant for a term not exceeding six months, or the attachment of his property, or both.

No attachment under this section shall remain in force for more than one year, at the end of which time if the defendant has not obeyed the injunction, the property attached may be sold, and out of the proceeds the Court may award to the plaintiff such compensation as it thinks fit and may pay the balance, if any, to the defendant.

Before granting injunction, Court may direct notice to be given to opposite party.

494. The Court shall in all cases, except where it appear that the object of granting the injunction would be defeated by the delay, before granting an injunction, direct notice of the application for the same to be given to the opposite party.

Injunction to corporation binding on its members and officers.

495. An injunction directed to a corporation or public company is binding not only on the corporation or company itself, but also on all members and officers of the corporation or company whose personal action it seeks to restrain.

Order for injunction may be discharged, varied or set aside.

496. Any order for an injunction may be discharged, or varied, or set aside by the Court, on application made thereto by any party dissatisfied with such order.

Compensation to defendant for issue of injunction on insufficient grounds.

497. If it appears to the Court that the injunction was applied for on insufficient grounds, or if, after the issue of the injunction, the suit is dismissed or judgment is given against the plaintiff by default or otherwise, and it appears to the Court that there was no probable ground for instituting the suit, the Court may, on the application of the defendant, award against the plaintiff in its decree such sum, not exceeding one thousand rupees, as it deems a reasonable compensation to the defendant for the expense or injury caused to him by the issue of the injunction:

Proviso.

Provided that the Court shall not award under this section a larger amount than it might decree in a suit for compensation.

An award under this section shall bar any suit for compensation in respect of the issue of the injunction.

B.—Interlocutory Orders.

Power to order interim sale of perishable articles.

498. The Court may, on the application of any party to a suit, order the sale, by any person named in such order, and in such manner and on such terms as it thinks fit, of any moveable property being the subject of such suit, which is subject to speedy and natural decay.

Power to make order for detention, &c., of subject-matter and to authorize entry, taking of samples and experiments.

499. The Court may, on the application of any party to a suit, and on such terms as it thinks fit,

(a) make an order for the detention, preservation or inspection of any property being the subject of such suit;

(b) for all or any of the purposes aforesaid, authorize any person to enter upon or into any land or building in the possession of any other party to such suit, and

(c) for all or any of the purposes aforesaid, authorize any samples to be taken, or any observation to be made or experiment to be tried, which may seem necessary or expedient for the purpose of obtaining full information or evidence.

The provisions hereinbefore contained as to execution of process shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to persons authorized to enter under this section.

Application for such orders to be after notice.

500. An application by the plaintiff for an order under section 498 or section 499 may be made after notice in writing to the defendant at any time after service of the summons.

An application by the defendant for a like order may be made after notice in writing to the plaintiff, and at any time after the applicant has appeared.

When party may be put in immediate possession of land, the subject of suit.

501. When land paying revenue to Government, or a tenure liable to sale, is the subject of a suit, if the party in possession of such land or tenure neglects to pay the Government revenue, or the rent due to the proprietor of the tenure, as the case may be, and such land or tenure is consequently ordered to be sold, any other party to the suit claiming to have an interest in such land or tenure may upon payment of the revenue or rent due previously to the sale (and with or without security at the discretion of the Court), be put in immediate possession of the land or tenure; and the Court in its decree may award against the defaulter the amount so paid, with interest thereupon at such rate as the Court thinks fit, or may charge the amount so paid, with interest thereupon at such rate as the Court orders, in any adjustment of accounts which may be directed in the decree passed in the suit.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

APPOINTMENT OF RECEIVERS.

Power of Court to appoint receivers.

503. Whenever it appears to the Court to be necessary for the realization, preservation or better custody or management of any property, moveable or immoveable, the subject of a suit, or under attachment, the Court may by order

(a) appoint a receiver of such property, and, if need be,

(b) remove the person in whose possession or custody the property may be from the possession or custody thereof;

(c) commit the same to the custody or management of such receiver; and

(d) grant to such receiver such fee or commission on the rents and profits of the property by way of remuneration, and all such powers as to bringing and defending suits, and for the realization, management, protection, preservation and improvement of the property, the collection of the rents and profits thereof, the application and disposal of such rents and profits, and the execution of instruments in writing, as the owner himself has, or such of those powers as the Court thinks fit.

Every receiver so appointed shall

(e) give such security (if any) as the Court thinks fit duly to account for what he shall receive in respect of the property,

(f) pass his accounts at such periods and in such form as the Court directs,

(g) pay the balance due from him thereon as the Court directs, and (h) be responsible for any loss occasioned to the property by his wilful default or gross negligence.

Nothing in this section authorizes the Court to remove from the possession or custody of property under attachment any person whom the parties to the suit, or some or one of them, have or has not a present right so to remove.

When Collector may be appointed receiver.

504. If the property be land paying revenue to Government, or land of which the revenue has been assigned or redeemed, and the Court considers that the interests of those concerned will be promoted by the management of the Collector, the Court may appoint the Collector to be receiver of such property.

Courts empowered under this chapter.

505. The powers conferred by this chapter shall be exercised only by High Courts and District Courts. Provided that whenever the Judge of a Court subordinate to a District Court considers it expedient that a receiver should be appointed in any suit before him, he shall nominate such person as he considers fit for such appointment, and submit such person's name, with the grounds for the nomination, to the District Court, and the District Court shall authorize such Judge to appoint the person so nominated or pass such other order as it thinks fit.

PART V.

OF SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

REFERENCE TO ARBITRATION.

Parties to suit may apply for order of reference.

506. If all the parties to a suit desire that any matter in difference between them in the suit be referred to arbitration, they may, at any time before judgment is pronounced, apply, in person or by their respective pleaders specially authorized in writing in this behalf, to the Court for an order of reference.

Every such application shall be in writing and shall state the particular matter sought to be referred.

Nomination of arbitrator.

507. The arbitrator shall be nominated by the parties in such manner as may be agreed upon between them.

When Court to nominate arbitrator.

If the parties cannot agree with respect to such nomination, or if the person whom they nominate refuses to accept the arbitration and the parties desire that the nomination shall be made by the Court, the Court shall nominate the arbitrator.

Order of reference.

508. The Court shall, by order, refer to the arbitrator the matter in difference which he is required to determine, and shall fix such time as it thinks reasonable for the delivery of the award, and specify such time in the order.

When once a matter is referred to arbitration, the Court shall not deal with it in the same suit, except as hereinafter provided.

When reference is to two or more, order to provide for difference of opinion.

509. If the reference be to two or more arbitrators, provision shall be made in the order for a difference of opinion among the arbitrators,

(a) by the appointment of an umpire, or

(b) by declaring that the decision shall be with the majority if the major part of the arbitrators agree, or

(c) by empowering the arbitrators to appoint an umpire, or

(d) otherwise, as may be agreed between the parties; or, if they cannot agree, as the Court determines.

If an umpire is appointed, the Court shall fix such time as it thinks reasonable for the delivery of his award in case he is required to act.

Death, incapacity, &c., of arbitrators or umpire.

510. If the arbitrator, or, where there are more arbitrators than one, any of the arbitrators, or the umpire, dies, or refuses, or neglects, or becomes incapable to act, or leaves British India under circumstances showing that he will probably not return at an early date, the Court may in its discretion either appoint a new arbitrator or umpire in the place of the person so dying, or refusing, or neglecting, or becoming incapable to act, or leaving British India, or make an order superseding the arbitration, and in such case shall proceed with the suit.

Appointment of umpire by Court.

511. Where the arbitrators are empowered by the order of reference to appoint an umpire and fail to do so, any of the parties may serve the arbitrators with a written notice to appoint an umpire; and if, within seven days after such notice has been served, or such further time as the Court may in each case allow, no umpire be appointed, the Court, upon the application of the party who has served such notice as aforesaid, may appoint an umpire.

Powers of arbitrator or umpire appointed under sections 509, 510, 511.

512. Every arbitrator or umpire appointed under section 509, 510 or 511 shall have the like powers as if his name had been inserted in the order of reference.

Summoning witnesses.

513. The Court shall issue the same processes to the parties and witnesses whom the arbitrators or umpire desire to examine, as the Court may issue in suits tried before it.

Punishment for default, &c.

Persons not attending in accordance with such process, or making any other default, or refusing to give their evidence, or guilty of any contempt to the arbitrator or umpirer during the investigation of the matters referred, shall be subject to the like disadvantages, penalties and punishments by order of the Court on the representation of the arbitrator or umpire, as they would incur for the like offences in suits tried before the Court.

Extension of time for making award.

514. If from the want of the necessary evidence or information, or from any other cause, the arbitrators cannot complete the award within the period specified in the order, the Court may, if it think fit, either grant a further time, and from time to time enlarge the period for the delivery of the award, or make an order superseding the arbitration, and in such case shall proceed with the suit.

When umpire may arbitrate in lieu of arbitrators.

515. When an umpire has been appointed, he may enter on the reference in the place of the arbitrators

(a) if they have allowed the appointed time to expire without making an award, or (b) when they have delivered to the Court or to the umpire a notice in writing, stating that they cannot agree.

Award to be signed and filed.

516. When an award in a suit has been made, the persons who made it shall sign it and cause it to be filed in Court, together with any depositions and documents which have been taken and proved before them; and notice of the filing shall be given to the parties.

Arbitrators or umpire may state special case.

517. Upon any reference by an order of Court, the arbitrators or umpire may, with the consent of the Court, state the award as to the whole or any part thereof in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court; and the Court shall deliver its opinion thereon; and such opinion shall be added to and form part of the award.

Court may, on application, modify or correct award in certain cases

518. The Court may, by order, modify or correct an award,

(a) where it appears that a part of the award is upon a matter not referred to arbitration, provided such part can be separated from the other part and does not affect the decision on the matter referred, or

(b) where the award is imperfect in form, or contains any obvious error which can be amended without affecting such decision.

Order as to costs of arbitration

519. The Court may also make such order as it thinks fit respecting the costs of the arbitration, if any question arise respecting such costs and the award contain no sufficient provision concerning them.

When award or matter referred to arbitration may be remitted.

520. The Court may remit the award or any matter referred to arbitration to the reconsideration of the same arbitrators or umpire, upon such terms as it thinks fit,

(a) where the award has left undetermined any of the matters referred to arbitration, or where it determines any matter not referred to arbitration;

(b) where the award is so indefinite as to be incapable of execution;

(c) where an objection to the legality of the award is apparent upon the face of it.

Grounds for setting aside award.

An award remitted under section 520 becomes void on the refusal of the arbitrators or umpire to reconsider it. But no award shall be set aside except on one of the following grounds (namely)—

(a) corruption or misconduct of the arbitrator or umpire;

(b) either party having been guilty of fraudulent concealment of any matter which he ought to have disclosed, or of wilfully misleading or deceiving the arbitrator or umpire;

(c) the award having been made after the issue of an order by the Court superseding the arbitration and restoring the suit; and no award shall be valid unless made within the period allowed by the Court.

Judgment to be according to award.

522. If the Court sees no cause to remit the award or any of the matters referred to arbitration for reconsideration in manner aforesaid, and if no application has been made to set aside the award, or if the Court has refused such application, the Court shall, after the time for making such application has expired, proceed to give judgment according to the award, or, if the award has been submitted to it in the form of a special case, according to its own opinion on such case:

Decree to follow.

Upon the judgment so given a decree shall follow, and shall be enforced in manner provided in this Code for the execution of decrees. No appeal shall lie from such decree except in so far as the decree is in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award.

Agreement to refer to arbitration may be filed in Court.

523. When any persons agree in writing that any difference between them shall be referred to the arbitration of any person named in the agreement or to be appointed by any Court having jurisdiction in the matter to which the agreement relates, the parties thereto, or any of them, may apply that the agreement be filed in Court.

Application to be numbered and registered.

The application shall be in writing and shall be numbered and registered as a suit between one or more of the parties interested or claiming to be interested as plaintiff or plaintiffs, and the others or other of them as defendants or defendant, if the application have been presented by all the parties, or, if otherwise, between the applicant as plaintiff and the other parties as defendants.

Notice to show cause against filing it.

On such application being made, the Court shall direct notice thereof to be given to any of the parties to the agreement other than the applicants, requiring such parties to show cause, within the time specified in the notice, why the agreement should not be filed.

If no sufficient cause be shown, the Court may order the agreement to be filed, and shall make an order of reference thereon, and may also nominate the arbitrator when he is not named therein and the parties cannot agree as to the nomination.

Provisions of this chapter applicable to proceedings under order of reference.

524. The foregoing provisions of this chapter, so far as they are consistent with any agreement so filed, shall be applicable to all proceedings under an order of reference made by the Court under section 523, and to the award of arbitration and to the enforcement of the decree founded thereupon.

Filing award in matter referred to arbitration without intervention of Court.

525. When any matter has been referred to arbitration without the intervention of a Court of Justice, and an award has been made thereon, any person interested in the award may apply to the Court of the lowest grade having jurisdiction over the matter to which the award relates, that the award be filed in Court.

Application to be numbered and registered.

The application shall be in writing and shall be numbered and registered as a suit between the applicant as plaintiff and the other parties as defendants.

Notice to parties to arbitration.

The Court shall direct notice to be given to the parties to the arbitration other than the applicant, requiring them to show cause, within a time specified, why the award should not be filed.

Filing and enforcement of such award.

526. If no ground such as is mentioned or referred to in section 520 or 521, be shown against the award, the Court shall order it to be filed, and such award shall then take effect as an award made under the provisions of this chapter.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Of Proceedings on Agreement of Parties.

Power to state case for Court's opinion.

527. Parties claiming to be interested in the decision of any question of fact or law, may enter into an agreement in writing stating such question in the form of a case for the opinion of the Court, and providing that, upon the finding of the Court with respect to such question,

(a) a sum of money fixed by the parties or to be determined by the Court, shall be paid by one of the parties to the other of them; or

(b) some property, moveable or immoveable, specified in the agreement, shall be delivered by one of the parties to the other of them; or

(c) one or more of the parties shall do, or refrain from doing, some other particular act specified in the agreement.

Every case stated under this section shall be divided into consecutively numbered paragraphs, and shall concisely state such facts and documents as may be necessary to enable the Court to decide the question raised thereby.

When value of subject-matter must be stated.

528. If the agreement is for the delivery of any property, or for the doing, or the refraining from doing, any particular act, the estimated value of the property to be delivered, or by which time not specified has reference, shall be stated in the agreement.

Agreement to be filed and numbered as a suit.

529. The agreement, if framed in accordance with the rules hereinbefore contained, may be filed in the Court which would have jurisdiction to entertain a suit, the amount or value of the subject-matter of which is the same as the amount or value of the subject-matter of the agreement.

The agreement, when so filed, shall be numbered and registered as a suit between one or more of the parties claiming to be interested, as plaintiff or plaintiffs, and the other or others of them as defendant or defendants; and notice shall be given to all the parties to the agreement other than the party or parties by whom it was presented.

Parties to be subject to Court's jurisdiction.

530. When the agreement has been filed, the parties to it shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the Court, and shall be bound by the statements contained therein.

Hearing and disposal of the case.

531. The case shall be set down for hearing as a suit instituted under chapter V, the provisions of which shall apply to such suit so far as the same are applicable.

If the Court is satisfied, after an examination of the parties, or taking such evidence as it thinks fit,

(a) that the agreement was duly executed by them, and

(b) that they have a bonâ fide interest in the question stated therein, and

(c) that the same is fit to be decided, it shall proceed to pronounce judgment thereon, in the same way as in an ordinary suit, and upon the judgment so given a decree shall follow, and shall be enforced in the manner provided in this Code for the execution of decrees.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Of summary Procedure on Negotiable Instruments.

532. In any Court to which this section applies all suits upon bills of exchange, hundís or promissory notes may, in case the plaintiff desires to proceed under this chapter, be instituted by presenting a plaint in the form prescribed by this Code; but the summons shall be in the form contained in the fourth schedule hereto annexed, No. 172, or in such other form as the High Court may from time to time prescribe.

In any case in which the plaint and summons are in such forms respectively, the defendant shall not appear or defend the suit unless he obtains leave from a Judge as hereinafter mentioned so to appear and defend; and in default of his obtaining such leave or of appearance and defence in pursuance thereof, the plaintiff shall be entitled to a decree for any sum not exceeding the sum mentioned in the summons, together with interest at the rate specified (if any) to the date of the decree and such further sum for costs as may be fixed by a rule of the High Court, unless the plaintiff claim more than such fixed sum, in which case the costs shall be ascertained in the ordinary way, and such decree may be enforced forthwith.

Payment into Court of sum mentioned in summons.

The defendant shall not be required to pay into Court the sum mentioned in the summons, or to give security therefor, unless the Court thinks his defence not to be primâ facie sustainable, or feels reasonable doubt as to its good faith.

Explanation.—This section is not confined to cases in which the bill, hundí or note sued upon, together with mere lapse of time, is sufficient to establish a primâ facie right to recover.

Defendant showing defence on merits to have leave to appear.

533. The Court shall, upon application by the defendant, give leave to appear and to defend the suit, upon the defendant paying into Court the sum mentioned in the summons or upon affidavits satisfactory to the Court, which disclose a defence or such facts as would make it incumbent on the holder to prove consideration, or such other facts as the Court may deem sufficient to support the application, and on such terms as to security, framing and recording issues, or otherwise, as the Court thinks fit.

Power to set aside decree.

534. After decree, the Court may, under special circumstances, set aside the decree, and if necessary stay or set aside execution, and may give leave to appear to the summons and to defend the suit, if it seem reasonable to the Court so to do, and on such terms as the Court thinks fit.

Power to order bill to be deposited with officer of Court.

535. In any proceeding under this chapter the Court may order the bill, hundí or note on which the suit is founded to be forthwith deposited with an officer of the Court, and may further order that all proceedings shall be stayed until the plaintiff gives security for the costs thereof.

Recovery of cost of noting non-acceptance of dishonoured bill.

536. The holder of every dishonoured bill of exchange or promissory note shall have the same remedies for the recovery of the expenses incurred in noting the same for non-acceptance or non-payment, or otherwise, by reason of such dishonour, as he has under this chapter for the recovery of the amount of such bill or note.

Procedure in suits under this chapter.

537. Except as provided by sections 532 to 536 both inclusive, the procedure in suits under this chapter shall be the same as the procedure in suits instituted under chapter V.

(a) the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William, Madras and Bombay;

(b) the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon;

(c) the Courts of Small Causes in Calcutta, Madras and Bombay;

(d) the Court of the Judge of Karáchi;

(e) any other Court having ordinary original civil jurisdiction to which the Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, apply them.

In case of such application the Local Government may direct by whom any of the powers and duties incident to the provisions so applied shall be exercised and performed, and make any rules which it thinks requisite for carrying into operation the provisions so applied.

Within one month after such notification has been published, such provisions shall apply accordingly, and the rules so made shall have the force of law.

The Local Government may from time to time alter or cancel any such notification.

CHAPTER XL.

OF SUITS RELATING TO PUBLIC CHARITIES.

When suit relating to public charities may be brought.

539. In case of any alleged breach of any express or constructive trust created for public charitable purposes, or whenever the direction of the Court is deemed necessary for the administration of any such trust, the Advocate General acting ex-officio, or two or more persons having a direct interest in the trust and having obtained the consent in writing of the Advocate General, may institute a suit in the High Court or the District Court within the local limits of whose civil jurisdiction the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the trust is situate, to obtain a decree—

(a) appointing new trustees of the charity:

(b) vesting any property in the trustees of the charity:

(c) declaring the proportions in which its objects are entitled:

(d) authorizing the whole or any part of its property to be let, sold, mortgaged or exchanged:

(e) settling a scheme for its management; or granting such further or other relief as the nature of the case may require.

The powers conferred by this section on the Advocate General may (where there is no Advocate General) be exercised by the Government Advocate) or (where there is no Government Advocate) by such officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf.

PART VI.

OF APPEALS.

CHAPTER XLI.

OF APPEALS FROM ORIGINAL DECREES.

Appeal to lie from all original decrees, except when expressly prohibited.

540. Unless when otherwise expressly provided in this Code or by any other law for the time being in force, an appeal shall lie from the decrees, or from any part of the decrees, of the Courts exercising original jurisdiction to the Courts authorized to hear appeals from the decisions of those Courts.

Form of appeal.

541. The appeal shall be made in the form of a memorandum in writing presented by the appellant, and shall be accompanied by a copy of the decree appealed against and (unless the appellate Court dispenses therewith) of the judgment on which it is founded.

Memorandum to be accompanied by copy of decree and judgment.

Such memorandum shall set forth, concisely and under distinct heads, the grounds of objection to the decree appealed against, without any argument or narrative, and such grounds shall be numbered consecutively.

Memorandum of appeal.

542. The appellant shall not, without the leave of the Court, urge or be heard in support of any other ground of objection, but the Court in deciding the appeal shall not be confined to the grounds set forth by the appellant:

Appellant confined to grounds set out.

Provided that the Court shall not rest its decision on any ground not set forth by the appellant, unless the respondent has had sufficient opportunity of contesting the case on that ground.

Rejection of memorandum or grounds of objection.

543. If the memorandum of appeal be not drawn up in the manner hereinbefore prescribed, it may be rejected, or be returned to the appellant for the purpose of being amended within a time to be fixed by the Court, or be amended then and there.

When the Court rejects under this section any memorandum, it shall record the reasons for such rejection.

When a memorandum of appeal is amended under this section the Judge, or such officer as he appoints in this behalf, shall attest the amendment by his signature.

One of several plaintiffs or defendants may obtain reversal of whole decree if it proceed on ground common to all.

544. Where there are more plaintiffs or more defendants than one in a suit, and the decree appealed against proceeds on any ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants, any one of the plaintiffs or of the defendants may appeal against the whole decree, and the Appellate Court may reverse or modify the decree in favour of all the plaintiffs or defendants as the case may be.

Of staying and executing Decrees under Appeal.

Execution of decree not stayed solely by reason of appeal.

545. Execution of a decree shall not be stayed by reason only of an appeal having been preferred against the decree; but the Appellate Court may for sufficient cause order the execution to be stayed:

Stay of execution of appealable decree before time for appealing has expired.

If an application be made for stay of execution of an appealable decree before the expiry of the time allowed for appealing therefrom, the Court which passed the decree may for sufficient cause order the execution to be stayed:

Provided that no order shall be made under this section unless the Court making it is satisfied—

(a) that substantial loss may result to the party applying for stay of execution unless the order is made;

(b) that the application has been made without unreasonable delay; and

(c) that security has been given by the applicant for the due performance of such decree or order as may ultimately be binding upon him.

Security required before making order to stay execution.

546. If an order is made for the execution of a decree against which an appeal is pending, the Court which passed the decree shall, on sufficient cause being shown by the appellant, require security to be given for the restitution of any property which may be taken in execution of the decree, or for the payment of the value of such property, and for the due performance of the decree or order of the Appellate Court, or the Appellate Court may for like cause direct the Court which passed the decree to take such security.

Security in case of order for execution of decree appealed against.

And when an order has been passed for the sale of immoveable property in execution of a decree for money and an appeal is pending against such decree, the sale shall on the application of the judgment-debtor be stayed until the appeal is disposed of, on such terms as to giving security or otherwise as the Court which passed the decree thinks fit.

547. No such security as is mentioned in sections 545 and 546 shall be required from the Secretary of State for India in Council, or (when Government has undertaken the defence of the suit) from any public officer sued in respect of an act alleged to be done by him in his official capacity.

No such security to be required from Government or public officers.

Of Procedure in Appeal from Decrees.

548. When a memorandum of appeal is admitted, the Appellate Court or the proper officer of that Court shall endorse thereon the date of presentation, and shall register the appeal in a book to be kept for the purpose.

Registry of memorandum of appeal.

Such book shall be called the Register of Appeals.

Register of appeals.

549. The Appellate Court may, at its discretion, either before the respondent is called upon to appear and answer or afterwards on the application of the respondent, demand from the appellant security for the costs of the appeal, or of the original suit, or of both :

Appellate Court may require appellant to give security for costs.

Provided that the Court shall demand such security in all cases in which the appellant is residing out of British India, and is not possessed of any sufficient immoveable property within British India independent of the property (if any) to which the appeal relates.

When appellant resides out of British India.

If such security be not furnished within such time as the Court orders, the Court shall reject the appeal.

550. When the memorandum of appeal is registered, the Appellate Court shall send notice of the appeal to the Court against whose decree the appeal is made.

Appellate Court to give notice to Court whose decree is appealed against.

If the appeal be from a Court the records of which are not deposited in the Appellate Court, the Court receiving such notice shall send with all practicable despatch all material papers in the suit, or such papers as may be specially called for by the Appellate Court.

Transmission of papers to Appellate Court.

Either party may apply in writing to the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, specifying any of such papers in such Court of which he requires copies to be made; and copies of such papers shall be made at the expense of the applicant, and shall be deposited accordingly.

Copies of exhibits in Court whose decree is appealed against.

551. The Appellate Court may, if it thinks fit, after fixing a time for hearing the appellant or his pleader, and hearing him accordingly if he appears at such time, confirm the decision of the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, without sending notice of the appeal to such Court and without serving notice on the respondent or his pleader; but in such case the confirmation shall be notified to the same Court.

Power to confirm decision of lower Court without sending it notice.

552. The Appellate Court, unless where it confirms, under section 551, the decision of the lower Court, shall fix a day for hearing the appeal.

Day for hearing appeal.

Such day shall be fixed with reference to the current business of the Court, the place of residence of the respondent, and the time necessary for the service of the notice of appeal, so as to allow the respondent sufficient time to appear and answer the appeal on such day.

553. Notice of the day so fixed shall be stuck up in the appellate court-house, and a like notice shall be sent by the Appellate Court to the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, and shall be served on the respondent or on his pleader in the Appellate Court in the manner provided in chapter VI for the service on a defendant of a summons to appear and answer; and all rules applicable to such summons and to proceedings with reference to the service thereof, shall apply to the service of such notice.

Publication and service of notice of day for hearing appeal.

Instead of sending the notice to the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, the Appellate Court may itself cause the notice to be served on the respondent or his pleader under the rules above referred to.

Appellate Court may itself cause notice to be served.

554. The notice to the respondent shall declare that, if he does not appear in the Appellate Court on the day so fixed, the appeal will be heard ex parte.

Contents of notice.

Procedure on Hearing.

555. On the day so fixed, or on any other day to which the hearing may be adjourned, the party having the right to begin shall be heard in support of or against the appeal, as the case may be. The other party shall then be heard, and the party having the right to begin shall then be entitled to reply.

Explanation.—If the appeal is from the whole decree, or if there are cross-appeals, the party having the right to begin is the party who had the right to begin on the hearing in the Court whose decree is appealed from.

If the appeal is from only a portion of the decree, and there is no cross-appeal, the appellant has the right to begin.

Dismissal of appeal for appellant's default.

556. If on the day so fixed, or any other day to which the hearing may be adjourned, the appellant does not attend in person or by his pleader, the appeal shall be dismissed for default.

Hearing appeal ex parte.

If the appellant attends and the respondent does not attend, the appeal shall be heard ex parte in his absence.

Dismissal of appeal where notice has not been served in consequence of appellant's failure to deposit cost of notice.

557. If on the day so fixed, or any other day to which the hearing may be adjourned, it is found that the notice to the respondent has not been served in consequence of the failure of the appellant to deposit, within the period fixed by the Court, the sum required to defray the cost of issuing the notice, the Court may order that the appeal be dismissed:

Proviso.

Provided that no such order shall be passed, although the notice has not been served upon the respondent, if on the day fixed for hearing the appeal the respondent appears in person or by a pleader, or by a duly authorized agent.

Re-admission of appeal dismissed for default.

558. If an appeal be dismissed under section 556 or section 557, the appellant may apply to the Appellate Court for the re-admission of the appeal; and if it be proved that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from attending when the appeal was called on for hearing or from depositing the sum so required, the Court may re-admit the appeal on such terms as to costs or otherwise as the Court thinks fit to impose upon him.

Power to adjourn hearing, and direct persons appearing interested to be made respondents.

559. If it appear to the Court at the hearing that any person who was a party to the suit in the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, but who has not been made a party to the appeal, is interested in the result of the appeal, the Court may adjourn the hearing to a future day to be fixed by the Court, and direct that such person be made a respondent.

Re-hearing on application of respondent against whom ex parte decree is made.

560. When an appeal is heard ex parte in the absence of the respondent, and judgment is given against him, he may apply to the Appellate Court to re-hear the appeal; and if it be proved that the respondent was prevented by sufficient cause from attending when the appeal was called on for hearing, the Court may re-hear the appeal on such terms as to costs or otherwise as the Court thinks fit to impose upon him.

Upon hearing respondent may object to decree as if he had preferred separate appeal.

561. Any respondent, though he may not have appealed against any part of the decree, may upon the hearing not only support the decree on any of the grounds decided against him in the Court below, but take any objection to the decree which he could have taken by way of appeal, provided he has given to the appellant or his pleader seven days' notice of such objection.

Form of notice, and provisions applicable thereto.

Such objection shall be in the form of a memorandum, and the provisions of section 541, so far as they relate to the form and contents of the memorandum of appeal, shall apply thereto.

Remand of case by Appellate Court.

562. If the Court against whose decree the appeal is made has disposed of the suit upon a preliminary point so as to exclude any evidence of fact which appears to the Appellate Court essential to the determination of the rights of the parties, and the decree upon such preliminary point is reversed in appeal, the Appellate Court may, if it thinks fit, by order remand the case, together with a copy of the order in appeal, to the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, with directions to re-admit the suit under its original number in the register and proceed to investigate the suit on the merits.

The Appellate Court may, if it think fit, direct what issue or issues shall be tried in any case so remanded.

When further evidence barred.

563. When a case is remanded with directions to take any evidence so excluded the Court to which the case is remanded shall not take any other evidence in the case, except evidence tendered to contradict the evidence so taken.

Limit to remand.

564. The Appellate Court shall not remand a case for a second decision, except as provided in section 562.

When evidence on record sufficient, Appellate Court shall determine case finally.

565. When the evidence upon the record is sufficient to enable the Appellate Court to pronounce judgment, the Appellate Court shall, after re-settling the issues, if necessary, finally determine the case notwithstanding that the judgment of the Court against whose decree the appeal is made has proceeded wholly upon some ground other than that on which the Appellate Court proceeds.

When Appellate Court may frame issues and refer them for trial to Court whose decree is appealed against.

566. If the Court against whose decree the appeal is made has omitted to frame or try any issue, or to determine any question of fact, which appears to the Appellate Court essential to the right decision of the suit upon the merits, and the evidence upon the record is not sufficient to enable the Appellate Court to determine such issue or question, the Appellate Court may frame issues for trial, and may refer the same for trial to the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, and in such case shall direct such Court to take the additional evidence required, and such Court shall proceed to try such issue, and shall return to the Appellate Court its finding thereon together with the evidence.

Finding and evidence to be put on record.
Objections to finding.

567. Such finding and evidence shall become part of the record in the suit; and either party may, within a time to be fixed by the Appellate Court, present a memorandum of objections to the finding.

Determination of appeal.

After the expiration of the period fixed for presenting such memorandum, the Appellate Court shall proceed to determine the appeal.

Production of additional evidence in Appellate Court.

568. The parties to an appeal shall not be entitled to produce additional evidence, whether oral or documentary, in the Appellate Court. But if

(a) the Court against whose decree the appeal is made refused to admit evidence which ought to have been admitted, or,

(b) the Appellate Court requires any document to be produced or any witness to be examined to enable it to pronounce judgment or for any other substantial cause, the Appellate Court may allow such evidence to be produced, or document to be received, or witness to be examined.

Whenever additional evidence is admitted by an Appellate Court, the Court shall record on its proceedings the reason for such admission.

Mode of taking additional evidence.

569. Whenever additional evidence is allowed to be received, the Appellate Court may either take such evidence, or direct the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, or any other subordinate Court, to take such evidence and to send it when taken to the Appellate Court.

Points to be defined and recorded.

570. In all cases where additional evidence is directed or allowed to be taken, the Appellate Court shall specify the points to which the evidence is to be confined, and record on its proceedings the points so specified.

Of the Judgment in Appeal.

Judgment when and where pronounced.

571. The Appellate Court, after hearing the parties or their pleaders and referring to any part of the proceedings, whether on appeal or in the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, to which reference may be considered necessary, shall pronounce judgment in open Court, either at once or on some future day, of which notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders.

Language of judgment.

572. The judgment shall be written in English; provided that if English is not the mother-tongue of the Judge, and he is not able to write an intelligible judgment in English, the judgment shall be written in his mother-tongue or in the language of the Court.

Translation of judgment.

573. When the language in which the judgment is written is not the language of the Court, the judgment shall, if any party so require, be translated into such language, and the translation, after it has been ascertained to be correct, shall be signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints in this behalf.

Contents of judgment.

574. The judgment of the Appellate Court shall state—

(a) the points for determination;

(b) the decision thereupon;

(c) the reasons for the decision; and

(d) when the decree appealed against is reversed or varied, the relief to which the appellant is entitled, and shall at the time that it is pronounced be signed and dated by the Judge or by the Judges concurring therein.

Date and signature.

Decision when appeal is heard by two or more Judges.

575. When the appeal is heard by a Bench of two or more Judges, the appeal shall be decided in accordance with the opinion of such Judges or of the majority (if any) of such Judges.

If there be no such majority which concurs in a judgment varying or reversing the decree appealed against, such decree shall be affirmed:

Provided that if the Bench hearing the appeal is composed of two Judges belonging to a Court consisting of more than two Judges, and the Judges composing the Bench differ in opinion on a point of law, the appeal may be referred to one or more of the other Judges of the same Court, and shall be decided according to the opinion of the majority (if any) of all the Judges who have heard the appeal, including those who first heard it.

When there is no such majority which concurs in a judgment varying or reversing the decree appealed against, such decree shall be affirmed.

The High Court may from time to time make rules consistent with this Code to regulate references under this section.

Dissent to be recorded.

576. When the appeal is heard by more Judges than one, any Judge dissenting from the judgment of the Court shall state in writing the decision or order which he thinks should be passed on the appeal, and he may state his reasons for the same.

What judgment may direct.

577. The judgment may be for confirming, varying or reversing the decree of the Court against which the appeal is made, or, if the parties to the appeal agree as to the form which the decree in appeal shall take, or as to the order to be passed in appeal, the Appellate Court may pass a decree or order accordingly.

No decree to be reversed or modified for error or irregularity not affecting merits or jurisdiction.

578. No decree shall be reversed or substantially varied, nor shall any case be remanded in appeal, on account of any error, defect or irregularity, whether in the decision or in any order passed in the suit, or otherwise, not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court.

Of the Decree in Appeal.

579. The decree of the Appellate Court shall bear date the day on which the judgment was pronounced.

Contents of decree.

The decree shall contain the number of the appeal, and the memorandum of appeal, including the names and description of the appellant and respondent, and shall specify clearly the relief granted or other determination of the appeal.

The decree shall also state the amount of costs incurred in the appeal, and by what parties and in what proportions such costs and the costs in the suit are to be paid.

The decree shall be signed and dated by the Judge or Judges who passed it:

Provided that where there are more Judges than one, if there be a difference of opinion among them, it shall not be necessary for any Judge dissenting from the judgment of the Court to sign the decree.

Judge dissenting from judgment need not sign decree.

580. Certified copies of the judgment and decree in appeal shall be furnished to the parties on application to the Court and at their expense.

581. A copy of the judgment and of the decree, certified by the Appellate Court or such officer as it appoints in this behalf, shall be sent to the Court which passed the decree appealed against, and shall be filed with the original proceedings in the suit, and an entry of the judgment of the Appellate Court shall be made in the register of civil suits.

The provisions hereinbefore contained shall apply to appeals under this chapter so far as such provisions are applicable.

583. When a party entitled to any benefit (by way of restitution or otherwise) under a decree passed in an appeal under this chapter desires to obtain execution of the same, he shall apply to the Court which passed the decree against which the appeal was preferred; and such Court shall proceed to execute the decree passed in appeal, according to the rules hereinbefore prescribed for the execution of decrees in suits.

COURT OF WARDS.

THE HON'BLE MR. SCHALCH moved that the Bill to amend the Court of Wards' Act, 1870, be further considered in order to the settlement of its clauses.

The motion was agreed to.

On the motion of the Hon'ble Baboo Ramshunker Sen, verbal amendments were made in sections 28 and 58.

The Hon'ble Baboo Isser Chunder moved the addition to section 50 of the following words:—

"and, subject to the approval of the Board, in payment of such charitable and other allowances as were paid out of the proceeds of the estate before it came under the management of the Court, or such customary allowances or donations as the Court may authorize to be paid."

He said the amendment had been put forward on the last occasion, but with an addition suggested by his hon'ble friend Baboo Kristodas Pal. The addition was to the effect that these allowances were to come out of the ten per cent. for improvements. The result was that the amendment was not accepted by the Council, and as it was the opinion of some hon'ble members that the amendment as it originally stood would be a great improvement, he now begged to move it again.

The motion was agreed to.

In section 57 the words "or to the manager or sub-manager" at the end of the section were, on the motion of the Hon'ble Baboo Ramshunker Sen, omitted. The section declared to what persons the manager was to furnish accounts, and the latter part of the section provided that, when the property of a ward was situated in different divisions, it should be optional with the Board to order that the accounts for the lands in each district should be submitted to the Collector of that district, or to the Collector in charge of the ward, "or to the manager or sub-manager." The words referred to were clearly anomalous, and ought to be struck out.

The Hon'ble Mr. Bell said he owed the Council some apology for the amendment he was about to propose. It would be in the recollection of hon'ble members that at the last meeting an amendment was carried on the motion of the hon'ble member opposite (Nawab Meer Mahomed Ali), which provided that in the case of a Mahomedan ward no guardian should be appointed unless he professed the Mahomedan faith. That amendment was passed without any discussion, and he believed also without any remark; and he had no doubt that many hon'ble members voted for the amendment without fully considering what the real effect of the amendment was. He did not for a moment mean to say that his hon'ble friend had taken the Council by surprise in moving the amendment, because it had been in the hands of the members two days before the Council met. But it had never been brought forward before the Select Committee, and hon'ble members had not therefore had the opportunity of considering it in all its details and effects. Now, the law on the subject of guardians of minors subject to the Court of Wards as it at present stood, and as it had existed since 1793, was this, that in the case of boys the Court of Wards had the power to appoint any guardian it thought fit; but in the case of female wards, the Court was compelled to appoint a female guardian who was of the same religion as the ward herself. Mr. Bell thought that in the case of a female ward, particularly of a ward of the Hindoo or Mahomedan religion, such an arrangement was very necessary. In consequence of the practice of early marriages in this country, female wards seldom required a guardian beyond the age of twelve years; because, after a female ward was married, the necessity for a guardian ceased, as by law the husband was the guardian. The necessity therefore of a guardian in the case of female wards only lasted during those tender years of infancy when the mind was very plastic and impressible, and it was therefore desirable that they should be guarded from those external influences which might interfere with the precepts of their faith.

But the case was different with youths. By a recent Act of the Legislature the age of majority had been extended from eighteen to twenty-one, and the object in thus putting on the age was that the youth might receive a more complete education than could be obtained at the age of eighteen, and that he might go forth into the world better educated and better fitted to perform the duties of life. Now, in the education of wards great attention had always been bestowed, and very deservedly bestowed, on European culture and European science; and in the case of a ward with a large estate, it was very often found convenient to give him as guardian some gentleman of literary and scientific attainments, who would undertake the proper education of the ward and act at the same time as his guardian as well. When MR. BELL was at Delhi on the occasion of the recent assemblage there, he had had the good fortune to meet with two native noblemen of Bengal who were brought up under private tutors who also acted as their guardians, and he must say that the education they had received, both their mental culture and their physical training, were such as would enable them to contrast very favourably with gentlemen of their own class and position at home.

The amendment which was carried by his hon'ble friend at the last meeting had this peculiar effect: it recognized the propriety of allowing a Hindoo ward to have a guardian of any religion; but in the case of a Mahomedan ward, it limited the selection to persons professing the Mahomedan faith. MR. BELL did not wish to say a word in disparagement of any section of the Mahomedan community; but he thought his hon'ble friend would admit that Mahomedan gentlemen as a rule were not so impressed with the necessity for education in European science and culture as their fellow-subjects the Hindoos were. It therefore seemed to him that the Council would be taking a very retrograde step if they prevented the Court of Wards, in cases in which they thought it expedient, from appointing a European guardian to a Mahomedan youth. The law as it at present stood was the same as it had existed since 1793, and he was not aware that any complaint had ever been made on any occasion that the power which the Court of Wards had of appointing guardians had ever been abused. The only reason for restricting the power in the case of female wards was that their education ceased at a very early age, and that they were only under the guardianship of the Court of Wards during the earliest period of infancy. But in the case of youths it was most necessary that the Court should have an unlimited field of selection, and should not be restricted in appointing a guardian by a provision that the guardian must be of the same religion as the ward.

It was for these reasons that MR. BELL asked the Council to adopt the amendment which he now proposed; it was simply to leave the law as it was at present. It was a law which had worked since 1793 most satisfactorily, and, as far as he was aware, had never been the subject of complaint. He moved that the following be substituted for section 60:—

"Every guardian shall be appointed in the manner hereinbefore provided for the appointment of managers:

"Provided always that none but a female shall be appointed guardian of a female ward:

"Provided also that none but a person of the same religion shall, except in the case of a testamentary guardian, be appointed guardian of a female ward, preference being given to female relatives if any such be eligible. Every guardian shall be subordinate to the Court and to the Collector exercising the duties of the Court under sections 15, 16, 18, and 19.

"Except as provided in section 35, no guardian shall be appointed in any case in which the Court may consider such appointment unnecessary."

The HON'BLE NAWAB MEER MAHOMED ALI observed that although under the existing law a guardian of a different religion might be appointed to a Mahomedan ward, yet practically he believed that it never was done. It appeared to him most desirable that a ward should be trained to the manners and customs of his own religion, and if under the existing law guardians were appointed of a different religion to their wards, such a law, he thought, should not be maintained, as it appeared to him to be contrary to the Mahomedan religion. For these reasons he contended that the section should stand as it was amended at the last meeting of the Council.

The HON'BLE THE ADVOCATE-GENERAL said it was obvious that the amendment now suggested would afford a decided advantage, inasmuch as a ward who was wealthy might have a European gentleman appointed as his guardian. The Raj case of Cooch Behar was a conspicuous example of the advantage of such an appointment. It appeared to the ADVOCATE-GENERAL that it was to the benefit of wards that unrestricted power in the nomination of guardians should be given to the Court of Wards.

The HON'BLE NAWAB MEER MAHOMED ALI thought it necessary that, as respects Mahomedan wards, they ought first to be taught their religion and the manners and customs of their race, and education in other matters might follow.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said he felt that the hon'ble gentleman was under a disadvantage, as being the only Mahomedan member in the Council, and HIS HONOR would therefore gladly have supported him if he saw anything whatever in his proposal which had any real bearing on Mahomedan interests. His Honor could not understand the nature of the objection which had been raised. There was no possible difference between the cases of Hindoo and Mahomedan wards; and if it was right that the selection of guardians in the case of wards of the Hindoo religion should be left to the discretion of the Court of Wards, he could not conceive why it was considered wrong where the ward was of the Mahomedan persuasion. It was true that there had not been many cases of Mahomedan wards having European guardians, but that was perhaps to be accounted for from there having been few large zemindaries belonging to Mahomedan gentlemen under the Court of Wards. But still, unless he was very much mistaken, there had been such cases before, notwithstanding that the hon'ble gentleman declared that he knew of no such case, and there might possibly be again, and if they did not arise, no harm would be done by the amendment now proposed. The provision, moreover, was not compulsory: it simply gave power to appoint a guardian of a different religion when there were special reasons for doing so. In the case of a nawab or zemindar of eminence and wealth, it might be very desirable, and be in accordance with the wishes of the ward's family, to place him under an officer or a gentleman of high attainments. If it was wrong to appoint a European guardian to the Mahomedan, it was equally wrong to appoint such a guardian to the Hindoo, which was a view which no one had ever taken yet. His Honor regretted therefore that he could not support the objection of the hon'ble member.

The motion was then agreed to.

The Hon'ble Baboo Ramshunker Sen said section 66 provided that guardians should render monthly and annual accounts of the expenses incurred on account of the wards in their charge. He would propose as an amendment that the following proviso be added to the section:—

"Provided that where a fixed allowance is given for the support of a ward, the Court may exempt his guardian, if a female, from rendering such monthly or annual account-current."

He observed that there were cases in which it was found impracticable to obtain these accounts from the guardians of minors, notably in cases in which the minor's mother was the guardian and the other members of the family lived in the same house and formed one family with the ward. In such cases guardians had to expend something out of their own pocket in addition to the allowance, and it was very difficult for such persons to give an exact account of the expenses incurred on behalf of the ward. He thought therefore that a discretion should be left to the Court to exempt such female guardians from rendering these monthly or annual accounts.

The motion was agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Schalch withdrew the motion, of which notice had been given, for the insertion of the following section after section 78:—

"No contract for the marriage of any ward under the age of twenty-one shall be deemed valid without the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor, and no such ward shall marry without the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor obtained previously to such marriage on application made to him through the Court and the Board."

The Hon'ble Mr. Bell said his hon'ble friend Nawab Meer Mahomed Ali had moved an amendment at the last meeting to omit certain words from section 84, which authorized the Court of Wards to sell an estate which was not claimed within one year after the death of a ward. That provision certainly seemed a very stringent one, and in the amendment which he now proposed he had provided against the mischief against which his hon'ble friend had intended to guard. The reason why he preferred his own amendment to that of his hon'ble friend was that his hon'ble friend's amendment conflicted with Bengal Act VII of 1876. He would move that the following section be substituted for sections 83, 84, and 85:—

"If on the death of any ward the succession to his property, or any part thereof, be in dispute, it shall be competent to the Court either to make over such property, or part of such property, to any person claiming such property, or to continue the charge and management of such property, or part of such property, under the provisions of this Act until the right of such claimant has been determined by the Collector under Bengal Act VII of 1876, Section 55, or by a competent court.

The motion was agreed to.

The HON'BLE BABOO KRISTODAS PAL withdrew the amendment to section 84 of which he had given notice.

On the motion of the HON'BLE BABOO RAMSHUNKER SEN verbal amendments were made in the forms in Schedules A and B.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said it was right to mention that he had that morning at the last moment received a memorial in respect of this Bill. It was from Baboo Prannath Pundit, and was chiefly in reference to objections which the amendments which had been moved by hon'ble members had already removed. There were besides other minor matters discussed in the memorial which were entirely unimportant. HIS HONOR would observe that if the memorialist had anything particular to suggest, he should have done so at an earlier stage.

The HON'BLE MR. SCHALCH then moved that the Bill be passed.

The motion was agreed to and the Bill was passed.

GHATWALI POLICE.

THE HON'BLE MR. BELL moved that the report of the Select Committee on the Bill for the regulation of the Ghatwali Police in the districts of Bankoora and Maunbhoom be taken into consideration in order to the settlement of the clauses of the Bill, and that the clauses of the Bill be considered for settlement in the form recommended by the Select Committee. He said, when he had the honor to introduce the Bill, he had explained the circumstances which had rendered the present legislation necessary. He did not intend to trouble the Council by again adverting to those circumstances. He should content himself with explaining what the action of the Select Committee had been. The Bill as now settled related merely to the district of Bankoora, and it was confined to one subject—the regulation of the Ghatwali Police in that district. Hon'ble members were aware that a considerable body of police officers called ghatwals had for many years existed in Bankoora. As far as our information extended, they owed their origin to the time when the pergunnah of Bissenpore was under the executive control of the Rajah of that place. During the times of anarchy and disorder, which prevailed towards the end of the Mogul dynasty, a number of predatory tribes harassed the country; and it was supposed that the Rajah established these ghatwals to resist the incursions of those hostile marauders, and to protect the persons and property of travellers and merchants who traversed the high roads of the district. For the support of these ghatwals grants of land were assigned, and these grants were held on a twofold condition—firstly, the payment of a small quit-rent; and secondly, the performance of police duties. When the executive control of the district passed from the Rajah of Bissenpore to the British Government, the Rajah found considerable difficulty in dealing with these ghatwals and in collecting his quit-rent from them. As the quit-rent was included in the assessment of the pergunnah, the Rajah naturally considered it hard that he should be compelled to pay the Government revenue with unfailing punctuality while he was unable to realize the quit-rent from the ghatwals. On this, an agreement was entered into by which the Magistrate undertook to collect the quit-rents and credit them to the Rajah, and in return for this concession the Rajah made over to the Magistrate the entire control and management of these ghatwals. This happened in the first years of the century, and since then the quit-rent had been paid to the Magistrate, and the appointment and dismissal of the ghatwals was vested exclusively in the Magistrate's hands. Unfortunately, when the ghatwals were made over to the Magistrate, no very correct record was made of the duties which they had to perform. But in those days the omission was of little importance. From 1806 to 1872 the ghatwals performed whatever duties they were required to perform, and although numerous ghatwals were dismissed for acts of insubordination or misconduct, there was not on record an instance in which an appeal was made to the Civil Court. But in 1872 serious differences arose between the ghatwals and the Magistrate. There had been a great increase of dacoity in Bankoora, and the District Superintendent of Police attempted to turn the ghatwals to better account by requiring them to patrol the roads. The ghatwals resisted the order, and various ghatwals were dismissed. This dispute regarding the patrolling of roads led also to other differences, and the consequence was that the Magistrate was in a great number of instances taken into the Civil Court, and the Civil Court was asked to determine whether the services which the Magistrate required the ghatwals to perform were services which could legally be required of them or not.

MR. BELL submitted that no body of police could be efficiently managed if, whenever an order was passed, the police officer was at liberty to go to the Civil Court and ask whether the order was one which he was bound to obey. This result, so disastrous to discipline, was certainly owing to there being no clearly defined and settled rules to which both the Magistrate and the ghatwals could appeal, to know what they could and what they could not be required to do.

The Select Committee, in considering the question, had received great assistance from the local officers in communication with whom the Bill had been drawn up. In considering the duties which the ghatwals should be called upon to perform, the Committee had kept as closely as possible to the duties exacted from village chowkeedars. It was not, however, possible to adopt the whole of the Chowkeedaree Act, as the circumstances of the ghatwals differed in many essential particulars from the circumstances of chowkeedars. It often happened that there were ten or twelve ghatwals in one village, of whom only one would be required to act as a chowkeedar. In such cases the Bill authorized the Magistrate to employ the surplus ghatwals on patrol duties; but in doing so, the Committee provided that a ghatwal should not be required to patrol at a greater distance than five miles from the village to which he belonged, and he could only be required to act as a patrol for three months in the year; after that he would be his own master for the remainder of the year. The Committee had made the duties of ghatwals as light as they consistently could, and they thought that in the provision which they had made they had acted as fairly as possible to the ghatwal on the one hand, and the district officers of Government on the other. The Committee had also provided for the dismissal of a ghatwal; but as he had a quasi-hereditary interest in the land which formed his service tenure, it was provided that no ghatwal should be dismissed, except after three convictions within the space of two years, for disobedience to orders, wilful misconduct, or neglect of duty, or except after being sentenced to rigorous imprisonment under the provisions of the Penal Code, or of any local or special law. As a further safeguard, it was provided that a ghatwal who had been dismissed should have a right of appeal to the Commissioner of the Division.

The Bill as settled by the Select Committee had the entire approval of the local officers, except with regard to section 4. That section, as it stood, was objected to both by the Commissioner and the Magistrate; and as MR. BELL only received the Commissioner's letter yesterday, he had not had time to frame an amendment to meet the objection which was raised, but he hoped to do so at the next meeting of the Council.

There was only one other point to which he wished to refer. The Committee had received a petition from Messrs. Erskine and Co. and Messrs. Gisborne and Co., who were large landed proprietors in one part of the district of Bankoora. They objected to the Bill for two or three reasons. First, they complained that they had very great difficulty in collecting their rents from the ghatwals. He should have observed that it was only in a portion of the district of Bankoora that the quit-rent was paid to the Government. In the locality in which Messrs. Erskine's estates were situated the quit-rent was paid to the zemindar, and these gentlemen complained that they had very great difficulty in getting the ghatwals to pay their rent. It was suggested to Messrs. Erskine and Co. and to Messrs. Gisborne and Co. that in all probability the Government would be prepared to make the same arrangement with them as had been made with the Rajah of Bissenpore in 1806; that is to say, that the Magistrate should take the trouble of collecting the quit-rent and credit the amount of such quit-rent in the zemindar's account. To this suggestion, however, the zemindars did not seem disposed to accede, and the Committee had therefore provided that if the ghatwal persistently refused to pay rent to the zemindar, it should be optional with the Magistrate, if he thought proper, to dismiss the ghatwal from his appointment. So far the Committee had attempted to meet the just wishes of the zemindars. They had given to the zemindars in collecting their quit-rent a remedy very similar to what the Government enjoyed in the collection of their quit-rents.

Then there was another point to which the petitioners alluded. They called in question the arrangement which was made with the Rajah of Bissenpore at the commencement of this century. They said that as the Government at the time took upon themselves the control of the ghatwals, they ought to guarantee the payment of the quit-rent, or restore to the zemindar the power of dismissing and appointing the ghatwal. MR. BELL did not think that this was a question which the Council would entertain. The Select Committee had framed their Bill upon the existing practice—a practice which had been in force for very many years. The Magistrate had at present the exclusive right of dismissing a ghatwal, and this right they had continued to the Magistrate; it was a right which he already possessed, and which the Committee considered ought to be maintained.

There was another point in the petition with reference to which MR. BELL wished to make one or two remarks. The zemindars complained that the ghatwal's tenure had been made hereditary; they said it was not hereditary. But in point of fact the Committee had left the question of the tenure being hereditary or not hereditary, as far as the zemindar was concerned, entirely untouched. The provisions in this respect merely related to the Government on the one side, and the ghatwal on the other. The ghatwal had been granted, as against Government, a hereditary tenure under certain circumstances, and the Committee had not attempted to interfere with any rights which the zemindar might possess. The zemindars complained that their reversionary rights had been altogether ignored; but, in fact, the Committee had not touched these reversionary rights, because they were not in question in the present Bill. Hon'ble members were perhaps aware that these tenures had been a fruitful source of litigation between the ghatwals and the zemindars in every district in Bengal in which they existed. The zemindars maintained that they had a right to resume these tenures on the necessity for the service ceasing; but the Privy Council had held that the cessation of the service gave the zemindar no right to resume the tenure. These questions were, however, quite beside the Bill, and the Committee had not touched upon them.

He did not think there was any further remark which it was necessary for him to make, but he wished to correct a statement which he had made when he introduced the Bill. He then stated that Mr. Macaulay, to whose exertions they were much indebted for the very valuable information which he had laid before them, had expressed an opinion that it was perfectly useless to attempt to turn these ghatwals to any good account. MR. BELL found that he had entirely misapprehended what Mr. Macaulay had said. Mr. Macaulay's opinion very much concided with his own, that so long as the duties of the ghatwals were left undefined and undetermined it would be impossible to utilize them; but that, if the present Bill was passed, and the duties of the ghatwals were clearly defined, they might be made an efficient force.

In conclusion, he thought it right to express on behalf of himself and the Select Committee the great advantage they had derived in discussing the measure from the assistance they had received from the local officers. In a Bill of the peculiar nature of this one, it was necessary that the Select Committee should proceed upon the experience of the local officers, and he hoped the Bill he now presented would answer the purpose which the local officers had in view.

The motion was agreed to.

The consideration of section 4 was postponed; the rest of the Bill was agreed to as it stood.

PROVINCIAL PUBLIC WORKS CESS.

THE HON'BLE MR. REYNOLDS said that the Bill to provide for the levy of a cess for the construction and maintenance of provincial public works had been for some days in the hands of hon'ble members, and he now begged to move that it be read in Council. The measure was little more than an application of the existing method of assessment and valuation under the Road Cess Act to the proposed new cess. The Road Cess Act of 1871 was at present in force in all the districts of Lower Bengal, with the exception of Singhboom, the Sonthal Pergunnahs, and the Chittagong Hill Tracts, and collections had actually commenced in every district except Darjeeling and Chittagong. In Darjeeling the Act had only come into force a few months ago, and in Chittagong the number of estates was so excessive that the valuations were not yet furnished; but it was expected that in both these districts the preliminary operations would be completed during the present cess year, and the work of collection commenced from October next. The three remaining districts which he had mentioned—Singhboom, the Sonthal Pergunnahs, and the Chittagong Hill Tracts—would no doubt escape all collections under this Bill; and it was under the consideration of Government in what way these districts might be made to contribute their proper quota to provincial revenues. But these districts were poor and were thinly inhabited, mostly by aboriginal tribes, and, under any circumstances, they could not contribute much.

The first section of the Bill provided that the Lieutenant-Governor might exempt any district or sub-division of a district, or any estate or tenure, from the operation of the Act. That had been introduced with the object of allowing the Lieutenant-Governor to exempt from contributions under this Bill such parts of districts or estates as would be liable to the irrigation rate under the Bill which was in charge of his hon'ble colleague Mr. Ravenshaw. In the remainder of the sections the Road Cess Act was almost completely followed. The only section he need call particular attention to was section 8, which provided for the realization of the cess. The realization of the road cess was regulated by section 23 of the Road Cess Act. It had been pointed out by the Board of Revenue that the mode of realization was cumbrous and inconvenient, and the Board had urged an amendment of the Act in that respect. It was therefore thought necessary to provide that every amount which might become due to Government in respect of any arrears of the public works cess should be deemed to be a demand under section I of Bengal Act VII of 1868, and should be recoverable as such. The definitions of the road cess had been adopted in the present Bill. But as there might be room for some ambiguity as to what might be considered provincial public works, the 11th section gave power to the Lieutenant-Governor to declare what works were to be deemed provincial public works for the purposes of the Bill.

He thought he need not detain the Council with any further remarks, and he would therefore move that the Bill be read in Council.

The Hon'ble Baboo Kristodas Pal said that there was no member of the Council who could have heard His Honor the President's statement last week without deeply feeling the responsibility of his position, or wishing to offer the Lieutenant-Governor his hearty co-operation and support in meeting the difficulties which frowned upon His Honor at the very threshold of his career as the responsible ruler of Bengal. He was well aware that whatever might be said here as to the reasons on which it had been decided to throw the burden of additional taxation on Bengal, or as to the principles of the new taxation, Bills now before this Council would not alter the decision of the Government of India; but he hoped His Honor would not deny to hon'ble members the right, which the constitution of the Council conferred on them, to examine for themselves those reasons and principles. In discussing a measure of taxation in this Council, hon'ble members labored under great disadvantages, as they had not the requisite detailed information regarding the financial operations of Government beyond what was contained in published reports, returns, and statements; but with the information thus available he ventured to offer a few remarks.

The first point to which he would crave leave to draw the attention of the Council was the part which Bengal had played in the interesting drama of the rise and progress of the British power in the East. It was an historical fact that the Revolution which led to the planting of the British standard on the soil of Bengal was brought about by a few leaders of the nation, who, driven to despair by the oppressions and cruelties of Suraja-doula of ill fame, invited Clive to take possession of the country and to wield the sceptre. And they all knew how from the plains of Plassey the Empire had grown and extended till it now covered almost the whole Indian peninsula; how the small band of merchants became the rulers of one-fifth of the human race; how England, which, about three hundred years ago, stood as a suppliant before the Great Moghul for a foot space as it were on the plains of Bengal for trade in the East, had become the first and mightiest power in Asia. And what had been the share of Bengal in this wondrous consummation, the marvel of the civilized world, the envy of rival nations in Europe and America? The history of the rise and progress of British power in India might be divided into six great epochs—the first, from the time of Clive to that of Lord Amherst, who, in 1827, proclaimed England as the Paramount Power in India; the second, from the reign of Lord William Bentinck to that of Lord Auckland, which was the era of peace, disturbed only by the disastrous campaign against Afghanistan; the third, from the reign of Lord Ellenborough to that of Lord Hardinge, which included the conquest of Sindh and the first Sihk war; the fourth, the Dalhousian era of annexation; the fifth, the Sepoy Mutiny; and the sixth, the direct government of the country by the Crown. From 1757 to 1805 occurred that keen struggle for dominion which ensued between the English, the French, and the great native powers in the country. Within this period were waged the great battles of Patna and Buxar between the English and the Emperor of Delhi and Mir Kassim, which won for the East India Company the province of Behar, the Rohilla war, the Mahratta war, the Mysore wars, and the conflict between the Nawab Vizier of Oudh and the Emperor of Delhi, in which the English supported the former. The result of this warfare was the establishment of British power on a broad and strong basis, the acquisition of Behar in 1764, of the Carnatic and other provinces in Madras in 1801, of the ceded districts in North India which now constituted the North-West Provinces from the Nawab Vizier of Oudh in 1801, and of Orissa from the Mahrattas in 1803-1804. And who was it that supplied the sinews of war during this eventful period? The earliest revenue returns he had seen did not go back further than 1792, and from the returns from the years 1792-93 to 1801, he would give to the Council the receipts and charges of the then three divisions of the Company's territories. In 1792-93 the gross revenues of Bengal were £5,512,761, from Madras £2,476,312, and of Bombay £236,555. In that year the gross charges were for Bengal £3,873,859, for Madras £2,222,878, and for Bombay £844,096. The surplus revenue of Bengal was therefore £1,638,902. He would not weary the Council by going into the figures of all these years, but take the year 1801, which was the last of the years he wished to allude to. But he might say that during these years the surplus revenue of Bengal varied from £1,439,812 to £2,157,785. In the year 1801 the gross revenue of Bengal amounted to £6,658,334, of Madras £3,540,268, and of Bombay £286,457. The gross charges were for Bengal £5,420,966, for Madras £4,614,387, and for Bombay £1,432,832—Bengal therefore again yielding a surplus revenue of £1,237,368. He stopped at 1801, because after that year the ceded districts of the North-West were annexed to Bengal, and the revenues of the two were mixed up. It would be seen from this statement that the revenues of Bengal in the early days of the English in India not only contributed to the acquisition of new territories, but also to the support of those which passed under English rule. As the wave of British power rolled on, the stream of Bengal revenue went along with it to feed that wave, and they had now the pleasure of seeing its fertilizing showers convert the newly acquired provinces into smiling gardens. So much for the contribution which Bengal had made from the hard-earned means of its children to the building up of the vast and glorious empire of England in the East.

To turn now to another phase of the question, how had Bengal been treated in its turn? They had the recorded testimony of by far the most distinguished Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, Sir John Peter Grant, on this point. In a letter to the British Indian Association on the subject of the proposed tobacco tax, dated the 17th December 1861, Sir J. P. Grant wrote as follows:—

"But perhaps it is not always borne in mind that the provincial expenditure upon public works—petty district works excepted—is limited by the supreme authority, and that the allotment made to Bengal by that authority from the general revenues has always been systematically less in an excessive degree (probably it would be safe to say by at least two-thirds) than what an allotment would amount to that should be framed on the principle of a share proportionate either to the revenue, or to the population, or to the geographical extent of the Bengal provinces, or to all these together, as compared with the other provinces of India. The result of this system, continued for a long series of years, has been such, in a comparative view, as those only who have seen many different parts of India, or whose duties have made them cognizant of what has been done from imperial funds for all parts of the Empire severally, are thoroughly aware of. At this moment there is only one really good road of any considerable extent complete in all Bengal, Behar, Orissa, Chota-Nagpore, Assam, Arracan, and Cachar (which may be taken as one-third part of British India), namely, the Grand Trunk Road; and it is not too much to say that this single work would not have existed if it had not been, by geographical necessity, an inseparable part of the line through the North-Western Provinces."

Now he thought that no one would have the hardihood to question the truth of this statement, but he had still further evidence. Sir George Campbell thus spoke on this point in this Council at the time of the introduction of the Road Cess Bill in 1871:—

"Look at the roads, court-houses, serais, jails, and many other things in other parts of India, and you see at a glance that Bengal had great needs, and whatever the cause of the difference might be, if it was to be set right at all, we must do it ourselves, or otherwise it would not be done at all."

Well, they had it on the testimony of Sir J. P. Grant that up to 1861 financial justice had not been done to Bengal. How did the matter stand since? He had compiled some figures showing Public Works Expenditure Ordinary from 1861-62 to 1872-73; he had not seen later returns of divisional expenditure of the five great provinces of the Empire—Bengal, the North-West Provinces, the Punjab, Madras, and Bombay; he had not taken into account the smaller provinces, as they were still in a nascent condition. The total grant for Public Works Ordinary from 1861-62 to 1872-73 was for Bengal £8,691,000, while the gross revenue during those years amounted to £188,819,000; for the North-West Provinces the grant was £4,193,000, and the gross revenue £69,679,000; for the Punjab the grant was £6,791,000, and the gross revenue £40,573,000; for the Madras Presidency the grant was £8,168,000, and the gross revenue £88,509,000; for Bombay and Sindh the grant was £12,437,000, and the gross revenue £109,506,000. The proportion of expenditure to revenue was therefore in Bengal £4 11*s.* per cent., in the North-West Provinces £6 0*s.* 4*d.* per cent., in the Punjab £16 15*s.* per cent., in Madras £9 5*s.* per cent., and in Bombay £11 7*s.* per cent. The proportion per head of population was in Bengal 2*s.* 8*d.*, in the North-West Provinces 2*s.* 9*d.*, in the Punjab 4*s.* 8*d.*, in Madras 5*s.* 3*d.*, and in Bombay 15*s.* 4*d.*

It would thus be seen that though Bengal had yielded the largest amount of revenue and comprised the largest number of the population, it had had the smallest assignment from the imperial funds for the improvement of its material condition. But it might be said that perhaps justice had been done to it in the allotments for Public Works Extraordinary. He found that the total outlay on irrigation works to the end of the year 1875-76 was £16,454,000, of which £7,988,000 were spent in the North-West and in the Punjab, and £4,000,000 in Bengal, the remainder being spent in Madras and Bombay. The total outlay on State Railways up to the year 1779-80 was estimated at £16,780,000, and the allotment to Bengal amounted to £2,400,000. His object in laying these figures before the Council was to show that Bengal had hitherto been grossly neglected, and that though latterly the conscience of the Government of India was roused towards it, it had taken a new bound, and now taxation was to be imposed upon the people of this province to provide for the interest upon the capital outlay and the working expenses of the canals, though with their surplus revenue the Government had hitherto prosecuted works in the other provinces, which had materially improved the imperial revenue and vastly enriched those provinces. Now, he would submit with all deference that if a debtor and creditor account had been kept with Bengal, showing her contributions towards the extension and consolidation of the Empire, and towards the material improvement of the other provinces, it would be manifest that Bengal, far from presenting a deficit for which new taxation was required, would have an enormous balance in its favour after meeting all legitimate local charges. But it was argued that the Empire was an aggregate, and that all the provinces should bear their legitimate burthens. He did not deny this truth, but the question was whether it was justice that from him who had always been giving much more should be taken. The Empire, he might say, resembled a vast joint undivided Hindu family. Bengal, as the eldest brother, had for years fed and nursed the younger provinces; but was it meet and just that fresh burdens should be laid upon it because it was supposed to be in a position to pay? He could not subscribe to that theory which sought to adjust taxation on incidence per head. If A could support his family with £5 per month, and B, his neighbour, could not do so without laying out £10, was it a sound reason that A should be mulcted £5 in order to make the incidence square? The only question was whether Bengal, compared with the other provinces, after paying all her legitimate expenses, left a sufficient surplus as her tribute to the Government of India for protection and imperial administration. The figures of the year 1872-73—those of later years he had not seen in a complete form—showed how Bengal stood from this point of view. The gross revenue from Madras was £8,173,806, and the gross charges £6,020,074, leaving a surplus of £2,153,732. The gross revenue from Bombay was £9,512,498, and the gross charges £7,313,506, leaving a surplus of £2,198,992. The gross revenue derived from the North-West Provinces was £5,831,067, and the gross charges were £2,258,932, the surplus being £3,572,135. In the Punjab the gross revenue was £3,588,076, and the charges £2,129,928, leaving a surplus of £1,458,148. But in Bengal the gross revenue was £15,831,072, and the gross charges being no more than £5,756,334, an enormous surplus of £10,074,238 was left. It would thus be at once apparent that Bengal yielded the largest surplus. But it might be urged that Bengal could not justly claim the full amount of the opium and customs revenues which were derived in Bengal, and he was quite willing to make a reasonable deduction on that account. In 1872-73 Benares opium realized £2,468,024,and allowing one-fourth of the customs revenue for the share of North India, and a similar deduction being allowed for the Bombay Customs—for since the opening of the Suez Canal and the completion of the Jubbulpore line of the East Indian Railway there were now two routes for commerce into Northern India—the total deductions amounted to £2,710,000, which, being deducted from the surplus of Bengal, left a net balance of seven and one-third millions in favour of Bengal. He had, however, heard it said that it was China, and not Bengal, which paid the opium revenue; but the wine duties of England which amounted to about twenty millions were paid by consumers in other countries, and yet the English treasury took the credit of it. In fact, all export duties were paid by consumers in other countries, but the produce of the duties was considered revenue. Again, they had been told that the revenue was so large because the Government maintained a monopoly; but if an excise duty had been levied on opium, and the receipts had been less, the difference would have gone into the pockets of the people, and it was therefore a direct contribution by them. Further, it had been argued that Bengal was not defended in Bengal. No one denied that; but the question was whether the surplus that Bengal yielded did not cover the cost of its protection and the benefits it derived from imperial administration.

He was quite conscious that the facts and figures he had put forward would not alter the determination of the Government of India, and would not therefore affect the question before them. The fiat had gone forth that Bengal shall be taxed, and nothing would probably alter that decision. But if the facts and figures which he had taken the trouble to collect from official records, and for listening to which with so much patience he had to thank hon'ble members, satisfied His Honor that financial justice had not been done to Bengal, he felt confident that His Honor, who was not only the responsible ruler, but also the mouthpiece of Bengal, would take them into consideration in another capacity, and plead at the bar of the Government of India for that justice to the dumb millions of this province.

He now came to the Bills before the Council. Although the Irrigation Cess Bill had not yet been introduced, the principles which had led to the inception of the two Bills were identical, and he hoped His Honor would permit him to discuss them together.

The principle on which the Government of India had acted was a distinction between Public Works Ordinary and Extraordinary, of general and of provincial utility, and a fresh charge was thus thrown on the Local Government. It was said that works of provincial utility were not works of general usefulness, and that therefore they should be charged to provincial funds and not to the imperial fund. Now, if the question were considered calmly and dispassionately, it would be seen that the distinction drawn was more fanciful than real; in fact the Hon'ble the Financial Member of Council was himself constrained to admit that it was difficult to observe the distinction in its integrity. The budget statement divided the works into three classes, only the first of which was undertaken purely from imperial considerations. With regard to the second and third classes, the Financial Member said:—

"They are in both cases works of improvement for developing the resources of the country and for meeting its necessary requirements; and in respect of them it is anticipated that, besides the indirect advantages to the country arising from their construction, they will yield within a moderate time a direct income at least equal to the interest on the capital expended on them. Some of these works, which I put into my second class, are undertaken for objects of such general utility that they may be fairly called imperial."

And again he remarked :—

"There is, as I said before, no broad line of difference between such works as these and works of imperial utility. Imperial works confer great local benefits, and works of local utility enrich the Empire; but although the two classes of works thus run into one another, the distinction is nevertheless a real one, and it has not been sufficiently recognized."

Such being the case, he would submit that the two major considerations should merge into the minor. But there were other reasons why the cost of the canals and railways should be treated as an imperial charge. What were the primary objects of irrigation works? The first was an increase of the imperial revenue from land, and the second the development of the material resources of the country; but the arbitrary distinction made ignored the fact that the land revenue was greatly increased by extension of cultivation. This point was clearly set forth in a short extract which he would read to the Council from a recent work on irrigation in India :—

"Taking £3 per acre as the value of gross produce from canal-irrigated lands per annum, and Government share of land assessment one-sixth the value of produce, on four million acres watered by State canals the amount will be two millions sterling per annum land assessment, which Government would not derive but for the canals."

But the canals, although a fertile source of imperial revenue, were now declared works of provincial utility, and the charge on them was treated as a local instead of an imperial burthen, apart from the other fact that the increase of general wealth meant the enrichment of the Empire. Then, again, as regards irrigation, the provinces of Bengal Proper and Orissa were differently situated compared with the other parts of the Empire. The natural rainfall was quite sufficient in Bengal, and drought occurred but occasionally. Then the soil and the nature of the crops in Bengal required incessant moisture, and in this respect the irrigation works failed to accomplish the purpose they were intended to fulfil. With regard to Orissa, perhaps he could not do better than quote the remarks contained in the Bengal Administration Report of 1871-72 on the subject. They were as follow:—

"The rainfall in Orissa averages about 55 to 60 inches, and it cannot possibly be expected that the people should be willing to pay such high rates for water as in countries where the rainfall is one-half or one-fourth the quantity. This too is not all: high rates are gladly paid for water supplied at seasons when there is little rain; the deltas of the southern rivers of Madras receive a full supply from the Western Ghats at a time when there is little monsoon on the Madras Coast, and the North-Western Provinces and Punjab Canals derive their chief revenue from the irrigation of the cold-weather and spring crops when there is little rain. On the other hand, the Orissa rivers have an extremely scanty flow of water at that season, and we must chiefly depend on the irrigation of the rice and other rainy season crops for a revenue from the canals. It is principally at the end of the season in October, when rain may or may not fall, while the rivers still hold a considerable flow of water, that the benefit is felt. Probably it may turn out that a uniform supply of water, well managed by a skilful system, will give better crops than an irregular, though heavy, rain supply; but at present the people look on a water-rate merely as a sort of insurance against a possible failure of the rains, especially a failure at the end of the season; and they are very unwilling to agree to pay heavy rates till at least the failure is actually on them. If the year is a good ordinary one, and there is no special failure of the rains, they think they can do very well without irrigation."

And in fact they had found that they could do so. If they had not hitherto availed themselves of the canal water, it was because they did not, as he believed, find it sufficiently remunerative. They would, he fancied, be quite willing to pay 50 per cent. if they thought it possible that they would make another 50 per cent. by doing so. But finding that this would not be the result, they had hitherto abstained from largely using the water of the canals.

His Honor the President said he was unwilling to interrupt the hon'ble member, but it appeared to him that the tendency of the hon'ble member's remarks was with reference to the Irrigation Bill and the compulsory cess, and he would therefore suggest that these remarks should be reserved till the Irrigation Bill came before the Council.

Baboo Kristodas Pal said that, in accordance with the suggestion made by the Hon'ble the President, he would reserve his remarks on this head for the present. The principle of the Bill which was before the Council was that the whole of the provision for irrigation works and State Railways in Bengal should be made by the Local Government. These public works had owed their origin to the action of the Imperial Government, but having proved financial failures, they were now made over to the Bengal Government; in fact, the people of these provinces were called upon to make up the loss which the Government of India had sustained by its own inconsiderateness. He admitted that they had been undertaken by the Government of India with the best of motives, but there had been a sad want of information and foresight on the subject. There could be no doubt that, if the Government had not purchased some of these works at exceedingly high prices, they would have been perhaps sold for a mere song; for their prospects were never very cheering, and no one would have paid the high price for them that the Government did. Now, in order to meet current interest and working charges of these undertakings, it was proposed to double the road cess, which, when it was first imposed, was intended to be confined to local purposes only. He could not understand why the "land" alone had been singled out for taxation, when these works, if they were to be regarded as an insurance against future famines, would in that sense be beneficial to the whole community, though he doubted that, when water could not be had in sufficient quantities when most needed, they could justly be regarded as an insurance against drought. On the other hand, if the general wealth of the nation was developed by means of irrigation canals and railways, the whole country would be benefitted. But because the road cess was a simple method—and he was quite willing to admit that as a means of drawing direct taxation, the plan of the road cess was by far the easiest, cheapest, and least troublesome—that was no reason that the land should bear the whole burthen. It should be remembered that, when the road cess was first proposed, it was regarded as an inroad on the Permanent Settlement. Nor was it unjustly so regarded. When the Permanent Settlement was made Lord Cornwallis wrote to the Court of Directors:—

"If at any future period the public exigencies should require an addition to your resources, you must look for it in the increase of the general wealth and commerce of the country, and not in the augmentation of the tax upon the land."

And here he would, with the permission of the Council, make a digression, and submit a statement showing the produce of indirect taxes in the five great Provinces of the Empire.

Thus North-Western Provinces yield in salt £476,608, excise £203,391, stamps £351,328, customs, after taking due credit from Bengal and Bombay, £245,372—total £1,276,699. Similarly, the Punjab yields in salt £541,253, excise £97,129, stamps £239,242, customs £294,851—total £1,471,475. Madras, salt £1,331,183, excise £602,767, stamps £484,246, customs £315,468—total £2,753,664. Bombay, salt £796,244, excise £377,939, stamps £458,385, customs, less deduction for Northern India at one-fourth, £547,140—total £2,179,758. Bengal, salt £2,648,361, excise £698,817, stamps £935,108, customs, less deduction for the share of Northern India at one-fourth, £810,031—total £5,002,317.

It would be thus seen that the four principal branches of indirect taxation were most productive in Bengal, fully justifying the expectation of the far-seeing statesman who gave this Magna Charta to the agricultural population of Bengal.

Some erroneous notions seemed to exist as to the character of the Permanent Settlement, and he could not therefore do better than give the judicial construction of it in the words of Messrs. Tucker, Barlow, and Hawkins, Judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in 1848. They said:—

"It is a narrow and contracted view to suppose that the Permanent Settlement consists in nothing more than the obligation on the part of the zemindar to pay a certain amount of revenue annually to the Government. The settlement is a compact by which the zemindar engages on his part to pay a fixed amount of revenue to the State; and the State on its part guarantees to the zemindar, by means of its judicial and fiscal administration, the integrity of the assets from which that revenue is derived, and which in fact constitutes the Government's own security for the realization of the revenue."

He would not trouble the Council with what that eminent lawyer Sir Barnes Peacock wrote on the subject when he was asked to draft a Bill for the levy of a Rural Police Cess on land in Bengal. On perusal of Sir Barnes Peacock's Minute, Lord Dalhousie wrote as follows:—

"I have studied with deep attention the valuable Minute which has been recorded by our honorable and learned colleague Mr. Peacock, relative to the legal or equitable right of the Government of India to levy a further assessment on the holders of land in these Lower Provinces for the payment of a police force. The draft Act on which Mr. Peacock comments was transmitted by myself from the Government of Bengal. I am therefore the more bound to say that the clear reasoning by which he has supported his opinion, adverse to the levy of the proposed rates on the holders of lands, has fully convinced me that this Act should not be extended to rural villages. I therefore assent on my own part that the word 'village' should be omitted from the draft Act."

That opinion was subscribed to by the other Members of Council—the Hon'ble Mr. Dorin, the Hon'ble General Low, and the Hon'ble Mr. Halliday. The Indian Educational Blue-Book, which was published a few years ago by order of the House of Commons, also contained a number of opinions of the most distinguished Indian officials on the subject of the permanent settlement, in which it was broadly stated that the imposition of the road cess would be a breach of the settlement. The Indian Council was divided on the subject, and it was a vote which carried the despatch of the Secretary of State sanctioning the imposition of the present road cess. Such eminent Indian statesmen as Sir Erskine Perry, Sir Frederick Halliday, Sir Frederick Currie, Mr. H. T. Prinsep, Mr. R. D. Mangles, and Sir Henry Montgomery opposed the cess on the ground that it involved a direct infringement of the Permanent Settlement. But if the road cess was a violation of the pledge given, how much more so was the proposed cess embodied in the Bill now under consideration? There could in fact be no comparison between the two. The Secretary of State hedged in the road cess with the following conditions:—

"It would indeed be most desirable if the local character of these rates could be emphatically marked by committing both the assessing of them and the application of them to local bodies" * * * *, and if possible to carry the people along with us through their natural native borders, both in the assessment and in the expenditure of local rates.

"It is, above all things, requisite that the benefits to be derived from the rates should be brought home to their doors,—that these benefits should be palpable, direct, immediate."

That was the opinion of the Secretary of State. And Sir George Campbell, when the Bill was before the Council, spoke of it in the following terms:—

"The object and intention of this Bill was to make a beginning of self-government by introducing a mode of local self-taxation, and leaving the administration of the funds received from local taxation to the people of the locality for whose benefit and improvement the taxes are imposed?"

And again:—

"The object, the principle, the very essence of this Bill was simply this, that we sought to obtain from the people of Bengal permission to enable us to tax them for their own benefit, not for the general purposes of Government, but for the local benefit of a particular locality; and we wish to make the form and mode of taxation as local as we can."

The object of the cess was thus made distinct both as to place and time, and it was not then contemplated to increase it. In fact, when Mr. Wordie anticipated the future by expressing an apprehension of increase of taxation by this easy method, Sir George Campbell remarked that there was no reason for such an apprehension, saying that "he did not know whether any additional cess would ever be imposed." But the present Bill proposed the doubling of the road cess for provincial works, which would necessarily be confined to the class interested in land. That such class taxation was opposed to all sound principles of taxation and justice would be seen from the opinion recorded by one of the most eminent economists produced by England, John Stuart Mill. Writing on the subject of a tax on rents, he said:—

"A tax on rents falls wholly on the landlord. There are no means by which he can shift the burthen upon anyone else. It does not affect the value or price of agricultural produce, for this is determined by the cost of production in the most unfavorable circumstances, and in those circumstances, as one have so often demonstrated, no rent is paid. A tax on rent therefore has no effect other than its obvious one. It merely takes so much from the landlord, and transfers it to the State."

And again:—

"A peculiar tax on the income of any class, not balanced by taxes on other classes, is a violation of justice, and amounts to a partial confiscation."

The question therefore which the Council had to consider was whether or not this partial confiscation was not involved in the proposed scheme of taxation—that was to say, whether the Bill was or was not open to the reproach of John Stuart Mill.

Now, it might be said that the Government was obliged to have recourse to extra taxation on account of the burdens thrown upon it. But was there no other means at hand for obtaining revenue? If the salt tax were raised 8 annas a maund, the yield would be more than forty lakhs, while the pressure would be little more than one anna per head. But by doubling the road cess, which was at the maximum figure of two pice in the rupee, the sum to be realised was, he believed, estimated at 33 lakhs, of which 20 lakhs might be said to be the share of ryots and small tenure-holders, if the cess were levied at the maximum sum in all districts. He did not know the exact number of cess-payers who were ryots or small tenure-holders; but taking the estimates of the census report of the agricultural population at 2½ millions, the pressure per head was about 13 annas; and giving four souls to each family, the pressure per head of each agricultural family came to three annas one pie, or over 300 per cent. of the proposed addition to the salt tax.

The salt tax was one which many authorities in Bengal were of opinion should be regarded as a provincial reserve in cases of urgent necessity. Six years ago, during the discussions on the Road Cess Bill, the Hon'ble Mr. Schalch said:—

"If it should be necessary to have recourse to provincial taxation, he believed that an increase in the salt duty only would prove the most suitable for that purpose, and therefore it must be held in reserve."

His Honor the present Lieutenant-Governor was also strongly in favor of an increase to the salt tax in lieu of the road cess, and perhaps he could not do better than read to the Council some extracts from a speech made by His Honor in this Council six years ago:—

"The Hon'ble Ashley Eden said he did not propose to follow His Honor the President on the question of local taxation, but only desired to express his general concurrence in the views that had been expressed. But as allusion had been made to those who were strongly in favour of an increased salt duty in lieu of direct taxation, and as he had taken an active part in supporting that view, he thought that he might be permitted to give his reasons for the notions which he entertained on the subject. He should like to state his reasons for not considering the arguments that had been adduced by the Hon'ble the President against an increase of the salt duty as altogether conclusive.

"First, it was said that salt was an article of imperial revenue, which we were therefore unable to tax. No doubt if the Council was to sit down and propose to pass a law for raising the duty on salt, this objection would be absolutely unanswerable; and obviously, if the Government of India would not consent to our raising funds for Provincial Services by an increase of the salt duty, there was an end to the matter.

"But what he desired to urge, and what those who thought with him desired to urge, was that if it could be conclusively shown that the salt tax was the best mode of raising the necessary increase to taxation for provincial purposes, and the mode was in accordance with the wishes of the people who had to be taxed, it would be open to the Local Government to ask the Government of India to agree to the imposition of a small addition to the existing duty on salt for local purposes. Every one fully admitted that this Council could not impose a tax on salt: all that it was desired to urge was that the Government of India, in lieu of pressing us to raise local cesses of an irritating and wasteful character, might themselves do all that was necessary by this indirect form of taxation, to which nobody raised any sort of objection, and, in fact, which nobody knew that they were paying * * *

"The price of the salt commonly used by the lower classes was less than two annas per seer, and had continued at that rate for a long time; yet the first investigation into the subject of a salt tax in the early days of our rule in India showed that two annas was the retail rate: so that practically at the first levy of this duty the tax had been just as much felt by the consumer as now, and more so; for although the price of every other article of consumption had largely increased, although the price of labour and the rate of wages had much increased, though the value of money had decreased, the price of salt remained what it was when we first came into this country. * * * *

"Next it was said that salt could not bear an additional tax. It appeared to him that when we came to consider that each person consumed on an average six seers of salt per annum at the outside, and that a small increase of duty, say four annas or eight annas per maund, would yield more than all the local taxes put together, it was quite clear that not a single person in the country would know that he was paying any additional tax at all. What was four annas or eight annas per maund to the agricultural laborer, who only eat the seventh part of a maund in the year, compared to a cess on land, or a house tax? Even those who knew that the salt which they consumed had been subjected to the payment of a duty, did not know how the tax was paid or collected.

"Then it was said that an increase of the salt tax would have the effect of shifting the burden from the rich and putting it upon the poor. But he thought that such an argument would hardly bear examination; it was one which had often been used and as often refuted. For although probably the poor man consumed as much salt as the rich man, yet if we took into consideration the peculiar relations of the rich with the poor—if we consider the number of retainers that the richer classes of the natives had always about them—it would be found that the apparent inequality did not in fact exist; for every native was accustomed to feed his retainers, and they therefore not only paid the tax themselves, but for all their retainers as well. Where a poor man paid a single rate. the rich man paid 10, 20, 30, or 50 rates, as the case might be. Anyway, if the tax was heavy on the poor man, he would not be slow to shift it, by the increased price of labor, to the rich."

Nothing could be more clear, more cogent, and more convincing than the arguments of His Honor in favour of a slight addition to the salt tax as a substitute of direct taxation; and what His Honor said six years ago would hold equally good now. He need not repeat the opinion so often expressed that direct taxation was utterly unsuited to the habits, feelings, and character of the people of this country. The only argument that he had heard in favor of the new system of local finance was that it gave more freedom to the Local Governments. He was free to confess that that was a consummation most devoutly to be wished for; but the cost at which that freedom had been purchased was very great, and the principles on which the system of localization of the charges referred to was based were contrary to justice, reason, and right. He was personally as warm an advocate of home rule as ever existed; but he prized justice above all things; and when he saw that the freedom of the Local Government was to be bought at the sacrifice of the plighted faith of the State, and at the risk of partial confiscation of one class of profits, as John Stuart Mill called it, he could not help saying that it was too dear a price.

He had done. He thanked the hon'ble members for the courtesy and attention with which they had listened to him. He felt that he should not be doing his duty if he did not mention that there was a considerable feeling among the native community on the subject of the proposed taxation. He hoped it would not be understood that they wished to evade their legitimate burdens. They were deeply grateful to the British Government for the manifold blessings they had received from it, and they yielded to none in loyal devotion to make the necessary sacrifice for the well-being of the commonwealth. But they wanted justice. And they had this consolation that they had at the present moment one at the head of the Local Government who knew the people, and whom the people knew, who warmly sympathised with them, and to whom they were deeply attached, for whose sake they were prepared to make any reasonable sacrifice, and who, they felt confident, would do nothing which might involve wrong and injustice to them.

His Honor the President said, he did not gather from what had passed that the hon'ble member desired to oppose the motion which was before the Council, which was that the Bill be read in Council. But he understood the hon'ble member's object to be to assent to the Bill as a necessity, and at the same time to take that opportunity of explaining his reasons for thinking that, from the first connection of the British Government with this country up to the present moment, Bengal had been treated with great injustice in financial matters. He would not attempt to follow the hon'ble member through that interesting and able sketch of the past financial history of Bengal which he had given the Council, neither had he the materials before him to enable him to do so even if he wished it, or thought it could answer any good purpose. It might be that every argument he had used was perfectly just, and that even the figures he had quoted had been accurately sifted and analysed, and were correct. But that was not the question with which they had now to deal. If it was open to His Honor to propose a re-adjustment of the accounts as compared with the other provinces of India since 1790, he should be glad to give his support to the proposal, and appropriate for provincial purposes the large balance which his hon'ble friend promised as the result of such an investigation. But it was quite obvious that nothing of the kind was possible, or could in any way be carried out. And even if a discussion upon the various points which the hon'ble gentleman had raised were possible, it was quite certain that it would be found that in respect to each of his arguments there would be some one who would find something very cogent to say on the other side; so that any adjustment now of the vexed questions of finance for nearly a century would not be likely to end in any very definite conclusions. There was no argument which had not two sides to it, and if Bengal was to be heard as to the past, other provinces would also have their say. Take as an instance the first argument which had been used—namely, that the people of Bengal first invited the British Government to take up their abode in this country and establish their rule there, and contributed to the building up of the Empire, and had ever since contributed to its maintenance and to the acquisition of other territories beyond, and that this constituted a reason why Bengal should be treated with great forbearance in the matter of taxation. But it was quite possible that the other provinces which had been annexed and included within British India subsequent to the first establishment in Bengal might argue that the whole of the taxation should be borne by Bengal, because the British Government was brought here without consulting them, and Bengal had provided the means for maintaining and extending the British Empire in India. In the same way something might be said per contra to all the claims which the hon'ble gentleman had made on behalf of Bengal. But it would answer no good purpose now to go over the various points that had been raised as to the past, for the only point left open to them to discuss was what they had to do. Now they had got a burden thrown upon them, and they had to consider the best means of meeting that burden. Was it best met by the proposals which he had made to the Council, or had any hon'ble member any better suggestion to make on the subject? His hon'ble friend had quoted a very able argument of his friend Sir John Grant, and of Sir George Campbell, as opposed to the principle of the Bill now before the Council. Sir John Grant pointed out that nothing had been done for Bengal in the way of assigning it funds for opening out communications up to 1861; and Sir George Campbell had said that very little had been done since, which was no doubt true. But it appeared to His Honor that, if the hon'ble member had been arguing in favor of this Bill, he could not have adduced any stronger argument than that of those two gentlemen, because they wanted to show that whatever was raised in Bengal was spent elsewhere, and that Bengal did not receive its fair share of its own revenues. The object of the present system of decentralization was to put a stop to that state of things, and to secure to Bengal a certain amount of the revenue which it had to raise for itself. In nearly every native newspaper which he had taken up lately he had seen Bengal spoken of as the milch cow of India. The object of this measure was to remedy this state of things which had led to the common use of this phrase,—to enable Bengal to use a little of its own milk, which it now contributed for the benefit of other provinces, and to substitute for fresh general taxation, of which they could have no account, and from which they should receive but little benefit,—a system under which they were to impose their own taxation, and look after the development and expenditure of their own finances. But in order that this might be effected, the Government of India naturally asked to be relieved of the cost of constructing local works, which that Government could not have met at the present time without imposing some form or other of taxation. The question was whether they should have local taxation and local administration of the funds thus raised, or imperial taxation and imperial administration of the new revenues to be raised. There was no question of local taxation or no taxation at all. He thought that the principle now introduced was a very sound one; he looked forward to the measure now inaugurated as one of the first steps towards the progress and prosperity of the country, although he fully admitted that the means they had to devise to attain to that first step were exceedingly painful and harassing.

In making his comparison between the different provinces, his hon'ble friend had carefully avoided one form of comparison:—that was the relative rate per head of population of the incidence of taxation in the various parts of the country. Looking at the question in this way, he would find that the people of Bengal bore a percentage of taxation very light in comparison with many other provinces of India. His Honor was aware that his hon'ble friend had given his reasons for not having done so; but they did not seem to him to be conclusive, as the real question at issue was whether the people of Bengal bore a heavier burden than the people of the rest of the country, and whether they were so overwhelmed with taxation that they were unable to give any further assistance to the Government. His hon'ble friend had said that it was now proposed to make the people of Bengal pay for railways and irrigation works which were constructed as a venture which had now turned out to be a loss, and were not remunerative. His Honor himself only knew of one railway in Bengal which was taken up as a venture, and which had proved a great financial failure, and that was the Mutlah Railway. Well, that railway had been made over to Bengal without a single penny of charge; it had been given to them without any charge as regards capital, though the value of the gift even then was perhaps doubtful. As regards the other railways, although they had to meet the interest on the capital as a first charge, there was not one of them which, in the course of two or three years, would not pay the interest upon the capital expended upon them, and some of them would almost immediately do so. But they had also to provide capital to extend the system of railways. He thought there was nothing which could possibly be done for Bengal that would tend so much to the development of the wealth and trade of the province, and the good of its people, as these cheap lines of railway, giving distant and isolated places of production ready access to the large markets. It was a point upon which he had never heard any difference of opinion among those who had opportunities of seeing the material benefits conferred upon the people by the facilities which this means of inter-communication afforded.

Then his hon'ble friend had said that nobody in his senses would have paid the Orissa Irrigation Company the price which the Government had given for their works, and that consequently it would have eventually come into the market for absolutely nothing, and the company would have been glad to accept any price that they could have obtained. That might have been true if the Government had not guaranteed the interest upon the capital; but as long as Government guaranteed the interest upon the capital, there would always have been somebody ready to purchase it. Obviously it was the best for the Government to take it over and try to get something from it, rather than to go on paying interest without receiving anything in return. Whether they paid too much for the business, or not, was another question.

The hon'ble gentleman had quoted some remarks of the Secretary of State as bearing upon the principle of the Bill now before the Council. But those remarks referred to the imposition of local cesses for local purposes, and had nothing whatever to do with the question now before the Council. In speaking of a measure for making local works chargeable upon local rates, it was no doubt perfectly correct to say that the works should be such works that the people should immediately and locally benefit from them, and that they should have a voice in the management of the fund which was raised from such taxation. But the proposal now under consideration was a different thing; it was a measure for raising a further sum of money for the general development of works for the benefit of the whole of these provinces, and therefore nothing which the Secretary of State had said on the subject of purely local works would have any application to the present question.

He was sorry that his hon'ble friend had raised again the question of the breach of the permanent settlement, because, although no doubt it was a question upon which there was a great conflict of authority and difference of opinion, he thought it was a matter the principle of which had been decided at the time when it was determined, with the approval of the Local Government, and also the approval of the Supreme Government and of Parliament, to levy a system of local cesses for local improvements. Whatever had to be said on the subject had been said then, and it had now been finally and definitely set at rest, and he was certainly not disposed to re-open it.

As regards what had been said as to the pledge which had been given by Sir George Campbell that there would be no further local taxation, His Honor thought that it was clear enough from the very words quoted by the hon'ble gentleman that so far from any such pledge having been given, Sir George Campbell had simply said that "he did not know whether there would be any further taxation or not," and this certainly was not any pledge as to his own intentions, and certainly no pledge as to the intentions of succeeding Governments.

Finally, he must say something about his own remarks upon the salt duty made some years ago, which had been quoted against him by his hon'ble friend. He was quite prepared to say now every word that he had then said. He repeated the belief to which he had given expression on the occasion to which his hon'ble friend referred that there was no tax which would be felt as little, and which was so easy of imposition, and in every way so desirable, as the salt tax. But it was entirely out of his power to propose such a tax to meet the present difficulty. In the first place it was a tax which was reserved by the Government of India in its own hands, for increase or decrease, according as great pressure might fall or not upon the imperial revenues of the State. But it was not even in the power of the Government of India to increase the salt tax at present for certain practical reasons. There were three or four different systems of salt duty going on in parallel lines in Bombay, Madras, the North-Western Provinces, and Bengal. Among the many difficulties which they had to deal with in connection with this state of things was this—that while the people of Bengal, from their great prosperity, arising no doubt from their long connection with the British Government to which his hon'ble friend had alluded, were able to pay without difficulty almost any amount of salt tax, the people of Madras and Bombay, who were said to be much poorer, though he was not sure that this was the case, declared themselves unable to pay a salt tax very much less than the tax which was imposed on the people of Bengal, and the consequence of this difference had been that a most expensive and in other ways objectionable system of internal customs had been established to prevent the salt of one province going into another. The object the Government of India, he believed, had in view was to equalize as far as possible the rate of the salt duty in the different presidencies, and to do away with this objectionable inland customs line. But if they attempted to raise the salt tax in Bengal, they would be increasing this difficulty, and it would be almost impossible to bring about an equalization of the salt tax in the different presidencies. He had no doubt, however, that the Government would be able in the course of time to approximately equalize the duties, and do away with the customs line. But it was obviously quite impossible to think of imposing a further rate of duty on salt under such circumstances, and it was no use thinking of asking the Government of India to do so.

He did not know whether his hon'ble friend had any other scheme of taxation to suggest in place of this one which he had laid before the Council. He gathered that on the whole his hon'ble friend would support it, and he was grateful to him for the terms in which he had promised his co-operation in meeting the requisition for funds which had been received from the Supreme Government. His Honor was quite aware that it was very far from being a perfect scheme, and that it was open to very many objections. He felt just as keenly as his hon'ble friend did that he would much rather not ask the Council to impose any new burden upon the inhabitants of this province. But having the necessity thrown upon him, and very little time left him to think about it, he was not now prepared to propose any form of taxation which was less open to objection than this scheme of a provincial cess

The motion was then agreed to, and the Bill referred to a Select Committee, consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds, the Hon'ble Baboo Isser Chunder Mittra, the Hon'ble Baboo Kristodas Pal, and the mover, with instructions to report in two weeks.

EXTENSION OF THE LABOR DISTRICTS' EMIGRATION ACT TO CHITTAGONG.

The Hon'ble Mr. Bell moved for leave to bring in a Bill to extend the provisions of Bengal Act VII of 1873 (the Labour Districts' Emigration Act) to the district of Chittagong and the Chittagong Hill Tracts. He said, when the Labor Districts' Emigration Act of 1873 was passed, the tea interest in Chittagong was still in its infancy. At that time there was no necessity for importing labor to cultivate the few tea gardens which then existed in the district, and there was consequently no necessity to extend the provisions of the Act to the district of Chittagong. But during the last few years the tea interest in Chittagong had very largely increased. The local labor market did not now supply sufficient laborers to meet the local demand, and the planters had been compelled to indent for laborers from other districts. From returns which had been received, it would appear that there were now upwards of two thousand emigrant laborers employed in the tea plantations in Chittagong. Now, when laborers were imported several serious difficulties arose. First, they were recruited in distant districts, and it often happened that coolies, after reaching their destination, complained that they had been beguiled from their homes by false representations. By extending the Labors' District Emigration Act to the district of Chittagong this difficulty would be got over. By that Act all contracts had to be made in the presence of a responsible Government officer, by whom they were explained to the laborers before they left Calcutta. Then there was another difficulty which had occurred in one or two cases in sending coolies to Chittagong. In one case small-pox had broken out on the journey, and in another case cholera. But the Government had at present no control over the transport; and when the coolies reached their destination, the Government had at present no means of seeing that the coolies were properly cared for. The Magistrate of Chittagong had recently inspected several tea gardens, but those who were engaged in tea plantations naturally resented the interference of the Magistrate, as the Labor Act did not apply to Chittagong.

Then there was another difficulty in regard to the laborers. After they arrived at the tea gardens, it seemed to be the custom to pay them by taskwork. At present, if any dispute arose between a tea-planter and a coolie, the parties had to go to the Civil Court to have the dispute adjudicated upon. But under the Labor Districts' Emigration Act, if there was any dispute as to the quantity of taskwork which the planter imposed on the laborer, it was decided by arbitration in the manner provided under the Act. All these difficulties had occurred in Chittagong, and it was for this reason it was thought desirable that the provisions of the Act should be extended to Chittagong.

He need hardly remind the Council that the Act had worked most successfully in Assam, Cachar, and Sylhet, and it was hoped that the same good results would follow its extension to Chittagong. It was for these reasons that MR. BELL asked for leave to introduce a Bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The Council was adjourned to Saturday the 14th April.

LIBERALITY OF BABOO KALI KISHEN TAGORE IN BACKERGUNGE.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT—INDUSTRY & SCIENCE.

Calcutta, the 14th April 1877.

RESOLUTION.

READ—

A letter No. 38, dated the 7th April 1877, from the Commissioner of the Dacca Division.

It has been brought to the notice of Government by the Commissioner of Dacca that Baboo Kali Kishen Tagore has contributed Rs. 2,500 towards the relief of the sufferers from the cyclone and storm-wave in the Backergunge district. This is not the first occasion on which this gentleman has displayed liberality and public spirit, and the Lieutenant-Governor has much satisfaction in recording his appreciation of his conduct.

ORDERED that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the Commissioner of Dacca for his information, and for communication to Baboo Kali Kishen Tagore.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

H. J. S. COTTON,
Junior Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

CULTIVATION AND CURING OF TOBACCO IN BENGAL.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.—AGRICULTURE.

Calcutta, the 14th April 1877.

THE subjoined letter No. 508A, dated 28th March 1877, from the Government of the North-Western Provinces, forwarding a copy of a pamphlet by Mr. Buck, Director of Agriculture and Commerce, North-Western Provinces, regarding the cultivation and curing of tobacco, and the enclosed letter from Mr. Buck regarding the distribution of his pamphlet, are published for general information.

2. The Lieutenant-Governor has requested to be furnished with 200 copies of the pamphlet, which will be circulated among those interested in tobacco cultivation, and copies will also be available on application to the Secretariat.

H. J. S. COTTON,
Junior Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

No. 508A, dated Camp Lucknow, the 28th March 1877.

From—The Secretary to the Government of the North-Western Provinces,
To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Department.

I AM directed to forward a copy of the papers marginally noted, regarding the cultivation and curing of tobacco, and to request that, with the permission of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, this Government may be informed which of the two modes suggested in the second paragraph of Mr. Buck's letter, for the distribution of his pamphlet, appears preferable.

From Director of Agriculture and Commerce, North-Western Provinces, No. 110A—XLI-9, dated the 16th March, and enclosure.

No. 110A—XLI-9, dated Allahabad, the 16th March 1877.

From—The Director of Agriculture and Commerce of the North-Western Provinces,
To—The Offg. Secretary to the Government of the North-Western Provinces.

I HAVE the honor to forward herewith a note containing instructions on tobacco cultivation and curing, and request that the Government of these Provinces may be pleased to obtain the permission of the Government of Bengal for its circulation through district officers (or in any other way) to planters in Tirhoot and Upper Bengal, whose co-operation with the experiment now going on at Ghazipur will probably conduce much to the extension of the tobacco industry.

2. Five hundred copies of the pamphlet are retained at this office either for distribution through the Government of Bengal or direct to the planters. If copies should be sent direct by this office, I request that the Government of Bengal may be asked for a list of planters resident in Tirhoot and Upper Bengal with their addresses.

3. An appendix, giving diagrams of the interior arrangement of a curing-house, with any further information available, will follow.

4. I am convinced that tobacco-curing and manufacture in this country will in time pay exceedingly well. Advices which I lately received from abroad state that Java planters "are realizing large fortunes by the export of cured leaf," and I see no reason why planters in India should not follow their example, if the climate chosen for the purpose is suitable. I believe, for reasons which I have elsewhere given, that Upper Bengal possesses the most suitable climate which can be found in the plains of India for tobacco cultivation and curing; and urge that planters there resident should be invited to give their active co-operation to the endeavours now being made to introduce a proper system of curing into the country.

Rainfall, Weather, and State and Prospects of the Crops.

Statement showing Rainfall, Weather, and State and Prospects of the Crops in the different Districts of Bengal, as reported to Government during the week ending the 14th April 1877.

No.	District, and date of return.	Rainfall at Sudder Station in inches.	Character of the weather, state and prospects of the crops, and state of health at date.
	BENGAL.
	Western Districts.
BURDWAN DIVN. 1	Burdwan, Apl. 16*'77	1·29	The rainfall at Jehanabad has been ·68, at Bood-Bood 1·03, at Culna 1·63, at Raneegunge ·41, and at Cutwa 1·98. Sugarcane, cotton, and til are doing well. Public health is fair.
BURDWAN DIVN. 2	Bankoora, „ 14 „	·86	There have been showers of rain at intervals throughout the week. The weather is now becoming hotter. The state and prospects of the crops are as favourable as before.
BURDWAN DIVN. 3	Beerbhoom, „ 14 „	·49	Weather—Still cloudy and cool. State and prospects of the crops continue to be good The hail reported last week seems to have done little or no harm.
BURDWAN DIVN. 4	Midnapore, „ 14 „	1·60	Weather—Very exceptional storms almost every evening. Thus far the rain has been too heavy and continuous for every crop except indigo. The fields have water in them as in July or August. Still no harm will be done if there be fine weather now; on the contrary, the ryots will then be able to turn the rain to good account.
BURDWAN DIVN. 5	Hooghly, „ 14 „	1·02	Weather—Cloudy in the evening, with slight rain. There was a good shower on the 10th instant. The rice lands are still being ploughed; the cuttings of sugarcane are being planted. Cholera has somewhat abated.
BURDWAN DIVN.	Howrah, „ 14 „	3·07	State and prospects of the crops are good.
	Central Districts.
PRESIDENCY DIVN. 6	24-Pergunnahs. Apl. 16, †'77	1·01	Weather—Cool in the beginning of the week and warm at its close. No crops on the ground. Lands are being prepared for the spring sowings. Public health is generally good. A few cases of cholera reported from thanas Hasnabad and Magurah.
PRESIDENCY DIVN. 7	Nuddea, „ 14 '77	3·14	Weather—Cool, with frequent storms and heavy rain. Much damage has been done to such of the late cold-weather crops (gram, &c.) as remain on the ground. These crops could not be harvested. The sowings of early rice have begun. The rain has done good to the indigo crop.
PRESIDENCY DIVN. 8	Jessore, „ 14 „	·95	Weather—Very stormy with much rain during the earlier part of the week; latterly, hot and steamy. The rain in the south of the district has been very heavy (7·19 inches having been registered at Bagirhat), and the weather there has been and is still abnormally cool. Throughout the district the heavy rain has much retarded cultivation and has much damaged the young boro dhan. It has, however, done good to indigo.
PRESIDENCY DIVN. 9	Moorshedabad, „ 14 „	2·46	Weather—Sultry, but cool at night. The rubbee crops which remained in the fields have been more or less injured by the heavy rain which fell at the end of last week, and by hailstones in some parts. The rain has, however, benefited the bhadoi sowings, and facilitated the ploughing of rice lands. Prices are steady. A few cases of cholera have been reported in some localities.
RAJSHAHYE AND COOCH BEHAR DIVN. 10	Dinagepore, „ 13 „	·40	The weather, which was previously cool, has now become close and oppressive, with heavy clouds. The rainfall at Roygunge has been 1·74 inches. The recent rain has facilitated ploughing for the early rice.
RAJSHAHYE AND COOCH BEHAR DIVN. 11	Rajshahye, „ 14 „	·34	Weather—Warm and cloudy. There was a thunder-storm on the 10th instant, with a good fall of rain, succeeded by another which passed over the middle of the district on the 12th. The rain which has fallen during the past fortnight has been most favourable for the autumn and winter rice sowings, and for the transplanting of the spring rice. The young sesamum plants are thriving. There will be no mango crop this year, the rain in January and February having caused an unusual growth of stem and leaf, which exhausted the strength of the trees, so that there has been hardly any blossom. There have been several cases of cholera in Beauleah, nearly all of which have proved fatal. A good many cases also have been reported from several thanas.
RAJSHAHYE AND COOCH BEHAR DIVN. 12	Rungpore, „ 13 „	1·53	Weather—Rainy. It has become much warmer during the last few days. The rainfall at Kurigram has been 2·09 inches, at Gaibanda 1·15 inches, and at Bagdogra ·62 of an inch. The sowings of early rice and jute have become general all over the district. The tobacco still on the ground has to some extent been injured by the recent rains. Cholera is stated to have broken out at Chilmari in the Kurigram sub-division. Otherwise there is nothing of importance to report as regards public health.

BENGAL.—(Continued.)
	Central Districts.
Rajshahye and Cooch Behar Divn. 13	Bogra, Apl. 14 '77	·90	Weather—Hot; occasional rain. The crops are everywhere doing well. Cholera is slightly prevalent.
14	Pubna, „ 14 „	·99	Weather—Still stormy. The rainfall at Serajgunge has been 2·05 inches. The state and prospects of the crops are reported to be good. There have been a few cases of cholera and small-pox here and there in the district.
15	Darjeeling, „ 13 „	3·00	Weather—Most unseasonable. There has been rain every day during the week, and a great deal of mist, both in the hills and the plains. In the hills, the few crops that are on the ground are doing well. In the plains, the sowing has not yet begun owing to the frequent fall of rain.
16	Julpigoree, „ 14 „	2·86	Weather—Cloudy and cool. The late heavy rain has greatly benefited the first sowings of early rice, but a large extent of land which was ready for seed will have to be reploughed.
	Cooch Behar, „ 12 „	3·24	Weather—Very cool for the time of year, but abnormal. There have been constant falls of rain during the week, often accompanied with thunder. The fall at Mekligunge has been 2·97 inches, at Mathabhanga 1·79 inches, and at Dinhatta 1·65 inches. In some places the rain has been too much for the early sowings of bitri dhán; cheena and kaon, however, have generally benefited. Tobacco is nearly all cut, but that still standing has been somewhat damaged by rain. Public health is good.
	Eastern Districts.
Dacca Divn. 17	Dacca, Apl. 16 '77	1·40	Rain fell on the first four days of the week. Since then the weather has become settled and warmer. The hail has slightly damaged the crops, but the general prospects are favourable, and the present sunshine will do much good.
18	Furreedpore, „ 14 „	1·01	Rain and high winds prevailed throughout the week. The weather is still cloudy, but is becoming perceptibly warmer. The rain at Madaripore has been 2·99 inches, and at Goalundo 1·90 inches. The cultivation of lands for the rice crops is still impeded by the moisture of the soil. The til crop in Madaripore is reported to be slightly damaged. Cholera and dysentery are reported from some parts of the district.
19	Backergunge, „ 12 „	8·26	Weather—Unusual for the time of year. There have been storms and a copious rainfall, sometimes accompanied by hail, and it is believed that the aous crop is injured in some places. Much sickness prevails in the district. Cholera in a sporadic form exists in thanas Nulchitty, Backergunge, Gournadi, Mendigunge, Shoroopkati, Motbaria, Goolshakhali, and Mirzagunge. Fever also is prevalent in thanas Nulchitty, Backergunge, and Mirzagunge. But the health of the cattle is everywhere good.
20	Mymensingh, „ 13 „	·81	There have been some seasonable showers of rain during the week. The ploughing is universal, and in some localities the sowing of aous paddy and jute has begun.
21	Tipperah, „ 13 „	2·92	As stated in the previous reports the weather has been most unusual, and more like that in July, but with the thermometer some 10 degrees lower. There have been rain and hail in unusual quantities. The ploughing for the autumn rice is almost entirely stopped in many parts of the district, the lands being under water. A spell of clear hot weather is much wanted.
Chittagong Divn. 22	Chittagong, „ 12 „	·64	Weather—Cloudy, with occasional storms. The cold-weather crops are progressing favourably. Cholera has almost disappeared from the head-quarters sub-division, but is appearing in Cox's Bazar.
23	Noakholly, „ 12 „	3·14	Weather—Rainy and changeable. A heavy storm passed over the district on the evening of the 6th instant. The late rain is hindering the cultivation of the early rice in the low lands which are covered with water. Stray cases of cholera reported from Begumgunge, Bamni, and Dalal Bazar.
24	Chittagong Hill Tracts. „ 10 „	·60	Weather—Cloudy from the 4th to the 9th instant, with frequent falls of rain. The unusual rain during the last fortnight has delayed the burning of the jooms. The prospects of tobacco, melon, and cucumber are good. Cholera is almost entirely abated.
	Hill Tipperah, „ 11 „	·98	Weather—Stormy, with frequent thunder and lightning. State and prospects of the crops are good.
BEHAR.
Patna Divn. 25	Patna, Apl. 16 '77	Nil	Weather—Clear, with strong westerly wind. The harvesting of the rubbee crops is almost finished. Sporadic cases of cholera and small-pox exist in the district.
26	Gya, „ 14 „	·31	The hot weather is well established. The rain reported seems to have been general. The reaping of the rubbee crops continues. Prospects are good, except for mangoes. Public health is good.
27	Shahabad, „ 14 „	Nil	Weather—Cloudy and hot. The rubbee crops are being fast harvested. Sugar-cane is mostly planted.

No.	District, and date of return.	Rainfall at Sudder Station in inches.	Character of the weather, state and prospects of the crops, and state of health at date.
BEHAR.—(Continued.)
Patna Div. 28	Durbhunga, Apl. 14 '77	·27	Weather—Mornings and evenings cool. Easterly winds. No change since last report. The rubbee harvest is progressing, and the outturn promises to be a good average.
Patna Div. 29	Muzufferpore, „ 14 „	Nil	Weather—Getting hotter. The rubbee harvest is nearly over with good outturn. There were hailstones on the night of the 7th instant at Seetamurhee. The general health is good, with the exception of a few cases of small-pox at Belsund and Shewhur.
Patna Div. 30	Sarun, „ 14 „	·07	Weather—Getting much warmer; 1·59 of rain at Gopalgunge. There are no crops of importance on the ground, except cheena and indigo; the former is being sown and the latter is coming on well. Prices have fallen in consequence of the new grain coming into the market. General health is good.
Patna Div. 31	Chumparun, „ 14 „	Nil	Weather—Nights still cool; much hotter in the daytime; occasional high easterly winds. All prospects are good. The rubbee crops are still being harvested.
Bhagulpore Div. 32	Monghyr, „ 14 „	Nil	Weather—Fair. There has been ·42 of an inch of rain at Jamui, and ·03 of an inch at Begusarai. The rubbee crops are nearly all harvested, and the outturns as expected are good.
Bhagulpore Div. 33	Bhagulpore, „ 16* „	Nil	Weather—Now seasonably hot. Strong west winds blowing. All prospects are satisfactory, and a good deal of ploughing is got through. General health is very good; but cases of cholera are frequent in parts of the town.
Bhagulpore Div. 34	Purneah, „ 14 „	·78	Weather—Wind in the west and getting hotter. The rainfall at Kissengunge has been ·87 of an inch, and at Arrareah 1·56 inches. The crops are injured in some parts by hail. The cultivation for the sowings of early rice is going on favourably.
Bhagulpore Div. 35	Maldah, „ 14 „	·29	Weather—Fair, with occasional clouds and drizzlings. Slight rain fell on the 10th and 12th instant. The temperature is rising higher during the day time. The crops are good. Cholera is still bad; 100 deaths reported.
Bhagulpore Div. 36	Sonthal Perghs, „ 15 „	1·94	Weather—Early in the week wet and stormy, with thunder, lightning, and hail Some of the hailstones were very large. The weather now seems to be fine. 1·20 of rain at Deoghur, and ·21 at Godda. Mohwa and mango crops are bad. The late hail has knocked off the mohwa flowers and the mangoes. The rubbee harvest is over, with good outturn. Health is generally good.
ORISSA.
Orissa Div. 37	Cuttack, Apl. 14 '77	1·47	Weather—Cloudy and showery. Cotton has been damaged by heavy rain Ploughing is vigorously going on. General prospects are good.
Orissa Div. 38	Pooree, „ 12 „	·27	Weather—Seasonable. ·92 of rain at Khoordah. Dalua paddy is nearly all harvested Ploughings for the sarad crop are still going on. No change in the price of rice. A few cases of cholera reported.
Orissa Div. 39	Balasore, „ 13 „	·93	Weather—Very uncertain. Thunder-storms and rain-squalls occur almost daily The rainfall at Bhuddruck has been 3·71 inches. The preparations for sowing continue. Sporadic cholera is still very bad.
CHOTA NAGPORE.
South-West Frontier Agency. 40	Hazareebagh, Apl. 13 '77	·78	Weather—Variable, hot sun and cold winds. The thunder-storms and rain have damaged the mango blossoms and mohwa to some extent. There are no crops on the ground, which is being broken up for the next sowings. Health of the district is good.
41	Lohardugga, „ 14 „	·62	Weather—Unseasonably wet; ·75 at Palamow. The prospects of tea have never been so good as this year, the unusual rain having been most beneficial. This unusual rain, on the other hand, has done considerable damage to the rubbee crops in the Palamow sub-division (there are but little rubbee crops in the head-quarters sub-division) and to the mohwa crop all over the district. The mohwa flower is one of the staples of food. There have been a few cases of small-pox in Palamow and one case of cholera at Ranchi. This case of cholera coming after the one reported last week makes the Deputy Commissioner apprehend an outbreak; otherwise the general health is good.
42	Singbhoom, „ 13 „	1·04	Weather—Still unusually cool. There has been a good deal of rain during the week. No crops to report about. The district is healthy.
43	Manbhoom, „ 14 „	1·29	Weather—Cool, but unseasonable. Mohwa has suffered, and the excise revenue will be affected in consequence There were some cases of fever of a bad type in the neighbourhood of Purulia.

* Telegram of the 16th April shows rainfall during the seven days immediately preceding.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c, are deduced from observations made at 6h., 10h., 16h. and 22h. The maximum and minimum temperatures from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 86, at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modification of August's formula.

The direction and movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of raingauge is one foot above the ground.

REPORTS OF FLUCTUATIONS OF TRAFFIC ON THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY FOR THE MONTHS OF JANUARY, FEBRUARY, AND MARCH 1877.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY COMPANY, TRAFFIC SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE, SEALDAH TERMINUS.

Report on Traffic for the four weeks ending 27th January 1877.

No. A46-337, dated Calcutta, the 26th February 1877.

From—JAMES BRANDER, ESQ., Traffic Superintendent,
To—The Agent, Eastern Bengal Railway Company.

THE total quantity of merchandise carried during the above period amounts to 7,72,195 maunds, as compared with 4,69,240 maunds during the same period of 1876, showing the satisfactory increase of 3,02,955 maunds.

The principal articles which have contributed to this increase are—

Grain, seeds, salt, sugar, piece-goods, tobacco, and miscellaneous goods.

Those staples which show the greatest decrease are jute, both drummed and baled, gunnies, and hides.

Increases.

Grain ... ... Mds. 2,73,136.

The large increase in this traffic has no doubt been brought about by the present scarcity in the Madras Presidency and large quantities have been brought down for shipment to Madras and Colombo.

Seed ... ... Mds. 1,33,531.

It is pleasing to see that this traffic is once more improving, and that seeds from the eastern districts are again being sought for in the market, so that it is to be hoped it will continue to improve.

Salt ... ... Mds. 11,752.

This traffic is still keeping its place amongst those articles which show a satisfactory increase, and there is every appearance it will continue to do so.

Sugar ... ... Mds. 13,320.

This article shows a very satisfactory increase, and from what I can learn, will, I trust, continue to do so, as none has yet been despatched this year by boat from Kotechandpore.

Tobacco ... ... Mds. 4,003.

This staple shows that an increased demand is being made for it, so that we may expect it to continue increasing.

Decreases.

Jute ... ... Mds. 1,45,637.

The decrease shown by this staple is, I consider, attributable to the bulk of the crop having been this year sent down before the period under review.

Gunnies ... ... Mds. 1,045.

This decrease in bags has been effected by the demand that has arisen in the interior districts for sending down grain and seeds.

Hides ... ... Mds. 4,403.

This traffic fluctuates greatly, being entirely dependent on the prices in Europe. The decrease shown is small.

I attach a statement showing the increases and decreases of the principal staples carried.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

Report on Traffic for the four weeks ending the 24th February 1877.

No. A46-466, dated Calcutta, the 8th March 1877.

From—JAMES BRANDER, ESQ., Traffic Superintendent,
To—The Agent, Eastern Bengal Railway Company.

THE quantity of goods carried over the line during the above period amounts to 5,92,519 maunds, as against 4,10,373 maunds carried during the same dates in 1876, showing an increase of 1,82,146 maunds.

The staples that have mainly helped to contribute to this increase are—

Increases.

Grain ... ... Mds. 1,74,338.

It is satisfactory to see that this commodity still shows an increase in the quantity passing over the line, although the market in Calcutta has fallen considerably in price.

Piece-goods ... ... Mds. 4,501.

This article continues to show a very good increase from last year, and I trust it will continue to do so.

Salt ... ... Mds. 16,277.

This traffic still shows that it is expanding, and I have no doubt it will continue to do so, as there is every probability of a future increase being shown in this traffic when the Port Commissioners' tramway is open to Armenian Ghât.

Seeds ... ... Mds. 97,162.

These show that the increased demand for them still continues, and that they are again adding considerably to our revenue.

Sugar ... ... Mds. 8,875.

This staple is still holding its own against last year and shows a satisfactory increase.

Twist ... ... Mds. 1,062.

The carriage of this article is gradually increasing, and will no doubt continue to do so, as the trade of the Dunbar Cotton Mills at Samnuggur increases.

Miscellaneous goods ... ... Mds. 54,567.

The general traffic shows a marked increase from last year, which is worthy of remark, as it tends to show the improved condition of the residents of the districts to which the traffic over our line goes.

Decreases.

The staple which shows the principal decrease is—

	Drums.	Bales.
Jute ... ... Mds.	1,16,617	41,367.

This decrease is large both in drums and bales. This may be attributed, as stated last month, to the early season, and I now learn that the Jute Presses at Naraingunge are closed for the season, which will account for the decrease in bales.

Gunny bags ... ... Mds. 3,351.

These still show a decrease owing to the demand in the interior still holding good for the despatch of grain.

Railway materials ... ... Mds. 2,135.

This item shows a decrease owing to there not being so large a quantity of material landed for the Northern Bengal State Railway.

Hides ... ... Mds. 2,700.

The quantity carried of this commodity fluctuates very much, being ruled by the bazar demand, as the merchants in this trade do not care for stowing large stocks.

	Tobacco.	Turmeric.
Tobacco and turmeric ... ... Mds.	2,364	5,281.

These two articles show a decrease, which I have no doubt can be accounted for from the slack demand for such goods in the Calcutta bazar, as the demand in Calcutta rules the export from the producing districts.

I attach usual statement showing the increases and decreases of the principal staples.

Statement of increases and decreases in maundage of staples carried by the Eastern Bengal Railway Company for the four weeks ending the 24th February 1877, in comparison with that of the corresponding period of 1876.

Report on Traffic for the five weeks ending 31*st March* 1877.

No. A46-758, dated Calcutta, the 6th April 1877.

From—James Brander, Esq., Traffic Superintendent,

To—The Agent, Eastern Bengal Railway Company.

The total quantity of goods carried during the above period was 7,92,377 maunds, as compared with that during the similar period of 1876, which was 6,46,907 maunds, showing an increase of 1,45,470 maunds.

This increase is mainly contributed to by the following staples, viz.—

Grain, hides, salt, seeds, sugar, piece-goods, and railway materials, &c.

Increases.

Grain ... ... Mds 1 51,895.

This item of freight still shows a very considerable increase, and will, I have no doubt, continue to do so as long as the active demand holds good in the Calcutta market for export to the distressed districts in Madras.

Hides ... ... Mds. 3,937.

This article of commerce shows an increase this month, owing, I understand, to a brisker demand for the commodity in Europe.

Still shows a marked expansion in the quantity forwarded over our line, and from all I can learn, I believe this traffic will continue to show an increase in quantity.

Seeds ... ... Mds. 86,412.

A satisfactory increase is again shown in this produce, showing that the demand for eastern country seeds is again gaining ground.

Sugar ... ... Mds. 16,812.

This product is still showing a satisfactory increase, which shows that the producers are availing themselves of the advantages of railway transit.

Piece-goods ... ... Mds. 3,019.

This traffic continues to improve, and, I consider, only awaits more frequent and direct steam transit from Goalundo to the interior to be greatly increased.

Railway materials, &c. ... ... Mds. 2,029.

This increase is owing to a larger quantity of material for the Northern Bengal State Railway having been forwarded during the month this year than last.

Decreases.

		Drums.	Bales.
Jute	Mds.	1,51,269	53,124.

Still shows the largest decrease of the staples, which shows a decline, attributable to the crop being all but exhausted.

		Tobacco.	Turmeric.
Tobacco and turmeric	Mds.	15,442	4,566.

Both show a falling off, which I attribute to a dull market in Calcutta, causing no demand for their despatch from the producing districts.

Gunny ... ... Mds. 3,133.

This falling off, I have no doubt, is owing to the brisk demand in the country for bags to convey rice, seeds, &c., to Calcutta.

I attach the usual statement showing increases and decreases of the principal staples.

CIVIL AND CRIMINAL.

No. 7, dated the 7th April 1877.

THE accompanying copy of a despatch from the Secretary of State for India to the Government of Madras is circulated for the information and guidance of all Judges and Magistrates.

2. The High Court desires to point out that the caution which the Secretary of State thought it necessary to convey in the case of Judges accepting the hospitality of public officers, who prosecute merely as a matter of public duty, must apply with much greater force to the case of their coming under obligation to private disputants.

From Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, to His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor in Council, Fort St. George,—(No. 5, (Revenue), dated India Office, London, the 25th January 1877.)

THE despatch of your Excellency in Council, dated 28th November, No. 19 of 1876, transmitting a memorial from Vemagauti Narayana Rao, late a Tahsildar and a Sub-Magistrate in the Nellore district, in which he prays for restoration to the service of Government, has been considered in Council.

2. I desire that the memorialist, who has been convicted of corruption, may be informed that I decline to interfere in his favour.

3. I fully approve of the orders alluded to in the last paragraph of the despatch for giving every consideration to Tahsildars and Native Magistrates when accused of offences in their official capacity.

4. There is one point connected with this case on which I desire to make a suggestion. The memorialist was prosecuted by the Collector, and he alleges (page 60) that when the Sessions Judge came to Nellore to try the case, he resided at the Collector's house, and was greatly prejudiced by the Collector against the memorialist.

I have no doubt that the latter assertion is quite unfounded, but I think it would be well if your Grace in Council would suggest to the Judges, through the High Court, to avoid, as far as possible, becoming the guests of those who are interested in cases, civil or criminal, which will eventually be submitted to the Judge's decision. All possible imputation of prejudice against the weaker party will thus be avoided.

CIVIL.

No. 8, dated the 7th April 1877.

The High Court's Criminal Circular No. 3, dated the 25th July 1872, is herewith circulated for the information of all Civil Courts, and it is directed that those Courts be guided by its provisions when issuing processes to districts in which the language in use is different from that of the district issuing the process.

2. This circular order should be read in connexion with Civil Circular No. 4 of 13th March 1876.

2. Moreover, in such cases it would be proper that the warrant should always be accompanied by a letter in English requesting its execution.

GHATWALI POLICE.

The Hon'ble Mr. Bell moved that the Bill for the regulation of the Ghatwali Police in the district of Bankoora be further considered in order to the settlement of its clauses.

The motion was agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Bell said that when he had the honor to present the report of the Select Committee on the Bill, he stated that the Bill, as settled by the Select Committee, had met with the approval of the local officers, except as regards section 4. That section provided that when a ghatwal died or resigned his office, the next male heir, if physically fit, was to be appointed to succeed him, provided that the heir had not been convicted of a non-bailable offence under the Criminal Procedure Code. To that section both the Magistrate of the district and the Commissioner of the division were very strongly opposed. They argued—and he thought very fairly argued—that a man might be a person of unimpeachable physique, and might not have been convicted of a non-bailable offence, but might still be a very improper person to be made a policeman, as the ghatwals virtually were. Take for instance the case of a notorious budmash who had been required to furnish security for good conduct. It could not be contended that a man of that character would be a fit person to be appointed a ghatwal. But if section 4 of the Bill stood as it had been settled by the Select Committee, such a person would not only be eligible, but must be appointed to the office. It was therefore proposed that in the place of physical fitness we should substitute "personal" fitness. Up to the present time personal fitness had always been considered an essential qualification of the office, and though Mr. Bell was a consenting party to the substitution of physical fitness for personal fitness, the Select Committee in making that substitution had undoubtedly introduced an innovation. Under the existing custom, the heir of a deceased ghatwal always succeeded to the office, provided he was, in the opinion of the Magistrate, a competent and fit person; and in considering this question of competency and fitness, the Magistrate had invariably looked to the character of the man. He thought the Council would agree with him that in so responsible a post as that of ghatwal, it was desirable to secure, if possible, the services of respectable men. He held in his hand a decision of the Nizamut Adawlut passed in 1816—a decision which was referred to in Harington's Analysis, as containing the law which regulated the status and position of the ghatwals in Bankoora—and he would read to the Council a short extract from that decision. The Judges said, with reference to the Bankoora ghatwals, that—

"Although the grant is not expressly hereditary, and the ghatwal is removeable from his office and the lands attached to it for misconduct, it is the general usage, on the death of a ghatwal who has faithfully executed the trust committed to him, to appoint his son, if competent, or some other fit person in his family, to succeed to the office."

The object of the amendment was to maintain the law and practice as it had existed since 1816. He was free to confess that it was partly due to his suggestion that the words "physical fitness" were substituted in Select Committee for "personal fitness." But as the Magistrate and Commissioner were both very strongly opposed to the change, Mr. Bell thought the Council ought not to recede from what had been the law and practice from 1816 to the present time; and therefore he hoped the Council would adopt the amendment which he proposed, namely, to substitute the following for section 4 of the Bill:—

"If a hereditary ghatwal dies, or becomes physically unfit for the performance of his duties, or resigns with the approval of the Magistrate of the district, his next male heir shall be appointed in his place. If the next male heir is a minor, or personally unfit, some other male member of the family, if personally fit, shall be appointed to the office, and shall, if the next male heir is a minor, hold the same until such time as the minor shall attain majority, whereupon the said minor, if personally fit, shall be appointed to the office.

"In case of disputed succession to a hereditary ghatwali tenure, the Magistrate of the district shall select the person whose claim shall appear to him to be the best, and shall appoint such person to the tenure, provided that any claimant may establish his heirship by civil suit against the person so appointed; and if he be successful in such suit, he shall, if personally fit, be appointed to the ghatwali tenure in supersession of such person.

"In all other cases the appointment of ghatwals shall be at the discretion of the Magistrate of the district.

"All questions which may arise as to personal fitness shall be decided by the Magistrate of the district."

The Hon'ble Baboo Kristodas Pal said he thought it was an inconvenient procedure that when a Bill was agreed to unanimously in Select Committee, any member of the Committee should re-open the question in Council when he had not expressed his dissent in Committee. His hon'ble friend had, however, given good reasons why he had re-opened the question, and with the permission of the Council, BABOO KRISTODAS PAL would state the reasons which led the Committee to reject the proposal now brought forward. The arguments which the hon'ble mover of the Bill had now adduced in support of the amendment had been duly laid before the Select Committee, but they thought that, when a question of a hereditary tenure was at issue, the determination of that question should not be left entirely to the discretion of the Magistrate on the score of the personal fitness of the ghatwal. Accordingly his hon'ble friend suggested the substitution of the words "physical fitness" for "personal fitness," and with a view to exclude bad characters from the scope of the Bill, the last clause was added to the section. That clause provided that no person should be appointed a ghatwal who had been convicted of an offence which is non-bailable within the meaning of Act X of 1872, the Code of Criminal Procedure.

The Select Committee thought that that clause would meet the objection of the Magistrate; but it appeared from a letter which his hon'ble friend had received from the Magistrate that he was not satisfied with that amendment. BABOO KRISTODAS PAL for one must confess that he did not see any force in the arguments which had been advanced in support of the present amendment. The question of personal fitness was so vague and indefinite that he did not think it would be fair and just to deprive a man of his hereditary tenure at the discretion of the Magistrate. If the ghatwal proved incompetent, he would be duly got rid of under the provisions of the law. But before his incompetency was proved, the Magistrate might have heard a rumour that the man was a bad character, and on mere suspicion dispense with his services and deprive him of his hereditary tenure. He did not think that in dealing with rights of this character the Council should give their sanction to the exercise of such a discretionary power. BABOO KRISTODAS PAL would therefore support the section as it stood.

The HON'BLE BABOO ISSER CHUNDER MITTER said that, as a member of the Select Committee, he thought it due to himself to state that the innovation referred to by the hon'ble mover of the Bill was made after sufficient consideration. The Select Committee had before it at the time the proposal submitted by the Magistrate, and the Committee gave it every consideration: it was on that account that the provision about conviction of a non-bailable offence within the meaning of Act X of 1872 was added. He thought that after all the consideration which had been given to the subject, the section, as it had been amended by the Select Committee, ought to stand.

The HON'BLE THE ADVOCATE-GENERAL said he considered that the amendment proposed by his hon'ble friend Mr. Bell left it so entirely in the discretion of the Magistrate to determine whether a person was unfit to be appointed a ghatwal, that it would be unsafe to vest such a power in the hands of any one person. These ghatwali tenures were hereditary, and although the ghatwals had to perform certain duties, he was sure that the local officers would agree with him in saying that they had not been of a very onerous character, and were quite inadequate to the large tracts of land which some of them had got. He would suggest that the section in the Bill should stand, with the addition after the words "Act X of 1872" in line 10, of the words "or is a man of a notoriously bad character." He would also suggest the following addition after the first clause of the section:—

"In all cases in which a hereditary ghatwal is set aside, and another person is appointed to succeed instead of the next male heir, a report shall be made to the Local Government, and the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor shall be necessary to make such appointment valid."

He did not think it proper to leave it in the hands of the Magistrate alone to determine that a ghatwal was unfit. In legislating in this matter, he would desire not to say one word against the power not being properly used; but he thought it necessary to guard against the improper rejection of ghatwals by persons comparatively junior in the service, and he would recommend the retention of the section with the amendments he had suggested.

The HON'BLE MR. BELL said he had no objection to have his hon'ble and learned friend's amendments substituted for the one he had moved, if such was the wish of the Council; but he felt it right to say that his present amendment was in strict accordance with the present practice. Since the decision of the Sudder Nizamut Adawlut in 1816, the Magistrate had invariably determined the question of a ghatwal's competency and fitness. But if the Council desired it, he had no objection to the amendment of the learned Advocate-General being substituted for his own.

It was perfectly true, as his hon'ble and learned friend had stated, that up to the present time the ghatwals had not rendered very efficient service; but it must be remembered that the object of the Bill was to make them an efficient force, and he should be sorry to see a disreputable member of the community admitted to it. On the whole, he thought the substituted amendment would meet the object in view, and he would therefore withdraw his amendment in favour of that proposed by the learned Advocate-General.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said he thought the amendment of the hon'ble and learned Advocate-General met all the difficulties of the case, and he thought it was necessary to have some power of appeal from the decision of the Magistrate even as to physical fitness. Hitherto in cases of this sort the ghatwals had resorted to the civil court for redress, and there had been a great deal of conflict between the civil courts and the executive officers; the result of the appeal, which was now proposed to be given, would be to take these cases out of the hands of the civil court. Therefore, having taken the matter from the cognizance of the civil courts, we were bound to give to the ghatwals the greatest security possible, by giving an appeal to the highest executive authority in cases where, by any hasty or ill-considered order, the heir of a ghatwal might be deprived of his rights. He thought that, with the amendments now proposed, the interests of the ghatwals would be amply protected.

The Hon'ble Mr. Bell's amendment was then by leave withdrawn, and the Advocate-General's amendments were agreed to.

A clerical error in section 9 was corrected; and after a verbal amendment in section 21, the Bill was passed on the motion of the Hon'ble Mr. Bell.

EXTENSION OF THE LABOUR DISTRICTS' EMIGRATION ACT TO CHITTAGONG.

THE HON'BLE MR. BELL moved that the Bill to extend the Labour Districts' Emigration Act, 1873, to the district of Chittagong, and to the Chittagong Hill Tracts, be read in Council. He did not think it was necessary to trouble the Council with any further remarks, having explained the object of the Bill and the reason for its introduction at the last meeting. The provisions of Chapter III of the Act, referring to the regulation of labourers in the tea districts, were made applicable to labourers who were at present in the district of Chittagong. He did not think it was necessary that the Bill should be referred to a Select Committee. No new principle whatever was involved in the Bill; it was merely proposed to extend to Chittagong an Act which had worked most successfully in other districts.

The HON'BLE MR. BROWN said he did not know whether the hon'ble member had taken the sense of the community at Chittagong with respect to this Bill. He ventured to submit that if that had not been done, the reading of the Bill should be deferred until a reference had been made to those interested in the question at Chittagong, and their opinion ascertained. He did not himself know that there was any special objection to the application of the Labour Districts' Emigration Act to Chittagong; but he thought the Council would agree with him that the amplest opportunity should be given for expressions of outside opinion on a Bill of this nature. He would therefore suggest that the reading of the Bill should be postponed for three months.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT observed that possibly the best course would be that the Bill should be read in Council and referred to a Select Committee, and then further proceedings upon it might be deferred for a reasonable time.

The motion was then agreed to, and the Hon'ble Mr. Brown having stated his inability to serve, the Bill was referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble the Advocate-General, the Hon'ble Mr. Jennings, and the Mover.

[illegible] was therefore considered necessary to modify the existing [illegible]. The Bill which he had now the honor to introduce followed what he believed to be a more correct system, involving as it did compulsory rates upon all lands irrigated and protected by Government works. It should be understood that canals and irrigation works were not undertaken by Government as a speculation with a view to pecuniary profit, but they had been accepted as an imperative necessity in order to save the people from periodically recurring famine and flood, as well as the best means of improving the country, increasing its resources, promoting trade, and facilitating traffic. If the necessity for irrigation and prevention from flood needed any proof, the enquiries set on foot by Government after the Orissa famine of 1866, as embodied in the Embankment Committee's Report, would show that the cost to Government of maintaining embankments during twenty-four years was 12 lakhs of rupees. The loss of revenue caused by flood during the thirty-six years previous to 1866 was 19¾ lakhs of rupees, and the loss by drought during the same period was 25¾ lakhs—thus making the total of the Government remissions 45½ lakhs. Again, in 1866 the actual loss, that was to say the value of the produce lost, was 89 lakhs of rupees, and the estimated loss of crops sustained during the thirty-six years prior to 1866 was 300 lakhs of rupees. So that no possible doubt could exist as to the desirability of Government doing its best to avert such calamity—in fact, we were gradually coming round to the opinions of that apostle of irrigation, Sir Arthur Cotton, and beginning to recognize the fact that the salvation of a large portion of India rested on the speedy completion of works providing irrigation and protection and cheap communication. It might be said that these works had hitherto effected but little good, that the people did not appreciate benefits offered to them free, and that the costly works undertaken were not utilised. All this was to a certain extent true. In this country great difficulty was experienced in getting the people to move out of the old grooves in which they were brought up, and this fact was clearly proved a few years ago when Sir George Campbell's scheme for farms was put upon its trial In spite of the great advantages offered, such as payment of rent, free supply of water, advice and assistance of Government officers, the people refused to avail themselves of them, and so strong was the caste feeling on the subject that some of those who had agreed to accept the offers made subsequently declined to do so, pressure having been brought to bear on them by their countrymen. But experience had shown that very few, if any, of those who once executed leases for canal water ever objected to do so again, or desired to abandon its use, and this was but natural, considering the advantages they derived from its use. In Orissa only a small portion of the canal system was complete, but wherever irrigation had extended, it was clear that it had been very beneficial to the people. There had been a general improvement of the population in irrigated tracts; zemindars found no difficulty in meeting the calls for revenue, rayats paid their rents without hardship, and the value of produce was increasing. Rice, the staple, was now more than double the price current twenty years ago, and what was a very significant fact, during the last few years, that was to say ever since irrigation works had commenced, there had been no sale of an estate for arrears of revenue throughout that part of the district where the works were in operation. Personally he was not aware of the results of irrigation in Midnapore and Behar, but he believed he would be consimaximum rate of Rs. 2 per acre on irrigable land should secure a minimum profit of Rs. 3-3 per acre in ordinary rice lands, and a considerably larger profit in two crop lands, although it was probable that it would be found inexpedient to impose the maximum rate at once. During the first year or two some labour and care in proportion of their lands for irrigation would require to be given by the people, and the duty would devolve on Government to educate the people in the use of irrigation water, so as to enable them to attain a maximum of produce. And as the Bill provided for the levy of the rate on only such lands as might be irrigable, protected, and drained, and as the canal engineers would have to certify that these conditions obtained before the rate could be levied—provision being also made for the remission of the rate whenever the supply of water might fail, or Government embankments give way—he thought no reasonable objection could be offered to the Bill, considering the imperative necessity that existed for works of this description. With these remarks he would move that the Bill to provide for irrigation in the provinces subject to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal be read in Council.

The Hon'ble Baboo Kristodas Pal said that, reading this Bill in the light of the opinions recorded by such eminent authorities as Sir George Campbell and His Grace the Duke of Argyll, when a similar proposition was mooted about six or seven years ago, he must say, with all deference to the hon'ble mover of the Bill, that it was a measure in which principle was sacrificed to expediency, and justice to convenience. The Bill surrendered the free trade principle on which the supply of irrigation water had hitherto been provided, and substituted coercion. It told the proprietor who owned the land, and the peasant who tilled it, "whether you take the water or not, you must pay for it. The work is there; it has been intended for your benefit; the expenses have been incurred; you may not have the intelligence to appreciate it; but money must be had, and you must therefore pay." It was, however, forgotten that when the works had been undertaken the people had not been consulted. The primary object of the projectors was commercial profit, which the hon'ble mover of the Bill seemed to ignore, though the Government, from motives of benevolence or philanthropy, had guaranteed the interest on the capital. The schemes having proved financial failures, it was now sought to recoup the loss by imposing a compulsory irrigation cess upon the people of the districts through which the canals ran. Surely it could not be reasonable or just to tax them on the pretext that the works had been intended for their benefit. This was not his individual opinion. The Hon'ble Council would doubtless attach much greater weight to the opinions of such an experienced administrator and such an eminent statesman as Sir George Campbell and His Grace the Duke of Argyll, than to those of any private individual like himself. Sir George had carefully studied the irrigation question, and, after making the fullest enquiry on the subject, he wrote as follows:—

"In the face of all these difficulties, notwithstanding my strong objections to a compulsory system, I was attracted by the somewhat tempting bait held out in the Punjab Canal Bill, where the compulsory rate is limited to Re. 1 per acre—a rate which, in a dry country like the Punjab, seemed very cheap for cold-weather crops, if the provision is bonâ fide carried out that an independent authority is to decide if the land really needs water and has an ample supply of it. It would be much more difficult to determine what really needs irrigation in the rainy season in Orissa: all lands do not want it there, and while one year it is beneficial, another year it is not needed. If once we depart from the straight path of voluntary contract, we do not know what we may come to"

It would appear that the hon'ble mover of the Bill, as Commissioner of the Orissa Division, had advocated the imposition of a compulsory irrigation rate, and Sir George Campbell replied as follows:—

"I must guard myself against any supposition that I can for a moment concur in the doctrine is fair to charge the interest of capital expended on the locality for whose benefit it was intended, that people who have no voice in the matter should be made to pay for engineering or financial failures, not because they are benefited, but because the projectors intended to benefit them."

Yet it was proposed to impose a compulsory irrigation rate for reasons which Sir George Campbell had held were conclusive against it. It would be in the recollection of the Hon'ble Council that in 1869 the Punjab Canal Bill was passed by His Excellency the Viceroy's Council sanctioning a compulsory irrigation rate; the Bill was in due course forwarded to the Secretary of State, who vetoed it in the following terms:—

"The object of the provision in question is to enable Government to secure itself against pecuniary loss in the event of a canal proving a financial failure. Such failure might ensue from three causes—A canal might not be able to supply for irrigational purposes the expected quantity of water; or the expected quantity being available, cultivators might decline to avail themselves to the expected extent; or excessive costliness of construction might, in order to render a canal remunerative, necessitate the imposition of higher rates than cultivators could afford, or would voluntarily pay. In the first case, under the proposed enactment, the loss consequent on Government having engaged in an unsuccessful speculation would fall, not upon itself, but upon the cultivators whom it had disappointed. In the second, cultivators would be forced to pay for water for which they had no use, or at any rate, were not disposed to use, possibly no doubt from imperfect appreciation of the value of irrigation, but quite possibly also from a perfectly intelligible desire to have part of their land under dry crops instead of all under wet. With regard to the third, none can require, less than your Government, to be reminded how prone to become excessive guaranteed expenditure always is; and under the provisions of the Bill, all expenditure on Government canals would be guaranteed. It will therefore be satisfactory to me to learn that the section to which exception has been taken can be so far modified as to obviate any objections."

Baboo Kristodas Pal had nothing to add to the objections so pithily described by His Grace the Duke of Argyll. The argument against the compulsory irrigation rate in the Punjab, he submitted, applied with equal force to a compulsory irrigation cess in Bengal.

The hon'ble member in charge of the Bill informed the Council that in Orissa, during the thirty-six years preceding 1866, the State had been subjected to a loss of no less than 45 lakhs of rupees in the cost of maintaining embankments and remission of revenue in consequence of flood and drought. Now Baboo Kristodas Pal held that this fact was more an argument against than in favour of a compulsory irrigation cess. It should be remembered that in Orissa the State occupied the position of landlord, and that, if a private landlord had certain obligations to discharge for the protection and welfare of the tenantry, the State landlord had also similar obligations to perform; that if it was the duty of a private landlord to construct and maintain embankments, it was the duty of the State landlord to do likewise; that if it devolved upon a private landlord to grant remission of rent in calamitous seasons, it also devolved upon the State landlord to grant similar relief under like circumstances; and that, if the irrigation works had saved the State this recurring loss, it ought to bear the cost of those works which were so remunerative to it. The hon'ble mover had said that the irrigation works in Orissa had a firm hold upon the people; that the ryot who once took the irrigation water would not let it go; that there was no retrogression, but progression. If such was the case, then why impose a compulsory rate? But Baboo Kristodas Pal was sorry to perceive from the Minutes of Sir George Campbell that the irrigation works in Orissa did not come into popular favour so smoothly and easily as the hon'ble member supposed. Referring to the proceedings of Mr. Kirkwood, who was then the Superintendent of the Orissa Canals, Sir George remarked:—

"It now turns out that his statements, showing the successful progress of irrigation, were in a sense fictitious, that is to say, by far the greater portion of his figures represented not irrigation which the people had agreed to take and pay for, but the area which, in the exercise of a despotic power, he imagined that he would call on them to pay for. The system was supposed to be entirely one of voluntary agreement, but the bonâ fide agreements covered but an insignificant area. For the greater part he had no agreements at all; some agreements were for large areas with persons who were not properly qualified to make them, and which fell to the ground; and where he had agreements, it was for no definite area, but for areas to be afterwards measured and ascertained."

This was the way the people were 'educated' to receive the irrigation water. Now, the strongest argument in favour of a compulsory irrigation rate was that the canals were an insurance against drought. But could this insurance be relied upon? Could this insurance be considered sure? Unfortunately the supply might fail when most needed. Baboo Kristodas Pal at the last sitting of the Council quoted Sir George Campbell as to the inadequacy of the Orissa Canals in this respect. He would now quote the same high authority about the Midnapore Canals. Sir George remarked:—

"There was a really extensive demand for the water, the rules were considerably relaxed, and it was believed that the day of triumph had come. But unhappily all these prospects were darkened by a circumstance which the projectors of the canal do not appear lands should be liable to the irrigation rate; but how was the area to be defined, and who was to define it? It would seem that the Government would not be bound to supply water at a greater distance than a mile from certain irrigable lands—this provision was not at all explicit—but was that to be the limit of the irrigable area? The Bill was not at all clear upon the point; it left the determination of the boundaries of the irrigable areas to the discretion of the canal officers, who would be naturally anxious to swell the revenue.

Lastly, he was at a loss to know why the carefully prepared sections in the Irrigation Act of 1876, regarding the construction of village channels, had been left out of this Bill. These sections had provided for due compensation to cultivators for lands which might be taken up for village channels; but the present Bill required that a free passage should be given for village channels. Now, for every acre of land, no small portion of it would be taken up for village channels, and it did not at all stand to reason that one cultivator should give up his land free of charge for the benefit of another, simply because the village channel would be common. This part of the Bill BABOO KRISTODAS PAL thought was a direct invasion of private right.

For these reasons, he continued to say, he could not accept the principle of the Bill. He was free to confess that the Local Government was in a difficult position; it had been required to raise money for the maintenance of the works, and it must fulfil its task. But he would venture to ask why, if seven years ago the Secretary of State, after full enquiry and deliberation, had decided that a compulsory irrigation rate was most objectionable, was there to be no fixity or continuity in the policy of the Government? It could not but be deeply regretted that this retrograde move should be made in a province where the principles of progressive government were so fully recognised.

The HON'BLE MR. BAYLEY said he had not intended to trouble the Council on that occasion. In fact he had not had the opportunity of reading through the Bill. But since he had been asked by the hon'ble member, who opposed this measure, to speak to the fact whether irrigation, as far as it had gone in Shahabad, had been a success or a failure, and as he had recently to consider a good deal the question of imposing a compulsory rate, he ventured to trouble the Council with a few remarks.

In regard to the principle of the Bill, he thought the matter had been perfectly settled. He might remind the Council that the principle of making the people pay for protection was not absolutely new; certainly was not confined to payment for the supply of water. The very Bill his hon'ble friend had quoted was based upon that principle; it was the principle that zemindars and others, who were supposed to be benefited by the maintenance of embankments, were made to pay for the cost of keeping them up. The hon'ble member asked whether the officers who were most interested in the success of irrigation works should be vested with a discretion in the imposition of the rate for the maintenance of those works. To this MR. BAYLEY would reply that precisely the same discretion which was objected to in the case of the Canal Officer was vested in the Embankment Officer in regard to the imposition of the embankment cess; and it was the same in regard to the road cess. The persons who paid for embankments and roads were not asked whether they wished them to be made; the assessment was made upon them, and they paid it.

The main question of the imposition of a compulsory rate had been already settled, and he would not therefore take up the time of the Council in discussing it. To his mind the great advantage of the scheme really was that it did away with the hosts of peadahs and amins and subordinate officers of the Canal Department who, under the present system of measurement and voluntary purchase of water, preyed upon the people who took the water. He recently had a specimen of the operation of the present system brought under his notice in a criminal case which arose out of an irrigation dispute, and the village papers had to be referred to. In 1875 water was given by contract with the headmen of villages. Two men contracted for a certain village, and the water was given. An amin was sent to measure the land to which water was given, and he measured 110 beeghas. The rate at which water should have been given varied between Rs. 3 and Rs. 1-4. Instead of submitting his measurement papers accordingly, the amin submitted measurements of 70 beeghas only, assessed at a uniform rate of Rs. 1-9, thus swindling his department of the difference; and for this arrangement it appeared that the ryots of the village had to pay the amin Rs. 25. Doubtless this same sort of swindling went on systematically and habitually all the year round. He thought that anything which did away with a system of perpetually recurring demands of small sums, and the consequent opportunities for bribery and extortion, was really, although he scarcely hoped his hon'ble friend would see it, a positive benefit to the ryot.

In regard to the Soane Canal, and the remarks of Messrs. Mylne and Thompson to which reference had been made, they said that the ryots of Shahabad had not much confidence in the way the water was given out, nor any certainty that there would be a sufficient supply of water when needed. The history of the canals would throw some light on this assertion. In 1873, before the canals were at all finished, there was fear of great drought, and the canal officers were told that they would have to give water at any risk. They cut the sides of the canals and gave water freely, and the result was that the cultivation on an enormous area was saved: the figures were given in Sir Richard Temple's famine report; it made the difference between famine and no famine in Shahabad. They made no attempt to give the water again the next year; but the cutting of the banks in 1873 threw back the works greatly. In 1874 no water was given. In the autumn of 1875 there was again great fear of drought, and again, although arrangements had not been made, and the irrigation law had not been passed, the irrigation officers were once more called upon to give water. He need hardly state that the water was given; contracts were made; and the Collector was told to try and collect the rates. But he had no law to help him, and had to depend upon the good will of the ryots and moral persuasion: a great amount of money was not collected, and he believed it never would be. Practically until the last autumn there had been no regular system, so that although Messrs Mylne and Thompson were perfectly justified in concluding that, so far as the past went, the ryots had no confidence in the way water was given out, it would be very unjust to make any comparison on the basis of the hasty transactions above mentioned with the system which would be pursued in the future. MR. BAYLEY thought that if in any part of the country irrigation works ought to succeed, it should succeed in Shahabad; it was a district in which water was needed, and where the people knew the advantages of irrigation. It was merely the substitution of one system of irrigation for another. At present the people gave their own labour in preparing reservoirs and irrigation channels to their villages; they got no payment for the labour, only the food of the laborers for the day: they proceeded upon a principle of co-operative labour of their own. He thought the substitution of one system for another might give some trouble at first, but the people would soon find that the water was given to them cheaper and with less labour than under the system to which they were accustomed.

The HON'BLE THE ADVOCATE-GENERAL said that he would briefly advert to the arguments adduced by the Hon'ble Baboo Kristodas Pal in opposition to this Bill. He was surprised to hear that hon'ble gentleman state that in passing the present Bill this Council would sacrifice principle to injustice. A very cursory glance at the subject in its true bearings would dispose of that view of the proposed measure. In order to avert as far as possible the disastrous results of dreadful calamities which might befall the province of Bengal at any future time, the Government had constructed, and would have to construct, works for purposes of irrigation at a heavy outlay, and would have to maintain them at considerable cost. If contributions towards the maintenance of such works were to be merely voluntary, it might happen that such contribution might be paid once in ten or more years by the people of a particular locality then visited by drought availing themselves of the water-supply brought to them at great expense for their benefit and convenience; and although matters might not turn out as he had just stated, the Government must, by way of anticipation, have the water-supply ready at hand to be used whenever an emergency arose, and must maintain the same at the cost of the general revenues of Bengal, thereby saddling those who had not the remotest interest, nor were likely to be in any manner directly benefited, with the expenditure incurred in the maintenance of works of irrigation. In the view the hon'ble member took of the matter, this course would be just, equitable, and proper. It was, however, obvious that such a position could not be maintained. It was self-evident that it would be unjust and unfair in the extreme that the maintenance of works constructed in a particular locality for strictly local purposes should be defrayed out of general revenue. It was almost axiomatic that these expenses should be met by those for whose immediate benefit they were incurred, and that was the principle which the present Bill affirmed and proposed to carry out in practice. The maxim "that he who obtains a benefit should bear the burden" was one of universal application. Now it was clear that works of irrigation could not be constructed in future, nor could they be maintained any longer, under the voluntary system now in force, and the sole question regarding them lay between the choice of one of two alternatives, namely, whether they should be maintained at the cost of a small payment by those who were, or were likely to be, benefited thereby, or whether the enterprise should be altogether abandoned. Humanity alone dictated the true answer and pointed out that alternative which should be adopted, and that was the basis of the present measure.

The attempt to escape from local taxation had been invariably founded upon some supposed and occult duty which, it was stated, obliged the Government of the country to do the particular act or execute the works required at particular localities for the due protection of lands and population in reference to which a local tax was needed. The present suggestion, that it was the duty of the Government at its cost to construct and maintain the works under notice, was a repetition of the argument used on the subject of the Embankment Bill, the Road Cess Bill, and others of a like nature; and although this argument had been refuted and its fallacy exposed, its vitality and elasticity were such that it had survived the storms raised against it and continued to flourish with unabated vigour, and to be used wherever it was thought practicable to introduce it. Now, it was well known that zemindars were under the obligation, by virtue of their kaboolyats or contracts with the Government, to maintain embankments and to do other necessary acts for the protection of their estates, and it was for the purpose of providing machinery to carry out that obligation that the Embankment Act was passed. Zemindars had either wholly disregarded or very imperfectly performed their duties, and when the time came to have those duties specifically enforced by an Act, they were found pleading their own laches and inaction as excuses for the non-performance of their duties, and as indicating that these very duties were those which had devolved on the Government. Such was the lame plea then advanced, and of precisely the same elements was the present plea composed.

He thought it could not be denied that cultivators of land, who enjoyed possession of land on payment of rent, were under the obligation of cultivating in a fair and reasonable manner; and it appeared to him that such a form of duty comprehended within it the necessity of some expenditure of money being made by them on subjects or appliances which might enable them to cultivate under unfavourable circumstances. Regulation I of 1793 broadly stated it to be the duty of proprietors of land to exert themselves in the cultivation of their lands (see section 7 of Regulation I of 1793).

It was proposed by the present Bill to bring, at a small contribution from persons interested in land, within the reach of cultivators water-supply, to be used at all times if necessary, but more especially in times of drought. Such supplementary assistance, when taken advantage of, operated in furtherance of the obligation on the part of cultivators to which he had adverted; and, inasmuch as it was afforded in consequence of works undertaken by the Government which the cultivators were wholly unable to accomplish by themselves, it was a means of assistance which should be accepted by all prudent and careful cultivators as a great boon conferred by the Government.

Opinions of eminent men had been cited by the hon'ble member as bearing out his views and showing conclusively that the use of water supplied should be voluntary and not compulsory. These opinions were more or less speculative: they were delivered in anticipation of what might occur, and upon a different state of things. It appeared to him that one of the fallacies that lurked in the views of the hon'ble member was the placing of such great stress on opinions not applicable to the present state of things. The ADVOCATE-GENERAL preferred to construct any theory or opinion upon existing facts, and having heard it declared by the Hon'ble Mr. Ravenshaw, whose experience in reference to, and familiarity with, the subject of debate were very great, that the effect of irrigation in those cases in which cultivators had availed themselves of water-supply had been to treble their profits from land so irrigated, and that in his opinion, founded on facts and figures and a survey of events for a great number of years, a general scheme of irrigation in localities where it was needed would be not only productive of much good, but operate to remove the causes of deplorable losses, the ADVOCATE-GENERAL was necessarily led to the conclusion that the proposed measure before the Council was a prudent and laudable one, calculat d to confer immeasurable benefits upon the people. Once having realized in his own mind the full force of that conviction, he felt himself bound to give his most unqualified support to, and approval of, the present Bill.

So much, then, for the general principle of the Bill. The hon'ble member had also endeavoured to show that supply of water in times of necessity would be a delusion; that it had in some instances failed at Midnapore, and would do so in all probability when urgently needed. He had from these premises argued that it would be unjust to compel people to pay for a thing which might be of no use to them. It had, however, been provided by section 53 of the Bill that should the water-supply fail, there would be a remission of payment.

It might be that engineering skill had not attained such excellence as to set at rest the question of the possibility of failure under certain contingencies; but it must be borne in mind that difficulties were only surmountable by experience and in due course of time. It was to be hoped that precautions would be taken against such failures as were complained of. Where the physical circumstances of particular localities were such that a reasonable certainty was not found to exist in respect of an abundant supply of water at all times, probably works of irrigation would not be introduced into such localities.

To abandon an enterprize so full of hope and so well calculated to prove beneficial would be wholly unworthy of any Government which zealously sought the welfare and prosperity of its people.

The HON'BLE MR. BELL said he wished to make one or two remarks upon an argument which had been very prominently insisted upon by his hon'ble friend opposite (Baboo Kristodas Pal). The hon'ble member had stated that these irrigation canals were only useful in years of excessive drought, and that in such years they invariably failed. Now there was a certain amount of truth in that statement. It was perfectly true that when a canal was fed by a river which had a small catch-basin, and which therefore depended upon the local rainfall for its supply, if the rainfall was insufficient the water in the river would be insufficient also; and the Midnapore canal, which had been alluded to by his hon'ble friend, was to a certain extent obnoxious to these objections. That canal was fed by the river Cossye, a river with a very short course, and therefore principally dependent for its supply of water on the local rainfall; and in exceptionally dry seasons the water from the Midnapore canal did partially fail, but not to the extent his hon'ble friend supposed. It failed only to a partial extent. The area irrigable by that canal was estimated at 140,000 acres, but in the exceptionally dry season of 1872 the canal only irrigated 48,000 acres. The Council would therefore see that though there was a failure of water, there was not a total failure, but that in spite of the drought it still possessed very great irrigable power.

But the objections which had been brought forward against the Midnapore canal had absolutely no relation whatever to the other two schemes to which the Bill chiefly referred. The Orissa canal was fed by the river Mahanuddy, and the Soane canal by the river Soane. Both these were rivers with very long courses, stretching far into Central India and fed by the mountain ranges in those localities. In 1873, that severe year of drought, when the Midnapore canal partially failed, it was found that the Orissa canal had sufficient water to cover the irrigated area it had undertaken to supply. The same was true of the Soane canal, and therefore he thought the hon'ble gentleman's argument in regard to the canals failing in the time of drought had been completely refuted by the experience of 1873. With regard to seasons in which there was no drought, his hon'ble friend Mr. Ravenshaw had shown from experiments which had been actually made that the outturn of an acre of irrigated land considerably exceeded the outturn of an acre of unirrigated land, though the unirrigated land had enjoyed an abundant rainfall. But MR. BELL thought the comparison made by his hon'ble friend was hardly fair. It was hardly fair to compare irrigated land against unirrigated land when there had been a bumper supply of rain. It might be conceded that irrigation would not be needed if we could always depend upon the rain; but every one knew that every second or third year there was a deficiency of rain at the proper season, and if the advantages of irrigation were to be fairly tested, a comparison should be made between irrigated and unirrigated land in a year in which there had been a partial failure not amounting to actual drought.

There was another observation which he wished to make upon a remark which had fallen from his hon'ble friend. The hon'ble mover of the Bill had stated that during the 36 years which preceded 1866, the Government had made remissions of revenue amounting to Rs. 45,00,000; and his hon'ble friend Baboo Kristodas Pal, arguing from this fact, contended that it was the interest of Government, as a landlord, to construct these works, to obviate the necessity of making these heavy remissions of revenue. But his hon'ble friend forgot that it was also stated that while the Government remitted Rs. 45,00,000 of revenue, the loss to the cultivators amounted to Rs. 3,00,00,000; that is to say, while the Government lost Rs. 45,00,000, the ryots lost Rs. 3,00,00,000. But owing to the construction of these irrigation works there had been no destructive inundations since 1872, and consequently the value of land had very considerably increased. Formerly land in Orissa was sold at fourteen years' purchase; since 1872 the value had risen to nineteen years' purchase.

There was another interesting fact which MR. BELL would mention to the Council. There had always been a distinction made between lands liable to inundation and lands which were not so liable; lands liable to inundation being assessed at Rs. 1-3-10 less than land which was protected from inundation. Now all land within this irrigable area was protected from inundation, and surely it was reasonable that when works which had been constructed at a great cost had secured the country from inundation, and when the zemindar would by reason of these works be enabled to raise the assessment on land which was formerly unprotected to a level with that paid for protected land, the Government which had constructed these works should get some return, and that the whole of the profit should not be absorbed by the zemindars and the ryots alone.

He thought that the Council would agree entirely in what was stated by the hon'ble member opposite (Mr. Bayley) regarding the main provisions of the Bill, and the great advantage which would result to the country by substituting a compulsory for a voluntary rate. The present system, as far as MR. BELL understood it, was this: the ryot had to enter into a written contract with the Irrigation Department, stating the quantity of land for which water was required. After the contract was made, an officer of the department was deputed to measure the land, and during the whole of the irrigation season constant visits were made by the subordinate officers of the department, to see that the ryot was not applying the water to land for which no water-rate had been paid. That system was open to two great objections. First, it entailed upon Government an enormous cost in establishments—a cost which at present was absolutely in excess of the revenue derived by the sale of the water. In the second place, the frequent inspection of the land by the officers of the Irrigation Department was extremely distasteful to the ryots. Now by the imposition of a uniform irrigation rate both these objections would be removed, the cost in the working expenses would be greatly reduced, and the ryots would be saved from the constant visits of the officers of the department, to which they entertained a strong objection. He felt convinced that before the Act had been three years in operation every ryot who lived within the irrigable area would be a convert to irrigation, and those districts through which these irrigating canals passed would become the most fruitful and most prosperous in Bengal.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said he did not understand that his hon'ble friend intended to oppose the reading of the Bill, and therefore it was not necessary for him to say much. But his hon'ble friend had, as usual, stated his objections to the principle of the Bill very ably and very clearly, and it was due to him that His Honor should say something in reply to the remarks which had been made.

In addition to other fallacies which had already been exposed by the hon'ble and learned members on the right (the Advocate-General and Mr. Bell) there were two great fallacies which pervaded the arguments of his hon'ble friend and misled him in respect of all his conclusions. One of those two fallacies was that the object of the Bill was to impose on the people of Orissa and Behar the duty of paying the whole of the interest on the expensive works which were constructed for the purpose of irrigation. The other fallacy was that there was an individual Government, which possessed a purse of its own quite distinct from the people.

As to the first fallacy, he would observe that the Bill did not do anything of the nature of that inferred by the hon'ble member. If it did do so, he should not have had to ask the Council last week for leave to bring in a Bill for raising a general cess throughout the province, for the object of that Bill was to raise the money necessary to meet the cost of these works. The object of the present Bill was simply to supplement that, and to give effect to the very just and reasonable principle that the people who benefited specially from these works should pay some little sum more than those who received no benefit from them. All the arguments which had been quoted by his hon'ble friend rested upon the two great fallacies to which His Honor had alluded; and the views of the Secretary of State and of Sir George Campbell which had been quoted also referred to a perfectly different state of things to that which they were discussing. If the present measure had ever been laid before Sir George Campbell, His Honor had no doubt that he would have held very different views. The measure then before him was one for imposing on the people of Orissa the whole burden of works which cost many millions of money—a burden which he well knew the people of Orissa were unable to meet. What was now proposed was to impose a small rate, which would hardly do more than meet the cost of the establishment requisite for delivering the water. If we could impose upon the people of Orissa the whole cost of these works, we should have had no further occasion to tax the province generally. He thought his hon'ble friend would see that it was one thing to levy a light cess, to cover the working expenses of irrigation works, and on a slight portion of the interest on the outlay on the people of the parts of the country who benefited from the works, and another thing to throw upon those people the whole burden of the interest on the entire capital. From the measure now proposed, we hoped to realize only some eight or ten lakhs of rupees. The amount to be met for interest upon these works was twenty-three lakhs. What had been done had really been what his hon'ble friend desired. The burden had been, as he suggested, taken over by Government. But then the question arose, what was this Government? Hitherto it had been the Government of India, and the way that Government paid for the works was by taxing the people of India generally.

The people of all India paid for watering the fields of the people of Orissa and protecting them from risk of drought. Now, on what His Honor thought a right and just principle, it had been determined that the Government which was to meet the expense of keeping up these works was the local Government, and the people whom that Government represented were the people of Bengal; therefore under these Bills taxation was about to be imposed by the Government, which would be raised from the people generally whom that Government represented, while some small portion of it would be raised from the people of the districts specially protected and benefited. He need hardly point out that the Government could only pay for such charges as this by taxation in some form or another; it had no reserve stock of its own in which the people had no interest and concern, and the only question at issue was who should pay for local works—local interests represented by local Government, or imperial interests represented by the Imperial Government? He could not understand how there could be any doubt on the subject.

His hon'ble friend seemed to think that the Government was in a peculiar position in respect to Orissa on account of what he called its relation to the people as landlord. But he was under a misapprehension, because, although under the present system of Orissa the assessment of revenue was liable to periodical revision, the Government was no more the landlord in Orissa than it was in the Punjab or anywhere else. The Government had only interest in the general progress and prosperity of the country arising from its power of making a periodical re-settlement of the land revenue. The principle of making the people pay something towards the benefit they derived from a water-supply was no new principle, as the hon'ble gentleman seemed to think. It had been approved over and over again by this Council in the Embankment laws and in the Drainage laws, and in the laws relating to the levy of water, police, drainage, and lighting rates in towns; and he thought his hon'ble friend would be surprised if a proposal had been made to call on the people of Orissa to pay for the water required by the people of Calcutta. The people of Calcutta did not do that, but they had submitted to a tax for the introduction of a water-supply in the town, for lighting and sanitation, feeling that they might reasonably be asked to pay for divers benefits they received. The Bill before the Council was of the same nature; the people of Orissa had benefited by the construction of the irrigation works, and they were now asked to pay something for their water-supply. He heard it very constantly asserted by those interested in the land that every burthen was thrown upon the land. But he ventured to think that the tendency of modern legislation was the other way. Merchants, traders, and shop-keepers were made to pay for everything that was given to them in the shape of water, light, and police; while the cultivators of the soil had not been made to pay for anything. The cultivators of Bengal, and indeed the landed interest generally, paid little or no taxation; they paid their rent for their land, or the revenue which they had agreed to pay when taking a settlement for their estates, and as salt tax they paid something very nominal; but for all the benefits of good administration and protection they paid absolutely nothing else. Whenever proposals were made with the object of making those interested in the land pay something, the objection was raised that they were made to pay for everything. He believed that there never was such a delusion. He thought that on further consideration his hon'ble friend would see that the principle of the Bill was not what he believed it to be. It was not a Bill to impose a very heavy burden on the people, but to make them pay something very much below the value, and still more below the actual cost of certain definite benefits conferred on them.

Many of the objections as to details which had been made had already been met by the hon'ble members who preceded him, and there was therefore no necessity for him to say anything further; but he might observe that his hon'ble friend had made a great deal of the failure of the Midnapore canal. But that canal, even admitting that it deserved all that was said about it, was, as his hon'ble friend Mr. Bell had pointed out, only a small portion of the scheme, and HIS HONOR did not intend to apply the principle of the Bill to any area in Midnapore regarding which they had the slightest doubt. He had given instructions that the area within which the Bill was to apply should be restricted to the utmost degree, so that there should be no part of a district subjected to the rate to which the Irrigation Department was not in a position to supply water. The Midnapore canal signified very little one way or the other: it cost little, it was calculated to bring as little. Therefore, every argument based on the failure of water-supply in the Cossye river might, as had been shown by his hon'ble friend Mr. Bell, be left out of the question. The Government would, under the section of the Bill which had no doubt attracted the hon'ble gentleman's notice, have no power to impose a cess on any part of the country in which it was not in a position to supply water and also to effect good and efficient drainage.

Then, he thought, the hon'ble member, in his objection to the arbitrary power which he believed was to be conferred upon the canal officers, had overlooked the provisions of section 71 of the Bill. Really the whole thing rested upon the Collector of the district, and HIS HONOR did not know any officer who was so likely to be disposed to guard the rights of the ryots as the Collector. By section 71, when the list of estates and tenures within the irrigable area was prepared, they would be checked by the Collector, and after approval by him would be published; and although the detailed work would be left in the hands of the canal officer, the Collector was responsible for the justness and correctness of the whole of the work. His hon'ble friend, as a member of the Select Committee, would have an opportunity of suggesting any further protection he considered necessary.

The HON'BLE MR. RAVENSHAW observed that he had again to call attention to the fact that the irrigation works were for the purpose of providing irrigation as well as protection and drainage to the whole of the areas to which the Bill was intended to apply. He thought that that alone was quite sufficient to dispose of any objection to the Bill.

The motion was then agreed to, and the Bill referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds, the Hon'ble Mr. Bayley, the Hon'ble Baboo Ramshunker Sen, the Hon'ble Baboo Kristodas Pal, the Hon'ble Nawab Meer Mahomed Ali, and the Mover, with instructions to report in three weeks.

The Council was adjourned to Saturday, the 28th instant.

RESOLUTION ON THE REVENUE SURVEY OPERATIONS IN THE LOWER PROVINCES FOR THE YEAR ENDING 30TH SEPTEMBER 1876.

READ—

A letter No. 235A, dated 24th March 1877, from the Board of Revenue, submitting a report on the Revenue Survey operations in the Lower Provinces during the year ending on the 30th September 1876.

THE most important operations now being conducted under the orders of the Survey Department in Bengal are those connected with the cadastral survey in the Shahabad, Patna, and Gya districts, which have been undertaken on account of the Soane Canal irrigation works. There are two parties at work—one at present at Gya, and the other at Shahabad; and altogether an area of 501 square miles, 877 villages, and 1,173,676 fields were surveyed during the year. The number of fields is unusually great, and the average size less than one-third of an acre; thus vindicating the adoption of the large scale of 32 inches to a mile. The Lieutenant-Governor agrees with the Board of Revenue that, considering the difficulties with which the parties have had to contend, the absence of preliminary demarcation, the ignorance of the ameens, the small size of the field, and the large scale of the survey, the progress made has been satisfactory. At the same time it is apparent that the greater part of the work still remains to be done, viz. 221 square miles in the Gya district, 300 in Patna, and 1,107 in Shahabad. It is estimated that 400 square miles will be completed by the Patna and Gya parties in the present year, and that the Eastern Soane irrigation survey will be brought to a close early in 1877-78. Both the parties will then unite in order to complete the district of Shahabad as soon as possible. This survey has now become an especially urgent work in connection with the arrangements for imposing a cess on all lands irrigable by the Soane Canal, as it will be impossible to assess all the lands effectively until the survey is complete. Every effort must therefore be made to assist the survey parties and finish the work. The Lieutenant-Governor observes from Colonel Vanrenen's statement that no funds have yet been provided for the publication of the maps, without which the survey by itself can be of little use. This part of the report will be transferred for early disposal to the Irrigation Branch of the Public Works Department.

2. No remarks are called for regarding the cadastral survey of the Khoordah estate in Orissa, or of the Dhanwar estate in Hazareebagh. Of the Midnapore district it may be mentioned that 1,000 square miles were surveyed in detail and 115 square miles in boundary in advance for 1876-77, and that it is expected that this work will be completed in the current year.

3. The Deara survey is employed in showing the changes which have taken place in the river lands of the Ganges and Megna from Furreedpore to the borders of Backergunge, a distance of 140 miles, with an average width of seven miles. Care has been taken to erect permanent pillars on tri-junction stations at some distance from the river. The Lieutenant-Governor observes that the Board are about to address Government specially with reference to these deara surveys, and he will await their report.

4. The work of demarcation in the Midnapore division, which was being carried on by a non-professional survey under Mr. Beadon, the Senior Superintendent, has been concluded, and with the conclusion of the work the appointment of Superintendent, which had fallen substantively vacant, has ceased to exist. The miscellaneous pending work will be disposed of by the Settlement Officer of Midnapore. The Lieutenant-Governor is glad to notice, on the occasion of Mr. Beadon's transfer to another sphere of duty, the favourable mention that is made by the Board of Revenue of his services in the Survey Department during the year.

Two scholarships, to be styled "The Senior and Junior Victoria Scholarships," will be given every year in commemoration of the proclamation of the assumption by Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen of the title of Empress of India on the 1st January 1877.

The junior scholarship, of the value of Rs. 10 per mensem, will be given to the first boy who, after having passed the University entrance examination from any school in the Rajshahye and Cooch Behar Division, fails to obtain any other scholarship, provided he joins the high school of Rungpore and prepares himself there for the first examination in arts. This scholarship will be tenable by him for two years, provided he evinces industry and conducts himself to the satisfaction of the school authorities.

The senior scholarship, of the value of Rs. 15 per mensem, will be given to the first boy who, after passing the first examination in arts at the Calcutta University from the high school at Rungpore, fails to obtain any other scholarship. It will be tenable by him for two years at any of the colleges affiliated to the Calcutta University, provided he prosecutes there with industry either general or any professional study, and conducts himself to the satisfaction of the college authorities.

In the event of a high school ceasing to exist at Rungpore, the junior scholarship will be given to the first boy who, having passed the University entrance examination from the Rungpore zillah school, fails to obtain any other scholarship, and it will be tenable by him for two years at any of the institutions affiliated to the Calcutta University; and the senior scholarship to the first boy, originally of the Rungpore zillah school, who, having passed the first examination in arts, fails to obtain any other scholarship, provided he joins any college affiliated to the Calcutta University, and prosecutes with industry either general or professional studies, and conducts himself to the satisfaction of the college authorities.

The scholarships will be adjudicated each year by the District Education Committee of Rungpore.

If in any year any boy fails to obtain any of the scholarships, the savings will be appropriated for the enhancement of the value of the scholarship, or spent in encouraging higher education in Rungpore, by any means the District Committee consider desirable.

In conclusion, I beg to request the favor of your applying to Her Most Gracious Majesty Victoria the Empress of India for the permission to call these exhibitions the Senior and Junior Victoria Scholarships.

7	Nuddea, „ 21 '77	·63	Weather—Very hot. The early rice sowings are going on, and some of the earliest sowings are germinating. The spring sowings of indigo are also germinating. The prospects of sugarcane are excellent Cholera has broken out in several parts of the district.
8	Jessore, „ 21 „	·04	Weather—Dry, clear, and hot. The dry weather, if it lasts, will permit of sowing in some of the low lands that were filled with water by the previous heavy rain. The prospects of indigo are good.
9	Moorshedabad, „ 21 „	Nil	Weather—Hot. There is hardly any change to report this week. The recent rainfall has greatly improved the growth of mulberry, indigo, sugarcane, and til (sessamum). The ryots have taken advantage of the rain that fell during the previous week to sow extensively. The rice already sown is shewing above the ground, and looks most promising. The condition of boro rice is good. In thanas Gokurn and Kuliangunge it is nearly ripe. Cholera still prevails more or less throughout the district.
RAJSHAHYE AND COOCH BEHAR DIVN. 10	Dinagepore, „ 20 „	Nil	Weather—The days are hot, but the nights are still cool. The sowings of early rice have commenced. Rice is selling at 24 to 32 seers per rupee.
11	Rajshahye, „ 21 „	Nil	Weather—Very hot. The rice sowings are progressing rapidly. The growing crops are thriving, but a good shower of rain is needed. A few cases of cholera have been reported daily, though the outbreak has not been by any means a severe one.
12	Rungpore, „ 20 „	Nil	The weather has become much warmer. ·18 of rain at Gaibanda and ·9 at Kurigram. The state and prospects of the crops are satisfactory, except that the recent rain has somewhat interfered with weeding. Cholera is said to be bad in Chilmari.
13	Bogra, „ 21 „	Nil	Weather—Very hot. Sugarcane is being planted, and the sowings of jute and aous rice are coming to an end. Cholera and small-pox are somewhat prevalent in the district.
14	Pubna, „ 21 „	Nil	Weather—Seasonable. State and prospects of the crops are satisfactory. There is cholera in and near Shazadpore.

		Central Districts.
Rajshahye and Cooch Behar Divs.	15	Darjeeling, Apl. 21 '77	·24	The long-continued rain has ceased, and there have been several warm sunny days. There have also been high winds and indications of a storm. All the young crops are doing well. The cessation of the rain will allow the sowings to be carried on in the plains.
	16	Julpigoree, „ 21 „	Nil	Weather—Seasonable, but inclining to cool. Nothing particular to report. The weather is highly favorable for the sowings of the early rice.
		Cooch Behar, „ 19 „	1·12	Weather—Early part of the week was very rainy. The rainfall at Mathabhanga has been 2·14 inches, at Dinhatta 2·28 inches, and at Mekligunge 4·72 inches. Since the 14th instant the rain has quite cleared off, and the weather is now very hot. The rainfall has been too much for the early bilra sowings It has tended to drown seeds and to promote the growth of weeds in the fields. Tobacco left standing has also suffered much. Cheena and kaon are looking well everywhere. Public health is good.
		Eastern Districts.
Dacca Divn.	17	Dacca, Apl. 23*'77	1·15	Weather—Fine; warm and sunny since 17th instant. The crops are very favorable. Cholera is bad in thana Nowabgunge.
	18	Furreedpore, „ 21 „	·20	The rainfall at Madaripore has been ·59 of an inch. The rain seems to have ceased for the present, and the weather has become much hotter. The cultivation of lands interrupted by the rain has been resumed. No recent reports of cholera.
	19	Backergunge, „ 19 „	·57	The weather has been more settled than in the previous week, but its unseasonable character still continues. From the interior of the district heavy rain is reported, but it has caused injury to the crops in three thanas only. The crops in five thanas are reported fair, and good in the rest of the district. Ploughing for the aous crop is far advanced. This crop has been sown in some places, but has been injured by the wet weather. All over the district there is, and has been ever since the cyclone and inundation, a great deal of sickness, but fortunately cholera in an epidemic form has not reappeared. Fever and sporadic cholera continue to be present throughout. Everywhere the cattle are, and have been continuously for the last four months, remarkably healthy, which is a rare occurrence.
	20	Mymensingh, „ 20 „	·11	Weather—Seasonable. State and prospects of the crops are favorable.
	21	Tipperah, „ 20 „	1·53	Weather—Cloudy and sultry, with occasional storms and more rain than usual. 2·68 inches of rain at Brahmunbaria. Unless there be a spell of clear hot weather, the ploughing and sowing of the autumn rice will not progress favorably.
Chittagong Divs.	23	Chittagong, „ 19 „	Nil	Weather—Clear and hot. The cold-weather crops are being reaped. Puna aous is thriving well. Preparations are being made for sowing chinnal and boilam aous in some parts of the district. Cholera is reported from some thanas, and small-pox from Sudder Station.
	23	Noakholly, „ 19 „	·07	Weather—Much warmer. Slight showers of rain fell on the 15th and 16th instant. The low lands are not yet fit for the cultivation of early rice, as the water in them has not drained off. The parang and shaitia crops are progressing favorably.
	24	Chittagong Hill Tracts. „ 17 „	Nil	Weather—Very hot throughout the week. Cloudy on the 16th instant. The hill people have begun to burn their jooms.
		Hill Tipperah, „ 18 „	·66	Weather—Getting much warmer. State and prospects of the crops are good.
BEHAR.

	26	Gya, „ 21 „	·14	Weather—Seasonable. No crops on the ground except in Aurungabad, where the rubbee harvest has not been quite finished. A full outturn of all crops except opium is reported from Nowada.
	27	Shahabad, „ 21 „	Slight showers.	Weather—Cloudy and hot, with westerly wind. The rubbee harvest is being threshed. The mango crop is reported not to promise well. Cholera is prevalent in Sasseram, and a special native doctor has been appointed in that sub-division.
	28	Durbhunga „ 21 „	Nil	Weather—Seasonable; strong west wind. The rubbee crops are nearly all harvested.
	29	Mozufferpore, „ 21 „	Nil	Weather—Warm. The harvesting of the rubbee crops is over. These crops in Sursund were slightly damaged by hailstones. There have been some cases of small-pox in Belsund.

Bhagulpore Divn.	32	Monghyr, „ 21 „	Nil	Weather—Warm and fair. The outturn of the rubbee crops is good.
	33	Bhagulpore, „ 23* „	Nil	Weather—Seasonable. The rubbee harvest is complete, with very fair outturn. Prospects of the mango crop are very poor. There is still a good deal of cholera in the town.
	34	Purneah, „ 21 „	Nil	Weather—Hot: west wind. The sowings of the bhadoi crop, or early rice, are going on very satisfactorily. Indigo promises well.
	35	Maldah, „ 21 „	Nil	Weather—Fair; somewhat hot. The crops are as good as before. Cholera is still increasing: 144 deaths have been reported all over the district during the week.
	36	Sonthal Perghs, „ 22 „	Nil	Weather—More hot and dry than at any previous time this year. No crops on the ground. Among children measles followed by dysentery is rather bad in Mohespore.
ORISSA.

	38	Pooree, „ 19 „	Nil	Weather—Fair and seasonable. ·69 of rain at Khoordah. The early dalua crop is being harvested, and the state of the other crops is good The mango crop has proved almost a total failure. Shipment still goes on. Rice is a little cheaper. Cholera has diminished.
	39	Balasore, „ 20 „	·67	Weather—Still very abnormal. Thunder-storms are of daily occurrence. Preparations for sowing continue. Sporadic cholera still causes mortality, but is not increasing
CHOTA NAGPORE.
		South-West Frontier Agency.
	40	Hazareebagh, Apl. 20 '77	Nil	Weather—Seasonable; becoming very hot. No change to report. Ploughing still continues. Public health is good.
	41	Lohardugga, „ 21 „	·25	The weather is gradually becoming more and more seasonable. ·62 of rain at Palamow. There is nothing more to be said about the crops than was reported last week. The prospects of tea have never been so good as this year. The rubbee crops in the Palamow sub-division, and the mohwa crop all over the district, have been considerably damaged by the late heavy rains. No reports of either small-pox or cholera have been received this week.
	42	Singbhoom, „ 20 „	·46	Weather—Seasonable. Mohwa has suffered much from the recent wet weather. No other crops to report about.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c, are deduced from observations made at 6h, 10h., 16h. and 22h. The maximum and minimum temperatures from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched Shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from tables III, IV, and V, of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modification of August's formula.

The direction and movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the raingauge is one foot above the ground.

Commissariat beer ... ... Mds. 12,787 Rs. 9,101

The despatches in the latter half of 1876 showed a marked decrease, and in the three months of the current year there has been a corresponding increase.

Upward coal, increase	Mds. 1,54,455	Rs. 44,818
Downward coal, decrease	„ 1,61,928	„ 21,355
Net increase	„	„ 23,463
„ decrease	„ 7,473	.....

It will be better to take these together, as it will be seen that, as regards weight moved, they nearly balance one another.

As regards the upward coal, the traffic in March 1876 was exceptionally large, rising higher than in any other month in that half-year, or in the corresponding half of 1875 it amounted to 10,620 tons, and the present increase of 5,670 tons is a very large one.

The downward coal traffic in March 1876 was also abnormal, being 1,900 tons a day, against an average of 1,200 tons daily throughout the half-year.

Cotton ... ... Mds. 45,767 Rs. 67,584

This increase, taken with the increases shown in my January and February reports, makes up just 4,000 tons, and brings the cotton traffic of the three months just up to the level of 1875.

Government stores ... ... Mds. 6,716 Rs. 16,160

The bulk of this increase is in arms and ammunition, sent up to Loodiana for the Punjab arsenal.

Grain and pulses ... ... Mds. 10,27,986 Rs 3,69,551

Made up as under—

Wheat	„	3 19 680	„ 2,38 588
Rice	„	3,71,427	„ 60 312
Other cereals	„	2 88,654	„ 54,724
Pulses	„	48,225	„ 15,927

The total weight carried under this head in March 1876 having been 5,63,700 maunds, and the earning Rs. 1,41,000, it will be seen that this increase is on the whole nearly threefold in weight and fourfold in money.

Wheat.—The great bulk of the money increase is naturally in wheat, which has been carried largely to Calcutta for export. About 700 tons only were sent to Bombay Of this increase in wheat about 1,40,000 maunds has been in the traffic from the Punjab, almost all of which goes to Howrah.

About 70,000 is contributed by Cawnpore station alone, while all the principal stations between Cawnpore and Delhi have also forwarded wheat largely.

Rice has been very largely carried from stations in Bengal to Calcutta for shipment to Madras and also from the Allahabad and Benares districts to Bombay, mainly, it is believed, for shipment to the southern Mahratta districts, while the rice traffic to the upper north-west, which usually goes on at this time of year, is very much diminished.

This activity is of course due to the scarcity in Southern and Western India.

Other cereals may be taken as consisting mainly of bajra and similar grains sent to the famine district.

Cawnpore contributed the greater portion of this increase (about 2,10,000 maunds).

Pulses have been largely carried, although the increase under this head is small compared with those in the greater staples above referred to.

Gunny ... ... Mds. 21 922 Rs 20,718

This increase is almost entirely in gunny-bags sent up from Calcutta—mostly new Calcutta-made power-loom bags for the new seed crop, and for carrying on the operations in wheat for export.

Hides ... ... Mds. 19 329 Rs. 10,221

January and February showed decreases in this staple of about maunds 7 000, which March has more than recouped; it is always a fluctuating traffic.

Iron ... ... Mds. 13,399 Rs 9,642

This, too, is a mere fluctuation in trade, and just covers the deficiency shown last month

Jaggree... ... ... Mds. 1,08,200 Rs. 65,300

This traffic still develops; the export is large from the whole district, which lies between Patna and Benares, and the produce finds its way to the far north-west; while the jaggree of the Cawnpore district, which is of inferior quality, gets a market in Central India, in Bombay, and goes in considerable quantities even on to the Baroda line, and as far as Ahmedabad.

The main line traffic in jaggree for the month of March for three years has stood thus—

1875	Tons	6,700	Rs. 33 000
1876	„	8,800	„ 45,000
1877	„	12,800	„ 1,10,000
Salt	Mds.	87,173	„ 26,626

There was a considerable increase (about 22,000 maunds) in the despatch from Howrah, also in the quantities received from the R. S. Railway at Agra and Delhi.

Seeds ... ... Mds 82 940 Rs 25,683

This is an increase of about 20 per cent. over last year, but it is not, I am confident, one-half of the increase that we might have had could we have found the means of dealing with all the traffic that offers.

Firewood ... Mds. 68,128 Rs. 582

This is owing, as in previous months, to the impossibility of providing wagons for the Allahabad firewood traffic.

Piece-goods ... Mds. 2 602 Rs 11,038

Native holidays interfered a little with this trade, as they always do.

There was an increase of over 20,000 maunds in February.

NOTICE TO MARINERS.

HINDOSTAN, WEST COAST, GOA.

Dangers at the Entrance to Marmagao River.

The Sunchi West Shoal, which lies S. S. W. ½ W., nearly 1½ miles from Cabo Monastery, has a dangerous pyramidal rock with only 2 feet on it at low water, on which the sea does not always break.

Amee or Mundahsu Shoal is a rocky patch with 3 fathoms at low water, and situated S. ½ E., 2 miles from Cabo Monastery.

Neither danger is marked on the Admiralty Charts.

Camberi or Buffalo rock, off Marmagao peninsula, in line with the eastern extreme of St. George's islands, will lead a vessel well clear to seaward of these dangers.

Many other rocks are said to exist in this locality; great caution, therefore, is necessary in navigating this part of the coast.

No. 75—The 20th April 1877.—Pay and Allowances.—It has been brought to the notice of the Governor-General in Council that great diversity exists in the rules regarding the travelling allowance of Civil Surgeons. In some cases these officers receive mileage only, in others they draw mileage for journeys and a daily allowance for halts, and under a third system they are permitted to receive, in addition to mileage, a daily allowance for the whole period of absence from head-quarters, including the period for which mileage is drawn. It is sufficiently obvious that the travelling allowance of officers employed in similar capacities should be regulated, as far as local circumstances admit, on a uniform principle. His Excellency in Council is accordingly pleased to lay down the following rules for general adoption :—

I.—The rates of travelling allowance for Civil Surgeons are 8 annas a mile, subject to reduction under general rules for journeys by railway, and Rs 5 a day, except in the Berars, for which a rate of Rs. 6-4-0 a day has been experimentally sanctioned for the current year.

II.—Subject to such restrictions as the Local Government or Administration may see fit to impose as to the duration and frequency of his journeys, a Civil Surgeon is entitled either to the daily allowance or to the mileage for the whole of each period of his absence from his head-quarters on duty, unless the duty is one for which he receives no extra remuneration, in which case he is entitled to the daily allowance for halts and either to that allowance or to the mileage for journeys, provided that both allowances are not drawn for the same day, and that the allowance for journeys shall be payable only when the Civil Surgeon has the sanction of the district officer to his marching instead of going by dâk or railway.

No. 55.—The 20th April 1877.—Separate Revenue.—Post Office.—Mr. E. R. Douglas received charge of the office of Post-Master-General, Bengal, from Mr. T. W. Gribble, B C.S., after-noon, on the 2nd April 1877.
